

THE LIBRARY
COLBY JUNIOR COLLEGE

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2025

https://archive.org/details/bwb_C0-AXA-499

Tottel's Miscellany

LONDON : HUMPHREY MILFORD
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

Tottel's Miscellany

(1557-1587)

EDITED BY

HYDER EDWARD ROLLINS

VOLUME II

THE LIBRARY
COLBY JUNIOR COLLEGE
NEW LONDON, N. H.

CAMBRIDGE

HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

1929

PR 1205 TG
vol. 2

COPYRIGHT, 1929
BY THE PRESIDENT AND FELLOWS OF HARVARD COLLEGE

PRINTED AT THE HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
CAMBRIDGE, MASS., U. S. A.

2260H

corp. 11-13-42 4.69

I had rather than forty shillings I had my book of Songs and Sonnets here.

Shakespeare

PREFACE

THE first volume of my edition of Tottel's Miscellany, containing the text and lists of variant readings, was published in 1928. This second, and final, volume (of Introduction, Notes, and Glossarial Index) was ready for the press at the same time, but has been delayed by my desire to see and collate a new copy of the 1557 edition (C) and a copy of a totally unrecorded edition of 1559 (described below as *D), as well as by the necessarily slow process of reading and correcting the proofs.

In the Introduction and the Notes I have attempted to include only such information as, in my opinion, is essential to a serious and careful study of Tottel's Miscellany — not all that would be necessary for a study of the complete works of Wyatt, Surrey, and Grimald. If I seem to have erred by giving too much information, perhaps I may be allowed to plead that comment and annotation are largely a matter of individual taste, that no two scholars would approach the task of editing with exactly the same views and aims, and that it is generally a less serious fault to give too much than too little. Hence the sources of the poems, though nearly all of them have long been known, are usually reprinted in full, in the belief that most students will find it convenient, even in the case of popular authors like Horace and Petrarch, to have this source-material available for comparison with the miscellany poems based upon it. Hence, too, considerable attention has been paid to the variations between the readings of the early editions of the miscellany and the readings, accessible to but few students, in other printed or manuscript texts. But apart from sources and variants, the annotations are reduced to what seems to me almost a minimum of necessary explanation or illustration.

This edition could not have been made without the cordial coöperation of those libraries, public and private, fortunate enough to own copies of the Songs and Sonnets. For permission to use their copies, and in several instances to reproduce them in whole or in part, I acknowledge my grateful indebtedness to the authorities of the Bodleian, British Museum, Trinity College (Cambridge), and John Rylands libraries in England, and to the libraries of Mr. Carl H. Pforzheimer, Mr. J. P. Morgan, the late Mr. Henry E. Huntington, and Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach in America. I wish also to express my thanks to Miss Belle da Costa Greene, of the Morgan library, to Mr. C. K. Edmonds, of the Huntington library, to Mr. F. S. Ferguson, of London, and to Dr. Rosenbach, Professor John L. Lowes, and Professor Albert S. Borgman for help on certain bibliographical details. The specific aid rendered by a few other friendly scholars, as well as by earlier students of the miscellany, is duly indicated in the following pages.

PREFACE

"Learned Homer sometime sleepeth," writes William Averell, schoolmaster, in the preface to Foure notable Histories (1590), "and the fastest foote sometime slyppeth, the wysest tongue may catch a trypp, and the wariest penne commit a fault, errour is as naturall, as the correction thereof commendable. Wherefore that which remaineth is, I commit my selfe and my labour to thy good lyking, if thou lyke it, commend it, and vse it, if thou dyslike it, amend it, or refuse it." Thus far the Elizabethan schoolmaster's preface may express my own sentiments, although in subsequent lines he is bumptious in an engaging fashion which only a sixteenth-century author would have dared assume and to which none but sixteenth-century readers would have tamely submitted. My chief thanks are due to Miss Addie F. Rowe, an old friend, whose help in checking the almost innumerable details in this second volume, both in manuscript and in proof, it is difficult to acknowledge warmly enough. To avoid errors in dealing with so many details is, as Averell reminds us, impossible; but at least my blunders are the less numerous because of Miss Rowe's patient carefulness and scholarly alertness.

HYDER EDWARD ROLLINS

HARVARD UNIVERSITY,
June 19, 1929.

CONTENTS

TOTTEL'S MISCELLANY : INTRODUCTION	3
I. THE PRINTER, RICHARD TOTTEL	5
II. THE 1557 EDITIONS (ABC)	7
III. ELIZABETHAN EDITIONS (D-I)	20
IV. DOUBTFUL ELIZABETHAN EDITIONS	36
V. EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY EDITIONS (J-M)	37
VI. MODERN EDITIONS (N-V)	44
VII. THE CONTRIBUTORS	65
HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY	67
SIR THOMAS WYATT THE ELDER	75
NICHOLAS GRIMALD	77
UNCERTAIN AUTHORS	79
VIII. THE "EDITOR"	85
IX. THE STYLE	101
X. THE INFLUENCE	107
NOTES	125
GLOSSARIAL INDEX	331

PHOTOGRAPHIC FACSIMILES

	FACING PAGE
TITLE-PAGE OF THE FIRST EDITION 1557 (A)	7
TITLE-PAGE OF THE SECOND EDITION 1557 (B)	9
TITLE-PAGE OF THE SECOND EDITION 1557 (C)	11
TITLE-PAGE OF THE THIRD EDITION 1559 (D)	20
TITLE-PAGE OF THE FOURTH EDITION 1559 (D*)	24
TITLE-PAGE OF THE FIFTH EDITION 1565 (E)	26
TITLE-PAGE OF THE SIXTH EDITION 1567 (F)	29
TITLE-PAGE OF THE SEVENTH EDITION 1574 (G)	30
TITLE-PAGE OF THE EIGHTH EDITION 1585 (H)	32
TITLE-PAGE OF THE NINTH EDITION 1587 (I)	34

TOTTEL'S MISCELLANY

TOTTEL'S MISCELLANY

INTRODUCTION

IN the spring and summer of 1557 martyrs' fires were sending a lurid glare throughout England. The melancholy and monotonous chronicle of John Foxe tells of three men and two women who were burned for their religion at Smithfield, London, on April 12. In rapid succession three men were burned in St. George's Fields, Southwark, in May; two men and five women at Maidstone, Kent, on June 18; six men and four women at Lewes, Sussex, on June 22; and three men and four women at Canterbury on June 30.

To the accompaniment of fire and martyrs' shrieks the epoch-making book correctly known as Songs and Sonnets, but popularly (since the publication of Arber's edition in 1870) as Tottel's Miscellany, made its appearance on June 5. It was concerned chiefly with love; and the rhymes, doleful or airy, in which fictitious lovers wail their supposed woes and recount their supposed joys were eagerly read by the very people who watched the burning of the martyrs — were read so eagerly that in some seven weeks' time two other editions were composed and published. The martyrs' fires died down with the death of the old queen and the coronation of Elizabeth on November 17, 1558, but the poetic fire started by the Songs and Sonnets burned more brightly than ever in Elizabeth's reign. At least seven other editions of the book were then published, practically every early Elizabethan poet accepted it as his model, and in time a wonderful outburst of poetry followed.

Mary I has fared badly at the hands of historians, although in the miscellany itself Grimald calls her "The perelesse princesse, Mary quene" (114.10),¹ and Heywood devotes an entire poem (No. 199) to her praise. As early as 1680 Memoirs of Queen Mary's days (page 3) remarked: "She lieth Buried in Westminster, without any Monument or Remembrance at all; as in her Life She deserved none, so in Her Death

¹ References of this sort, consisting of two or more arabic numerals separated by a period, are to pages and lines in the text of volume I.

INTRODUCTION

Her Memory is rotten; a just Reward for Her who was so cruel and bloody." But the little book of songs and sonnets is a monument or remembrance more lasting than brass or marble.

Tottel's Miscellany is one of the most important single volumes in the history of English literature. If its contents as a whole hardly seem to deserve high praise to-day, still its influence demands that it be treated with genuine respect. As the first printed anthology, it is of the greatest historical importance: the beginning of modern English verse may be said to date from its publication in 1557. Hence it is strange that no adequate edition has been made in modern times, and none of any kind in over fifty years.

No fanfares ushered the book into being. Elizabethan printers, to be sure, met with much harsh criticism for their trickery in misleading the public with puffing title-pages. Barnabe Rich, in Faultes, Faultes, And nothing else but Faultes, 1606, L4, expressed the popular idea:

Yea, the Printer himselfe, to make his booke the more vendible, doth rather desire a glorious Title, than a good Booke: so that our new written Pamphlets of these times, are not much vnlike to a poore Inne in a Countrey towne, that is gorgeously set foorth with a glorious signe; but being once entred into the house, a man shall find but cold intertainment, as well of homely lodging, as of bad fare.

But, although he had perhaps spent some time in assembling the poems, or in having them made fit for the cultivated ear, and although in his preface he asserts that they could vie on equal terms with the poetry of Italy,¹ Tottel did not attempt to give his book typographical distinction or beauty. The title-page is a model of reserve and simplicity, — a model carefully avoided by every later miscellany, — and it is probable that Tottel himself was surprised by the enthusiasm that greeted his little volume. "Il buòn vino," as the proverb has it, "non ha bisogno di frasca." Without any of the typographical allurements that helped later publishers of miscellanies to dispose of their books, Tottel had the satisfaction of selling the entire first edition and of publishing two others in the brief interval between June 5 and July 31, 1557. Here is a book that resembles a country inn poorly set forth with a cheap sign but equipped inside with splendid entertainment!

¹ His preface was widely imitated in later collections of poetry, like The Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576) and A Handful of Pleasant Delights (1584). Especially numerous were Richard Jones's prefaces. Thus his address "To the Gentlemen Readers" in R. S.'s Phyllis and Flora (1598) begins: "Courtuous Gentlemen, according to my accustomed manner, which is, to acquaint you with any Booke, or matter I print," etc.

TOTTEL'S LIFE AND PUBLICATIONS

I. THE PRINTER, RICHARD TOTTEL

Richard Tottel (or Tothill),¹ born at Exeter about 1530, was a printer of distinction, a charter member of the Stationers' Company (of which he became under-warden in 1561, upper-warden in 1567, 1568, 1574, master in 1578, 1584), and the most notable publisher of law-books of his time. He began to publish about 1550. His sign was the Hand and Star in Fleet Street as early as 1553, and he is said to have secured his patent for law-books in that year. The patent was renewed in 1556 for a period of seven years, and on January 12, 1559, was granted to him for life. In 1554 he printed a folio edition of John Lydgate's Fall of Princes, in 1555 he published Stephen Hawes's Pastime of Pleasure. From his press came also Thomas Tusser's rhymes on husbandry and "huswifery" (1557 to 1577) and the works of Sir Thomas More (1557). He printed or published, alone or with others, many important non-legal books, including Surrey's translation of the second and fourth books of the Aeneid (1557), Arthur Brooke's Romeus and Juliet (1562), Richard Grafton's Chronicles of England (1562 to 1572), William Painter's Palace of Pleasure (1566, 1567), and Sir Thomas North's Dial of Princes (1568). This is a distinguished list; but Tottel's best printing is to be found in his law-books, which were extremely numerous.

To most people, however, he is known for the Songs and Sonnets, and his immortality is more or less secured by the title of "Tottel's Miscellany" now nearly always applied to the work. Of it he issued some seven editions that survive, and perhaps others have disappeared without leaving a trace. The editions later than 1557 injure his reputation for care and accuracy. Each so far surpasses its predecessors in blunders and corruptions that the later editions are practically unintelligible unless compared with the texts of 1557. Such carelessness Jasper Heywood would have us believe typical. In the preface to his translation of ¹ Sketches of his life and publications are in Bibliographica, III (1897), 378-384, by H. R. Plomer; in the Dictionary of National Biography, by Sir Sidney Lee; and in The Library (Transactions of the Bibliographical Society, 4th series), VIII (1927), 199-232, by H. J. Byrom.

INTRODUCTION

Seneca's Thyestes (1560) Heywood complains bitterly of the errors introduced into his translation of Troas (1559) by Tottel. Heywood claims that he himself made the necessary proof-corrections and that, when they were ignored, he said to Tottel, within these doores of thyne, J make a vowe shall neuer more come any worke of myne.

This threat seems to have had no effect on Tottel's happiness or prosperity, and modern scholars¹ have exonerated him from blame in even this instance.

But all the Elizabethan editions of the miscellany could well have been prefaced by such apologetic verses as in "The Printer to the courteous Reader" Robert Walley affixed to the 1581 edition of Barnabe Rich's The straunge and wonderfull aduentures of Dō Simonides:

The faultes are myne, that passed haue the Presse,
The praise is his, that tooke the paine to penne.

The printers, not the authors, are to blame for most of the corruptions introduced into the texts, although some were no doubt previously made by copyists. More and more errors crowded into each edition after 1557, and for them Richard Turner's Nosce Te, (Humors.), 1607, F₄, provides a remedy:

Reader, some faults (by reason of my absence) escaped by the Printer: I intreat you, if you will, to excuse: if not, correct: the first, if kind; you may: the second, if curious; you must: and easily. If it bee in the ende of the verse, by comparing the meeter: if elsewhere, the sence.

Such remedies, although the authors did not suggest them, must be applied to the text of Tottel's Miscellany.

The last two known editions of the Songs and Sonnets — those of 1585 and 1587 — were issued by J. Windet and R. Robinson respectively, though Tottel lived until July, 1593. He had for some years been in ill health, as a result of which he retired from business to live in Pem-

¹ De Vocht, in his Jasper Heywood (Bang's Materialien zur Kunde des älteren Englischen Dramas, xli [1913], pp. xxxix-xl, and cf. pp. 104-105), declares that Tottel in the reprint of Troas corrected errors that Heywood failed to detect in the proofs, and that the poet, not the printer, was to blame for the errors that remained. But see R. B. McKerrow's explanation in Transactions of the Bibliographical Society, xii (1914), 261.

SONGES AND SONETTES,
written by the ryght honorable Lorde Henry Howard late Earle of Surrey, and other.

Apud Richardum Tottel.
1557.
Cum privilegio.

Arch. G. f. 1200

1

THE FIRST EDITION (1557) A

brokeshire. His last publications were registered at Stationers' Hall in January, 1586; whence it would appear that he had earlier made over his rights in the miscellany to Windet, who in turn assigned them to Robinson. After Tottel's death his patent for law-books was granted (in 1594) to Charles Yetsweirt; his Fleet Street shop passed in 1598 to the printer-publisher John Jaggard.

II. THE 1557 EDITIONS (ABC)¹

A. FIRST EDITION 1557 (JUNE 5)

SONGES AND SONETTES, / written by the ryght honorable Lorde / Henry Haward late Earle of Sur= / rey, and other. / Apud Richardum Tottel. / 1557. / Cum priuilegio. /

[Colophon] Imprinted at London in flete strete / within Temple barre, at the sygne of the / hand and starre, by Richard Tottel / the fift day of Iune. / An. 1557. / Cum priuilegio ad impri- / mendum folum. /

Collation: 4°, sigs. A–Dd⁴, unpagged. [A1] title: [A1^v] “The Printer to the / Reader.”: A2–D4 Surrey's poems, with “SVRRET.” at the foot of D4: [D4^v–M2^v] Wyatt's poems, with “T. VVYATE the elder.” at the end of the text on [M2^v], the lower portion of which is blank: M3–[P4^v] Grimald's poems, with “Songes written by Nicolas Grimald.” at the top of M3 and “N. G.” at the end of the text on [P4^v], the lower portion of which is blank: Q1–[Cc3] poems by anonymous writers, with the heading “Vncertain auctours.” at the top of Q1: [Cc3^v–Dd1^v] additional poems by Surrey, with the heading “Other Songes and Sonettes written by / the earle of Surrey.” on [Cc3^v]: DD2–[Dd3] additional poems by Wyatt, with the heading “Other Songes and sonettes written / by fir Thomas wiat the elder” on DD2 under the head-line, and “FINIS.” at the end of [Dd3]: [Dd3^v] colophon: [Dd4] missing, probably blank.

Running-titles: The full running-title “Songes and Sonettes.” appears on A2. Thereafter normally “Songes” appears on the verso of each leaf, “and Sonettes” on the recto, each sometimes with, sometimes without, a period; they are displaced by section-headings (see the “Collation” above) on M3, Q1, Cc3^v, but not on DD2. “Songes” occurs four times (M4, O1, O3, P3) on the recto, “Songes.” eleven times (D1, D2, N1–N4, O2, O4, P1, P2, P4); “and Sonettes.” appears twice (D1, D2) on the verso.

¹ In the following bibliographical descriptions of A–I no attempt has been made at keeping the exact typography of the originals in such matters as “swash” letters, since photographic reproductions of the title-pages themselves are included. The texts of the prefaces, poems, and “tables,” as well as the key-words, of A–I may be assumed to be in black-letter type unless a specific statement to the contrary is made.

INTRODUCTION

Folio-numbers: None.

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are If (F1^v) for In, I am (L3) for I can, Or (M4^v) for Oh, Nothing (T1) for Thus. No key-word occurs on Z3^v or at the end of sections devoted to particular authors (D4, M2^v, P4^v, Cc3, Dd1^v, Dd3).¹

Signatures: The first three leaves (except for A1, the title-page) are signed in signatures A, B, E, L, S, V, X, Z, Aa, Bb, with Bb3 misprinted B3; only the first two are signed in H, Y, Cc, Dd (printed Dd.i., as usual, but with the variation of DD.ii.); while all four are signed in C, D, F, G, I, K, M-R, T, with K4 misprinted K3. The numeral ".i." is omitted on the first leaf of B, E, F, M, P.

Copy: Only one copy of A is known to be in existence, that in the Bodleian, with the shelf-mark Arch. G.f.12 (1). (Earlier shelf-marks were Tanner 150 and 8°S.193. Art.) It was bequeathed by Thomas Tanner, Bishop of St. Asaph, who died in December, 1735. The volume — formerly bound with several other books but separately rebound in March, 1926 — is in fairly good condition. It has, to be sure, been much cut down, so that it measures only about 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ by 3 $\frac{7}{8}$ inches; many head-lines are slightly cropped, the first line on Q1^v (122.2) is almost split in two because the paper was wrinkled in the form during printing, and the title-page and the last two leaves are mended; but the text of the poems is legible and almost perfect throughout. The printing is fairly good, perhaps better than that of any subsequent edition: typographical errors are not especially numerous; but in No. 75 one line is omitted, and hence the sonnet-form of the poem is ruined; and in No. 187 a line is omitted after 145.36.

Contents: A contains 271 poems, attributed as follows:

To Surrey (Nos. 1-36, 262-265)	40
To Wyatt (Nos. 37-127, 266-271)	97
To Grimald (Nos. 128-167)	40
To Uncertain Authors (Nos. 168-261)	94

Of these poems 30 by Grimald (Nos. 128-132, 135-148, 153, 155-164) appear in A only; the remainder are in every subsequent edition (B-I).

¹ It seems to me unnecessary in the descriptions of B-I to list key-words that vary in spelling (or in the omission of a hyphen) from words of the text they point to. For completeness, however, I give those of A: Such (A3) for Suche; Ye (G4) for Yee; Since (G4^v) for Sins; A renouncyng (I2^v) for A renouncing; He (P3^v) for Hee; Howe (T4^v) for How; Well (V4) for Wel; Saye (X3) for Say; Manhod (Z2) for Manhode; Dothe (Aa2^v) for Doth.

SONGES AND SONETTES,

written by the right honorable Lorde

Henry Haward late Earle of Sur-

rey, and other.

Apud Ricardum Tottel.

Cum priuilegio ad impri-mendum solum.

.1557.

THE SECOND EDITION (1557) B

B. SECOND EDITION 1557 (JULY 31), FIRST SETTING

SONGES AND SONETTES,/ written by the right honorable Lorde/
Henry Haward late Earle of Sur=/ rey, and other./ Apud Ricardum
Tottel./ Cum priuilegio ad impri=/ mendum solum./ .1557./

[Colophon] 20 Imprinted at London in flete/ strete within Temple barre, at the/ sygne of the hand and starre,/ by Richard Tottell/ the .xxxi. day of July./ An. 1557./ Cum priuilegio ad impri=/ mendum
solum./

Collation: 4°, sigs. A–Gg⁴. [A1] title: [A1^v] “To the reder.”: A2–[E2^v] Surrey’s poems, with “SVRREY.” at the foot of [E2^v]: [E3–N1^v] Wyatt’s poems, with “T. VVYATE the elder.” at the foot of [N1^v]: N2–Ff1 poems by anonymous writers, with “Songes and Sonettes of/ vncertain auctours.” at the top of N2: Ff1–[Gg1^v] Grimald’s poems, with “¶ Songes written by N. G.” on Ff1 (after four lines of text) and “N. G.” at the end of the text on [Gg1^v]: Gg2–[Gg3^v] “The table,” or index of first lines, followed by “FINIS.” (in black letter) at the end of [Gg3^v]: [Gg4] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: The full running-title “Songes and Sonettes” appears on the recto of A2. Thereafter the normal heading for the recto (except on N2: see the “Collation” above) is “and Sonettes” (with or without a period), though it appears as “and Sonnets.” on A3, as “and Sonnettes.” on B1, B2, and as “and Sone”¹ on C3. In many of these head-lines the final s is defective, particularly on Ff3^v.² “Songes” (followed by a period on A2^v, C1^v, C2^v 3) is on the verso throughout. In the final signatures the running-title is “The table” (with the misprint “Tbe” on Gg2–Gg2^v).

Folio-numbers run from “Fo.2.” on A2 to “Fo.117.” on Gg1, but leaves 3, 5, 7, 9–12 are unmarked by either prefix or number; furthermore, 5.2 is misprinted for 25, 31 for 33, 33 for 35. The prefix is sometimes “Fol.”, like “Fo.” with or without a period about equally, and the period is sometimes omitted after the numeral.⁴

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are Yo (C2^v) for Your, You (I3) for Then, Doe (Ff2) for Do- or Doway. There are no key-words on E2^v, N1^v, Ee1, Gg1^v.⁵

¹ In the Huntington copy “and Sonettes.” appears correctly on C3.

² These defects are not in the Huntington copy.

³ In the Huntington copy it appears on C3^v, not C2^v.

⁴ The Huntington copy agrees with the foregoing description, except that folios 9–11 are numbered (only the 12 being absent) and that 56 has an inverted 5. The prefix is “fo.” on O1–O4 (with the period out of position on O4 because of the misprinted 56).

⁵ The Huntington copy differs only in having Your on C2^v, Doe [sic] on Ff2, and Why (an error for Whych) on O4^v.

INTRODUCTION

Signatures: Normally only the first two leaves of each signature (except A1, the title-page) are signed; but irregularity is introduced by the signing also of A3, C3, C4, Cc3, Ee3, and Ff3, and by the absence of the usual figure i on the first leaf of C and Dd.¹

Copies: Two copies of B are known,² — that in the British Museum (Grenville 11170) and that in the Huntington library.³ The former, which I have used, is in fair condition, though its margins were once covered with scribbles that have left some traces after being washed.

Contents: B contains 280 poems, attributed as follows:

To Surrey (Nos. 1-36, 262-265)	40
To Wyatt (Nos. 37-81, 83-127, 266-271)	96
To Grimald (Nos. 133, 134, 149-152, 154, 165-167)	10
To Uncertain Authors (Nos. 82, 168-261, 272-310)	134

Arrangement: The order of the poems has been completely changed. Thus No. 243 is inserted among Surrey's poems, but with the clear statement that it is an answer by an uncertain author to Surrey's No. 26; while No. 82 has been moved from Wyatt's poems to those of the uncertain authors. Other poems, like Nos. 234 and 261, have been transferred (with new titles) so as to follow the poems they answer. The additional poems of Wyatt and Surrey (Nos. 262-271) that in A appeared at the end of the volume are inserted among the other poems by those writers. More striking still, 30 poems by Grimald are dropped, the 10 that remain are transferred to the end of the text, and Grimald's name is displaced by his initials "N. G." To compensate for the omis-

¹ The Huntington copy differs considerably (cf. Greg's comment on p. 14, below). Thus C2 and C3 are misprinted as B2 and B3; no leaf is signed in signature O; P1 is misprinted as H1; T2 and Y1 appear with the unusual punctuation "T.ii," and "Y, i."; Y2 is omitted; "Dd." appears instead of the normal signature "Dd.i." There are a few other variants in punctuation as well.

² It may be worth noting that in the sale-catalogue of Joseph Haslewood's library issued by R. H. Evans in December, 1833, lot 1254 is characterized as "Surrey's Songs, the original edition, very imperfect." This was presumably a copy of either B or C. It was bought by Thomas Thorpe for four shillings.

³ Formerly owned by Sir William Tite, at whose sale (lot 3065) in 1874 it was bought for £46 by the Rowfant library of Frederick Locker (afterwards Locker-Lampson). On April 28, 1905, it passed into the possession of the late Mr. W. A. White, of Brooklyn, who in turn sold it to Mr. Huntington in October, 1923. When Tite owned it (see p. 37 n. 3, below) the book lacked its imprint-leaf and apparently the date on the title-page; but these defects have since been remedied. It contains the book-plate of Locker-Lampson and various manuscript notes by him, Mr. White, and Dr. Rosenbach.

¶ SONGES AND SONETTES
written by the right honorable Lorde
Henry Haward late Earle of Surrey, and other.

Apud Richardum Tottell.
Cum privilegio ad imprimendum
solum. 1557.

THE SECOND EDITION (1557) C

sions from Grimald, 39 new poems by uncertain authors (Nos. 272-310) are inserted. The 280 poems are printed in the following order: Nos. 1-26, 243 (by an uncertain author), 262, 264, 265, 27-31, 263, 32-81, 83-113, 266-271, 114-127, 168-177, 179-201, 234, 202-233, 235-241, 244-252, 259, 260, 272-288, 255, 256, 253, 289, 257, 258, 254, 290, 178, 261, 291-296, 82, 242, 297-310, 133, 134, 149-152, 154, 165-167.

The contents and the order of poems in B are exactly followed in C-I; the page-divisions are identical with those of C-G.

C. SECOND EDITION 1557 (JULY 31), SECOND SETTING

¶ SONGES AND SONETTES / written by the right honorable Lorde / Henry Haward late Earle of Sur= / rey, and other. / Apud Richardum Tottell. / Cum priuilegio ad imprimendum / solum. 1557. /

[Colophon] Imprinted at London in fletestrete / within Temple barre, at the signe of the / hand and starre, by Richard Tot= / till, the .xxxi. day of Iuly. / Anno. 1557. / Cum priuilegio ad impri= / mendum solum. /

Collation: 4°, sigs. A-Gg⁴. [A1] title: [A1^v] "¶ To the reader.": A2-[E2^v] Surrey's poems, with "SVRREY." at the foot of [E2^v]: [E3-N1^v] Wyatt's poems, with "T. VVYATE the elder." at the foot of [N1^v]: N2-Ff1 poems by anonymous writers, with "Songes and Sonettes of / vncertain auctours." at the head of N2: Ff1-[Gg1^v] Grimald's poems, with "¶ Songes written by N. G." on Ff1 (after four lines of text) and "N. G." at the end of the text on [Gg1^v]: [Gg2-Gg3^v] "The table.", followed by "FINIS." (in black letter): [Gg4] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: The running-title is regularly "and Sonettes" for the recto from A2 to Gg1 (except on N2: see the "Collation" above); it is usually followed by a period,¹ but in five cases (C3, C4, E1, K1, K2) apparently by a comma; it is misprinted "and Sonettes." on A3.² "Songes" appears on the verso from A2^v to Gg1^v. The head-line of Gg2-Gg3^v is "The table."

Folio-numbers run from "Fo. 2." on A2 to "Fo 117." on Gg1; but leaves 3, 5, 7 are unmarked in any way and the 15 is illegible.³ Furthermore, 76 is misprinted for 79, 116 for 114, and 114 for 116. Except for a very few cases of ¹ The exceptions are on the first two leaves of R, X, Bb, Ff, and in the Rosenbach copy also N1.

² This misprint is not in the Rosenbach copy.

³ The 15 is correct in the Rosenbach copy.

INTRODUCTION

"Fo" the prefix is uniformly "Fo."; and about half of the figures are followed by periods.

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are You (I3) for Then, whic (O4^v) for Which,¹ On (Ee4^v) for One, Doe (Ff2) for Do- or Doway. No key-words appear on E2^v, N1^v, Gg1^v, Gg2.

Signatures: Normally only the first two leaves of each signature (except A1, the title-page) are signed, but irregularity is introduced by the signing of A3, B3, C3, C4, by the absence of a signature on Gg2, and in C. ii, Dd. ii, and Ff. i by the unusual punctuation.

Copies: Three copies of C are known, that in the Capell collection, Trinity College, Cambridge, that in the library of Mr. Carl H. Pforzheimer, Purchase, New York, and that now owned by the Rosenbach Company of New York and Philadelphia. I have used the first but have also consulted the third, on the title-page of which an old owner has written "Rob^t. Brome Lichfield."

Contents and Arrangement: In its contents and order of poems C is identical with BD+; its page-divisions are exactly like those of BD-G.

No information about Tottel's Miscellany is given in the Stationers' Register (except for one entry on February 18, 1583); for the Stationers' Company had been but recently incorporated in 1557, and no attempt at securing entries of all new publications in the official register seems to have been made so early. There is, indeed, no positive proof that A was the first edition, although the evidence tends to make that assumption highly probable.²

A bears the date of June 5 in its colophon. Tottel's edition of Surrey's Aeneid followed shortly, with the date of June 21. Edward Arber assumed that work on the latter was not begun till A had been finished, that the composition of the Aeneid took sixteen days, and that, at a similar speed of composition, A must have been begun about April 11. There is, however, as Dr. Greg points out,³ no reason why work on both books may not have been proceeding at the same time; while if B and C were, as has been suggested, set up almost simultaneously, a quicker rate of composition was possible in Tottel's shop than Arber allowed for.

Fifty-six days after the date given in the colophon of A the entire

¹ The key-word is whi in the Rosenbach copy.

² See p. 20, below.

³ "Tottel's Miscellany," The Library, n. s., v (1904), 123.

DUPLICATE SETTING OF B AND C

first edition had been disposed of, the type distributed, and a second edition, thoroughly revised, set in type and printed. This edition (BC) has a colophon with the date of July 31, 1557.

In the introductory notes to his edition (pages xi-xii) Arber remarks:

The two known copies — one in [sic] Grenville Collection, British Musuem [sic]; and the other in the Capel Collection, Trinity College, Combridge [sic]; vary in some minutiæ from each other: but it is incredible that there should be two distinct editions finished by the same printer, on the same day. [Mr. W. A. Wright has collated the first Impression of this Reprint, with the Capell copy. The variations from the Grenville copy, in spelling, are occasional in the bulk of the book, but very numerous in the 39 additional poems.¹ Nothing but a comparison of the five or six earliest editions can solve this riddle. Meanwhile we can but believe that one or other of these copies has either a wrong title page or colophon.]

Now Bohn, editing Lowndes's Bibliographer's Manual in 1863,² and Hazlitt in 1867³ had called attention to variations between B and C, the latter asserting that they showed B and C to be distinct editions. Dr. Greg, in the essay already referred to, remarks (page 119): "It is sufficiently evident that Professor Arber had never examined the question for himself, and that when differing from these authorities and pronouncing their statements 'incredible,' he was relying upon purely à priori considerations. Now, 'incredible' as it may at first appear that there should be two distinct editions, bearing an identical date, and issuing from the same printing-house, such is nevertheless undoubtedly the case. . . . Either we have to do," he adds (pages 120-121), "with two successive editions, one a close reprint of the other,⁴ or else with a work set up in duplicate."

As for duplicate settings, he explains (pages 122-123), "the custom was most likely due to some trades' union regulation for the benefit of compositors. It was not, so far as I am aware, till nearly thirty years later that an ordinance of the Company limited the number of copies

¹ This statement is not true. The spelling of B and C varies greatly, but it varies as much in the poems common to ABC as in those added in BC. The italicized passage does not occur in Arber's 1870 reprints (from which the first part of my quotation is taken) but was added to later issues.

² v, 2547-2548.

³ Hand-Book to Early English Literature, p. 585.

⁴ This, as I show below, was actually the case, though for reasons explained on p. 20 I have kept to the ordinary classification of B and C as duplicate settings.

INTRODUCTION

to be printed from one setting to 1250 for ordinary works;¹ but the ordinance very possibly did nothing more than give binding force to a generally recognized custom. This would necessitate any work for which a large number of copies were required being set up several times over in rapid succession, and it would be quite likely that if sufficient type were available two settings might be worked off simultaneously. It is even possible that it might be set up in duplicate sheet by sheet and worked. That the second edition of Tottel's Miscellany is a case of duplicate setting I have no doubt."

Dr. Greg observes (pages 126-127) that "there is no single sheet common both to the Grenville and Capell copies." He shows also that the Rowfant (now the Huntington) copy of B was printed from the same setting as the Grenville copy. "In a few cases . . . the signatures differ both from the Grenville and Capell copies. It is, however, significant that in all these cases the signature in the Rowfant copy is incorrect,² and the variations can therefore be accounted for by supposing the latter to be an early impression from forms which underwent correction before the Grenville copy was printed." Finally, "the misprinted signatures of the Rowfant copy . . . would be far more likely to occur in the original setting than in a mere reprint, and we should therefore be justified in supposing the setting represented by that and the Grenville copies to be earlier than that represented by the Capell." This last remark Dr. Greg characterizes as a conjecture. It can, however, be proved to be a fact.

To make the situation clear: B and C have identical contents, identical page-divisions, and almost identical verse-arrangement, but differ widely in spelling and punctuation. The problem, then, resolves itself to this: (1) were B and C set independently from A? (2) was B set from A, C from B? (3) or was C set from A, and B from C? The first query can be ruled out at once: the close agreement of B and C in page-division and line-arrangement shows the impossibility of their having been set separately and independently from A. B and C drop 30 poems, add 39 others, and upset the order of the 241 poems which they have in common with A. With changes of this sort it is inconceivable that two compositors working simultaneously from copies of A could have produced two texts so close to each other in appearance and arrangement. This conclusion will become more certain in the light of the evidence that follows.

¹ For this ordinance see Arber's Transcript of the Stationers' Registers, II, 43; V, liii. For further information see Greg, "The Decrees and Ordinances of the Stationers' Company, 1576-1602," The Library, VIII (1928), 414.

² See p. 10 n. 1, above.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF B AND C

That B was set from C or C from B can easily be proved. All the editions after A conclude with a "Table," or index of first lines, which it would have been useless for me to reprint because it does not index the text of A, the basis of my own edition. Nevertheless, a study of the Tables in B and C is indispensable, because it proves conclusively that one was printed directly from the other. To make the Table the indexer had before him the printed pages of B or C (at the present stage of the argument, no matter which), and he merely turned one page after another, jotting down in the order of their appearance the first lines that begin with "A," "B," and so on. Then, assigning to each line a folio-number, he gave his index to the compositor without having paid any attention to alphabetizing. Hence under each letter from "A" to "Y" the folio-numbering is progressive, not shifting back and forth as would have been the case if a correct alphabetical order had been followed. To make this point clear, the Table of B begins as follows:

A Las so al things now.	5
Although I had a chek	10
As oft as I behold	12
Auising the bright	22
Alas madam for steling.	23
Accused though I be.	29
All in thy loke my life	34

And to skip to the end of the "T's":

The vertue of Vlisses	100
To falser eport	100
To walke on doutfull	101
To trust the fained face	102
The blinded boy.	103
The wisest way, thy bote	104
The auncient time com.	113
Therefore when restlesse.	116
The long loue that in my

INTRODUCTION

Such a crude (but then customary) method of indexing necessarily led to the immediate detection of faulty folio-numbers in the text. In B, for example, folios 25, 33, 35, in C folios 79, 114, 116, are incorrectly numbered; but in the Table of each edition the poems on these folios are referred to by their correct numbers — a fact that fails to disclose from which edition the Table was compiled. The Tables, however, are exactly alike in the arrangement of pages and lines, as could not have happened, except by a miraculous coincidence, had not one been set from the other.

Still other proofs that one of the Tables is a mere reprint of the other can be given. Thus, in both, No. 81 is indexed as "If euer man" instead of "If euery man"; No. 281 is in both referred to as on folio 95, whereas (since the verso and recto are never indicated) the reference should be 94; No. 217 is in both entered as "O temerous tauntresse" instead of "tauntres"; No. 309 is in both referred to as "Resigne ye dames" instead of "Resigne you dames"; No. 86 begins in both texts with "Once" but in both Tables with "Ones"; in both Tables No. 307 begins with "You" instead of "Ye"; in both "Set me wheras the sun" (No. 12) follows "So cruel prison" (No. 15), although the order should be reversed because No. 15 follows No. 12 in the text; "Stand who so list" should in the Tables, according to the texts of both B and C, begin with "Stond"; "The stormes are past" (No. 34) is on folio 18 of both texts, and hence in the Tables should precede "The fansie which that I" (No. 36), which is on folio 18^v; "The longer life" (No. 174) should in both Tables read "The lenger life", and "Wiat restes here" (No. 31) should in both read "W. resteth here"; in both Tables the first line of No. 13 is printed in the abbreviated form, "I neuer saw my L. lay." Finally, in both Tables "The long loue that in my" (No. 37) is added at the end of the "T's" with no folio-reference at all; it should have been on the preceding page with the folio-number 19, before the 19 already there.¹ These correspondences could not possibly have occurred, nor could the exact agreement in abbreviated words and the tolerably close agreement in spelling and punctuation, if one Table had not been set from the other. They prove either that B followed C or that C followed B; and, since in B there are four misprints ("The flicking fame", "To falser eport", and, on Gg2 and Gg2^v, "Tbe" in the running-title) not found in C, it might perhaps not be unreasonable to assume that C followed B, correcting these errors.

¹ It is provided with a folio-number for the first time in H, though it remains at the end of the "T's." In I it remains there still, but with the folio-number changed from 19 to 108 merely because it follows 107. Its position in BC indicates that the indexer noticed the omission of the line after his Table had been paged, and that he added it at the end of the "T's" because there was no room for it at the beginning, where it belongs. The folio-numbers in the Tables of BC, by the way, are almost identical from beginning to end in arrangement, faulty spacing, and even in slight peculiarities of impression.

EVIDENCE OF THE TABLES

As to spelling, the variations in the two Tables are comparatively slight and unimportant, consisting chiefly in the presence or absence of a final e, in the use of a single or a double consonant, or in the interchange of the letters y and i. It is significant that in many cases the form common to the Tables differs from that common to the B and C texts. For example, giltles (in the texts) appears in both Tables (under the letter "G," index-folio 13) as giltlesse, breast as brest ("I," 45), fawlcon as falcon ("L," 35), birde as bird ("L," 88), Myne as Mine ("M," 46); Once as Ones ("O," 33, "Y," 85), tauntres as tauntresse ("O," 74), goonne as gonne ("T," 29).¹

Further evidence that one text was set up from the other is to be seen in the fact that both B and C have the incorrect key-word You for Then at I3 (an error that persists through F); both have signatures A3, C3, C4 marked in violation of the usual scheme;² both (see the Variant Readings) have a curious transposition of the phrases of A in lines 30-31, page 143; and both omit the same folio-numbers, 3, 5, 7.

Now which text served as copy for the other? The answer need not be left to assumption or conjecture. A comparison of the pages of ABC shows that B is much closer to A in spelling and arrangement of titles than is C. This fact, when reinforced by a line-by-line comparison of the two hundred forty-one poem-titles, proves clearly that B was set from A. So exact is the agreement of titles in position and line-arrangement (as in Nos. 13, 26, 50, 54, 55, 59, 60, 71, 73-75, 77, 124, 174, 179, 181, 192, 224, 225, 236, 264, 270, all of which in C vary slightly in arrangement) as to make it certain that the compositor of B worked with his eye on A.¹ That C was set from B is shown by the various instances in which titles of poems — especially of those following a different order from that in A, or of poems not in A — agree in arrangement in B and C. For example, the titles of Nos. 113, 121, 127, 133, 165, 166, 172, 201–203 are arranged alike in BC but differently in A. In the thirty-nine new poems the titles of all but nine (Nos. 275, 277–279, 298–301, 310) are arranged exactly alike in B and C, and even in those nine differ but slightly.² Three or four titles (like Nos. 4, 62, 64) have in the three editions small variations of arrangement which are obviously due to mere chance. Such variations would be likely to occur even if one were deliberately trying to make an exact reprint; they could be avoided only by the most painstaking proof-correction.

¹ In many cases an old spelling that stands in the Table of B has been modernized in that of C: shold, for example, is changed to should ("A," 35), shal to shall ("A," 112), Britle to Brittle ("B," 5), ded to dead ("L," 89), wold to would ("T," 75), fansie to fancy ("W," 100, though in both texts it is fansy). Occasionally the opposite change occurs.

² C also has B3; but it does not, like B, print Cc3, Fc3, Ff3, perhaps a sign that C, following B, corrected these deviations from the rule.

INTRODUCTION

It is significant, too, that in mechanical details C is more consistent than B, as may be expected when a printed text is used as the copy. Thus in the signatures, — which after the first three letters are normally signed in twos but which in B are managed somewhat irregularly (see page 10, above), — although the compositor of C, with his eye on the sheets of B, not only signs his own *A*₃, *C*₃, *C*₄, as B does, but in his normalizing zeal also signs *B*₃ (as B does not), yet he does not follow B in signing *C*₃, *E*₃, *F*₃. So, too, with the folio-numbers. Although C makes blunders of its own (see page 11, above), it corrects the numbers misprinted by B, normalizes to "*F*₀." the erratic prefixes in the foliation of B, and restores some of the numbers (9–12, but not 3, 5, 7) omitted by B. But in the use of periods after the folio-numbers C is quite as irregular as B.

The point needs no further laboring. It should be noted, however, that the thirty-nine new poems in B were necessarily set from manuscript; in these C, following the printed text of B, has but a comparatively small number of variations of diction, and (though Arber asserts the contrary¹) no extraordinary number of variations in orthography. It is significant, further, that in spite of the rearranged and added poems B keeps wherever possible the page-arrangement of A. According to the custom of the time, A itself (and, for that matter, B-I as well) was set directly into page, not galley, proof. Hence the repetition in A, at the top of signature L₄, of two lines of the text from the bottom of signature L₃.²

¹ In the title of No. 13 in A the word alway has a slight hiatus between l and w which recurs (though it is perhaps due only to the type) in B but not in C; and the same thing is true of the slight gap between w and i in with in the title of No. 71. Furthermore, in the title of No. 174 A has stat, with the final t scarcely legible: B emends this to state, while C (and hence D+) reads correctly state/ of. In the title of No. 150 and in many similar cases B changes the y's to i's, and C usually follows suit.

² Four of the nine titles (Nos. 278, 299, 300, 310) and several not enumerated above (Nos. 272, 280, 281, 283, 293, 294, 297, 303, 304, 307) show slight variations in spelling, punctuation, or capitalization. In one case, No. 301, C obviously changes the arrangement so as to escape the awkward division in B of passi/ons.

THE PRIORITY OF B OVER C

Now, although B unquestionably preceded and served as the copy for C, an extremely odd fact remains to be noticed — namely, that B has a number of unique readings (compare the list of Variant Readings, as in lines 4, 8, 9, 11, 16, on page 9, and lines 6, 8, 23, on page 12), which C discarded in favor of the old readings of A. In the new poems (Nos. 272-310) B and C on the whole agree closely in diction, but even they have (as at 243.19, 247.15, 250.28, 254.16) a few readings that vary. That B was set from a carefully revised text of A is shown not only by its unique readings but also by the text of No. 200, which in B is printed with its final letter capitalized to complete the acrostic. It is possible that, when he came to this poem, the compositor of C failed to observe the acrostic, for he eliminated both the final capital and the space (which appears also in A) after the initial letter of each line. On the other hand, it may be that the "editor" of C intentionally removed these obvious indications of the connection of No. 200 with Edward Somerset, just as he removed the name Garret ("Fair Geraldine") which in B had been inserted at 12.23. Both B and C made evident efforts to increase the impersonality of A, as in the substitution of R. for Ryce and Rise (192.12, 193.21) and of Grimald's initials for his name. I think it not improbable that the increase in anonymity of C over B is itself a further indication that C came later. Indeed, C may be later than July 31, 1557. It was reprinted from B, and the date of July 31 in its colophon may possibly be only a mechanical reproduction of the colophon of B. If some time intervened between the actual printings of B and C, it would be easier to account for the changes in C from the readings of B to those of A.

¹ See p. 13, above.

² For a similar error see Barnabe Googe's Eglogs, Epytaphes, and Sonettes, 1563, Arber's reprint, p. 127, and other cases noted by R. B. McKerrow, Introduction to Bibliography, 1927, p. 65 n.

INTRODUCTION

Whatever the true explanation of this third revision, the fact remains that for all later editions the source was not B but C. That C, or a lost edition based on C, was the copy for D (and hence indirectly for *D-I) is proved not only by the page-divisions, line-arrangement, misprints, and textual readings, but also by the inverted-pyramid form in which Tottel's preface is printed in every edition from C to I. The choice of C as the text to be reprinted hardly seems likely to have been accidental. Tottel must have chosen it deliberately.

To bring these dry, but important, matters to a close, mention should be made of Dr. Greg's conclusion¹ that the "duplicate setting" of B and C in July "affords strong presumptive evidence that the June edition was the first. It would appear that it was not until this edition was placed on the market that the printer realized what a demand there would be for the book, and had at once to make preparations for a large and rapid supply. This could hardly have happened except in the case of a first edition." Still another indication that A was the first edition is seen in its obvious misreading of the original manuscript copy at 191.7, where it has R. so depe can auoyde, while B-I present the correct reading of Rodopeian maide. It may be added also that, since C is a reprint of B, the two might better be spoken of as distinct editions; but that is so largely a matter of terminology that no urgent reason exists for upsetting the conventional statement that B and C belong to different settings of the second edition.

III. ELIZABETHAN EDITIONS (D-I)

D. THIRD EDITION 1559

• SONGES AND SONETTES / written by the right honorable Lorde / Henry Haward late Earle of Sur- / rey, and other. / Apud Richardum Tottell. / 1559. / Cum priuilegio. /

[Colophon] ¶ IMPRINTED AT LON- / DON IN FLETE- / STRETE / within Temple barre at the / signe of the hand and starre, by / Richard Tottell. / Anno. 1559. / Cum priuilegio. /

Collation: 4°, sigs. A-P⁸ (two sheets being sewed together in each quire). [A1] title: [A1^v] "To the reader."; A2-[C2^v] Surrey's poems, with "SVRREY." at the foot of [C2^v]; C3-[G1^v] Wyatt's poems, with "S. T. wyate the elder." at

¹ The Library, n. s., v (1904), 128.

SONGES AND SONETTES

written by the right honorable Lorde
Henry Howard late Earle of Surrey and other.

Apud Richardum Tottell.

1559.

Cum privilegio.

THE THIRD EDITION (1559) D

the foot of [G1^v]: G2–P1 poems by anonymous writers, with “and Sonettes. of / uncertaiue [sic] auctours.” (heading combined with running-title) at the top of G2: P1–[P5^v] Grimald’s poems, with “Songes written by N G.” on P1 (after four lines of text) and “N G” at the end of the text on [P5^v]: [P6–P7^v] “The table.”, with “Finis” (in black letter) at the foot of [P7^v]: [P8] missing in the two copies I have seen; a modern page with “facsimile” colophon is supplied in the British Museum copy; verso blank.

Running-titles: The running-title for the verso is regularly “Songes” from A2^v to P5^v (but it is followed by a period on the verso of every third and fourth leaf);¹ for the recto, from A2 to P5 it is “and Sonettes.” (except for G2, on which see the “Collation” above); but on eight pages (A7, B7, B8, F7, F8, G8, H7, I7) it is not followed by a period, while in seven cases (L8, M2, M7, N1, N8, O7, O8) “and Sonetts.” appears. “The table.” is the head-line of P6–P7^v.

Folio-numbers run from “fo. 2.” on A2 to “fo. 117” on P5, with the misprints 16 for 19, 37 for 36, 1 for 71, 87 for 76. The prefix also appears as “Fo.” or “Fol.” (the latter in most cases on the first two leaves of each signature), like “fo.” with or without the period, which also is sometimes omitted after the number. Furthermore, in certain figures (as in 11, 12, 21, 63, 66, 81, 103, 114) the type is broken, or out of alignment, or from a wrong font, while in 56 the 5 is printed upside down.

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are Martia (B7^v) for Martiall, Am (B8^v) for And, You (E3) for Then, Ho apparently (F2^v) for He, Why (G8^v) for Which, Oh (K5^v) for Of, A (L3^v) for And, When (O2^v) for Wher- (Wherefore), On (O8^v) for One, Doe (P2) for Do- or Doway. On C6 And is misprinted Aud, on K1 Within has an almost unreadable second i and the n is missing, or else it is meant for With-. No key-word appears on C2^v or P5^v. Key-words are likewise missing, because of trimmed or mended pages, on A7^v, A8, K4^v, P6, as well as on the faked page E7^v, of the British Museum copy; but they are printed correctly in the Rosenbach copy.

Signatures: Except for A1, the title-page, the first four leaves of each signature are signed without error; but sometimes, as in K3 and M3, the period after the numeral looks more like a comma, and in one case, K4, it does not appear at all.

Copies: Two copies of D are known, (1) that in the British Museum (Grenville 11171), and (2) that now owned by the Rosenbach Company of New York and Philadelphia. In the former Grenville wrote: “This appears to be an unique Copy no other having been yet found with this ¹ In the British Museum copy, E7^v (which is a faked page) also has “Songes.”; but no period appears in the Rosenbach copy.

INTRODUCTION

date. The earliest date is that of 1557, so that my Copy of 1559 is the second edition." It has various mended pages, while four leaves (E7, G7, I8, P8, as well as part of K4) have been supplied in such clever facsimiles that in the British Museum catalogue and in all other bibliographical works one leaf only, P8, is particularized as modern. P8 has what purports to be a "facsimile" colophon, though the "facsimile" is a reproduction based upon E. The other three leaves — corresponding to pages 72.41-74.32, 131.27-133.31, 164.32-166.31, of my reprint — are likewise "facsimiles" drawn from E,¹ not from another copy of D.

Although I was aware of the faked pages when I made the entries for D in my Variant Readings, I inserted readings from them because I could find no other pages to consult. Since that time (2) has turned up, and through the kindness of Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach I have been permitted to examine it at my leisure. It contains but two of the leaves (E7 and I8) lacking in (1). An examination of them shows that the readings attributed to D in the Variant Readings² should be deleted at 73.20, 29, 74.11, 15, 30, 164.32, 34, 35, 37, 38, 165.6, 23, 27 (first entry only), 35, and that the following additions³ should be made:

73.16 it] it it
25 lingred] lingered
74.26 listned] listened 164.34 pikes] pyckes
38 the] Om.
166.24 bared] barhed

A few entries, too, like those at 17.12 and 42.4, should be omitted, as the text of (2) is quite clear.

The Rosenbach copy is in very bad condition, with every leaf (including the title-page) badly stained and wormed, and with almost every leaf torn and mended. Furthermore, it is incomplete, lacking signatures A2, D7, G7-H1, M6-P8. Still it is valuable because, if for

¹ As is proved by the typography and arrangement of the colophon, by entries in my Variant Readings under 74.15, 132.19, 24, 31, and by the spacing and the identical spelling and punctuation of these pages and the corresponding pages in E.

² Those listed for D at 73.2, 29, 34, 74.15, 30, 132.13, 16, 19, 22, 24, 31, 133.31, 164.32, 35, 37, 165.6 (second entry), 35, do not appear in *D, which, however, does have the reading listed for E at 132.8.

³ Only the last of these occurs in *D, which also reads now for the at 164.38.

CHARACTERISTICS OF D

no other reason, it supplies four pages which are faked in (1), and because it clears up a few other readings that are doubtful there. A former owner, said to have been Edward Capell, made many red-ink corrections in the text, which he had collated with an earlier edition. Both (1) and (2) belong to the same impression, as is shown by their identity of collation and misprints.

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of D are exactly like those of *BCD+, the page-divisions like those of *BCD-G.

Characteristics: With D the degeneration of the text has been accelerated by careless printing and still more careless proof-reading. It was set up from a copy of C (or some lost edition based on C), as a glance at the Variant Readings and at the page- and line-arrangement of the two editions clearly proves;¹ but purely through carelessness it introduces many typographical errors and many unauthorized readings not found in ABC. Its line-arrangement follows that of C rather closely, but in the titles of 21 poems (Nos. 13, 243, 264, 29, 32, 33, 35, 98, 124, 172, 185, 192, 194, 198, 218, 221, 224, 236, 237, 310, 149) it re-arranges (in most cases very slightly) the lines of C. In addition, D and all subsequent editions keep the inverted-pyramid form of the printer's preface that C, not B, introduced, but they do not keep the paragraph-signs of C. As for typographical errors, D omits entire lines, as 34.26, 40.10, 43.6; it combines two lines into one, as at 30.34-35 and 143.30-31;² and these errors, as well as others too numerous to mention here, reappear in every later edition. Many of the blunders made by D are corrected in *D, some of them perhaps actually from a comparison of the texts of D and C.³ It is a bit ironical that at 207.12 D has the correct reading of to instead of by, and that this one improvement on the text of ABC was not adopted in *D or E-I.

¹ But at 187.25 it (like *D) has clarke, following B rather than C. I suspect that this was an inadvertent change from the text of C, not an actual borrowing from that of B.

² In the latter case BC (see the Variant Readings) had reversed the order of phrases in A. D merely keeps the first line of the new arrangement made in C and drops the second line.

³ Thus the readings assigned to D in the Variant Readings for 7.15, 9.7, 11.4, 13.22, 13.26, 14.7, 14.31, 16.3, 16.33, 18.24, 18.40, 22.39, 25.9, 27.2, 27.7, 31.8, 31.10, etc., are corrected in *D to follow those of C (and hence many appear later in E); as are also, for example, its misprints at 4.4, 6.6, 9.11, 9.22, 20.13, 20.35, 26.28, 28.39, 30.19.

INTRODUCTION

D*. FOURTH EDITION 1559

¶ SONGES AND SONETTES / written by the right honorable Lorde / Henry Haward late Earle of Sur=^e rey, and other. / Apud Richardum Tottell. / 1559. / Cum priuilegio. /

[Colophon] I Imprinted at London / in Fletestrete within Temple / barre, at the figne of the / hande and starre, by / Richard Tottell. / Anno. 1559 / Cum priuilegio. /

Collation: 8°, sigs. A–P⁸. [A1] title: [A1^v] “To the reader.” : A2–[C2^v] Surrey’s poems, with “SVRREY.” at the foot of [C2^v]: C3–[G1^v] Wyatt’s poems, with “S. T. VVYATE the elder.” at the foot of [G1^v]: G2–P1 poems by anonymous writers, with “Songes and Sonettes of / vnc ertain [sic] auctours.” at the top of G2: P1–[P5^v] Grimald’s poems, with “Songes written by N. G.” on P1 (after four lines of text) and “N. G.” at the end of the text on [P5^v]: [P6–P7^v] “The table.” with “Finis” (in black letter) at the foot of [P7^v]: [P8] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: The running-title for the verso is regularly “Songes” from A2^v to P5^v (but it is followed by a period on the third and fourth leaves of C, D, F, H, K, M, O); for the recto, it is “and sonettes.” on A3, A7, “and Sonnettes.” on A5, “and Sonets” on the first and second leaves of C, D, F, H, K, M, O, and “and Sonettes” (with or without a period) elsewhere. (Many of the final s’s are inverted or else are in an odd font of type.) A section-heading (see the “Collation” above) appears on G2, “The table.” on P6–P6^v, “The table” on P7–P7^v.

Folio-numbers run from “Fol. 2.” on A2 to “fo 117.” on P5, with 26 misprinted as 25, with the first numeral in 13, 14, 18 printed as an italic i, with the 4 of 104 torn off, and with an occasional number out of alignment. All the numbers except 49 are followed by periods. The prefix likewise appears as “fol.” and “Fo.”, which like “Fol.” and “fo” are sometimes followed by a period, sometimes not.

Key-words: None appears on C2^v or P5^v. Incorrect key-words are Am (B8^v) for And, Ladye (C1^v) for Layd, O (C4^v) for Of, You (E3) for Then, why (G8^v) for Which, Chere (L8^v) for There, Doe (P2) for Do- or Doway.

Signatures: The first four leaves of each signature, except for A1 and G3, are signed without error; no period appears before the numeral in I1 and L1.

Copy: Only one copy is known, that formerly in the late Sir George Holford’s library, at the sale of which by Sotheby and Company on March 28, 1928, it was bought by the Rosenbach Company for £5000.

2511 m4
SONGES AND SONETTES

written by the right honorable Lorde
Henry Haward late Earle of Surrey, and other.

11. 10
Apud Richardum Tottell.

1559

Cum priuilegio.

Jacobus Joye

THE FOURTH EDITION (1559) *D

Sotheby's sale-catalogue of The Holford Library, part III, lot 522, reproduces the title-page, and gives these details:

A rust-hole in sig. I6, a corner torn from N8 affecting pagination and two or three words, a tiny wormhole through the last gathering very slightly affecting the text, 18th Century calf, gilt, Horace Walpole's copy with his book-plate; from the collection of Lord Vernon. . . . On the title is the name of a 17th Century owner, Jacobi Joye.¹

It should be added that the first line of the text on A6 is imperfectly impressed.

This book has always been listed as merely another copy of edition D. After I had made unsuccessful efforts to see it in London during 1926, Mr. F. S. Ferguson, as a member of the firm of Bernard Quaritch, Ltd., secured permission in November, 1927, to examine it for me at the auction-rooms, and immediately informed me that, although it has a title-page identical in setting with that of D, the remainder of the book belongs "to an entirely different edition of the same year." More recently, Dr. Rosenbach generously turned the book over to me for study. I have not considered it necessary to print a list of the variant readings of *D in the present volume, for although they are interesting, they have no real authority. Some account of them, however, is given in notes on pages 22, 23, 26, 29; and whenever in this second volume an embracive reference like D+, D-G, or D-I appears, it may be assumed that the reference likewise applies to and includes *D.

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of *D are exactly like those of B+, the page-divisions like those of B-G.

Characteristics: D, as has been said, was set up, directly or indirectly, from a copy of C; and in turn *D, except for the title-page (which is identical in setting with that of D), was re-set from a somewhat corrected copy of D, which it follows very closely in line-arrangement. Even the short lines, cast in inverted-pyramid form, at the end of the address "To the reader" follow the lines of D exactly, though varying in spelling and punctuation. The same fact distinguishes every page of the text and the Table. As for poem-titles, only 14 have a different alignment in D and *D, in spite of their varying spelling and punctuation: three of these (Nos. 22, 185, 310) differ from one another in C, D, ¹ In the Catalogue of the Classic Contents of Strawberry Hill Collected by Horace Walpole (1842) it is lot 143. Thomas Thorpe bought this copy for ten guineas.

INTRODUCTION

and *D; five (Nos. 14, 29, 32, 33, 237) are alike in C and *D, six (Nos. 82, 90, 165, 175, 281, 305) are alike in C and D. Hence the variations seem to be accidental in *D. This edition, furthermore, has also corrected the faulty folio-numbers of its predecessor, — though it makes one new mistake (25 for 26) of its own, — as well as several of its incorrect key-words. It also states in better form the section-heading on G2 (see the "Collation" above), changing the key-word of G1^v to Songes in order to point to the new heading; whereas in D the key-word is Vncer- (apparently because of uncertain auctours in the corresponding section-heading of C), although the heading has the awkward form of "and Sonettes. of/ uncertaiue [sic] auctours." *D follows D in dropping entire lines at 34.26, 40.10, 43.6, and in combining lines 30.34-35 and 143.30-31; but it also drops line 147.19, as do E+. A considerable number of the readings introduced by D are corrected in *D so as to return to the readings of C.¹ On the contrary, *D (as is natural since it was set in type from that printed text) often adopts the new readings of D.² And, of course, it introduces many new and unauthorized variants, a large number of which were taken over by E.³ Hence without an exact count of the variants it would be difficult to say whether D or *D has the worse text.

*D, finally, has a remarkable lot of manuscript notes copied verbatim et literatim by Horace Walpole himself ⁴ from those which, in the Bodleian copy of I, G. F. Nott falsely attributed to John Selden.⁵ They are discussed on pages 100-101, below, and several are reproduced (from I) in the Notes.

E. FIFTH EDITION 1565

1565./ ¶ SONGES AND SONETTES/ written by the right honorable/ Lord Henry Hawarde late/ Earle of Surrey, and, other./ Apud Richardum Tottell./ Cum priuilegio./

¹ See p. 23 n. 3, above.

² E. g., those listed at 5.15, 6.7, 6.31, 7.3, 8.2, 8.18, 9.6, 11.12, 12.8, 15.34, 17.30, 19.22, 24.41 — all of which reappear in E. It likewise keeps many readings of D — as at 4.10, 4.34, 6.15, 7.16, 10.24, 23.32, 30.5 — that do not reappear in E.

³ See p. 29 n. below.

⁴ Mr. Percivall Merrett, a well-known authority on Walpole, confirms my opinion of this matter. Cf. pp. 100-101, below.

⁵ See pp. 36, 38 n. 3.

1565.

SONGES AND SONETTES

written by the right honorable Lord Henry Harwarde late Earle of Surrey, and other.

Wm Bares

Cyner

Wm Bares

807 391

Apud Richardum Tottell.

Elizabeth Bowes

Cum privilegio.

THE FIFTH EDITION (1565) E

[Colophon] ¶ IMPRINTED AT LON-/ DON IN FLETE-STRETE/ within Temple barre at the/ signe of the hand and starre, by/ Richard Tottell./ Anno. 1565./ Cum priuilegio./

Collation: 8°, sigs. A–P⁸. [A1] title: [A1^v] “To the reader.”: A2–[C2^v] Surrey’s poems, with “SVRRET.” at the foot of [C2^v]: C3–[G1^v] Wyatt’s poems, with “S. T. VVYATE the elder.” at the foot of [G1^v]: G2–P1 poems by anonymous writers, with “uncertain auctours.” at the top of G2 under the running-title: P1–[P5^v] Grimald’s poems, with “Songes written by N. G.” on P1 (after four lines of text) and “N. G.” at the end of the text on [P5^v]: [P6–P7^v] “The table,” with “Finis.” (in black letter) at the end of [P7^v]: [P8] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: The running-title for the verso from A2^v to P5^v is “Songes” (in the Bodleian copy it is trimmed off on L7^v, O3^v, and O8^v, as it is in part on several other pages); for the recto it varies between “and Sonettes” and “and fonettes”, usually with, sometimes without, a period (in the last five signatures it is often partly trimmed off the Bodleian copy). “The table” is the head-line of P6–P6^v, “The table.” of P7–P7^v.

Folio-numbers run from “Fo. 2” on A2 to “Fol. 117” on P5 (a few, especially of the later ones, are trimmed off the Bodleian copy in whole or in part); but 23 is misprinted for 13, 26 for 29, 18 for 81, 59 for 95, 115 for 105. The prefix, sometimes with, sometimes without, a period, also appears as “fo” or “fol”, and occasionally a period follows the number. In folio 39 the 9 is either imperfect or from a different font.

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are Flow (A5) for Floring, Am (B8^v) for And, Lady (C1^v) for Layed, O (C4^v) for Of, you (E3) for Then, Ye (E8) for Yet, Whe (G2^v) for Who, To (G8) for The, Why (G8^v) for Which, Vnt (H1) for Vnto, Whose (H8) for Who, For (K6^v) for Not, That (L5^v) for Thus, Chere (L8^v) for There, An (M6^v) for And, As (N2^v) for An, Doe (P2) for Do- or Doway.¹ No key-word appears on C2^v, G1^v, P5^v.

Signatures: Except for A1 and G3, the first four leaves of each signature are signed without error (as they are in D and *D).

Copies: Three copies of E are known: (1) the Heber copy that recently passed from the Britwell to the Huntington library for £600;² (2) the copy formerly belonging to Professor George Herbert Palmer, ¹ Something is wrong, also, with the key-word on E3^v; in the rotograph it looks like End (or Eno) instead of Euer; and so it does at the same place in G. In the Huntington copy it is clear enough.

² It has only the slightest of variations from the foregoing description, as in omitting the period after elder at the foot of G1^v.

INTRODUCTION

now in the library of Wellesley College; ¹ (3) the copy in the Bodleian. I have used the last-mentioned, in which several head-lines are shaved off, various pages are stained, and the last leaf is mended. This copy has the book-plate of Nathaniel Crynes (†1745), whose name is written on the title-page and stamped at the bottom of folios 97 and 117. The title-page has been badly maltreated: it bears the names of Anne Bowes (twice) and Elizabeth Bowes, besides other names that have been scratched out, the old and new shelf-marks "Crynes 891" and "391," and the disfiguring Bodleian stamp. Hence it is not a beautiful object to look at. On a fly-leaf and on leaves inserted at the end of the book there are various lengthy but unimportant manuscript notes, said ² to have been written by the antiquarian William Fulman, who died in 1688. The same hand occasionally inserted marginal notes to the poems.

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of E are identical with those of *B-D*F+*, the page-divisions with those of *B-D*FG*.

Characteristics: E was set up from a copy of *D (or from some lost edition based upon *D), as the omission of a line at 147.19 and various ¹ I have casually examined this copy, which has various penciled notes by Mr. Palmer, one of them stating that he paid Quaritch £95 for it. An inserted letter from a former Bodleian librarian tells something of the history of the book:

"Oxford
"Feb. 15. 1907

"Dear Mr Quaritch,

"The book you sent me is a copy of the 1565 edition of the Earl of Surrey's Songs and Sonnets, printed at London by Richard Tottel. Your copy unfortunately wants the titlepage and three leaves at [sic] end (two leaves of index, and one leaf bearing the imprint)

"When Dr Richard Rawlinson wrote 'C & P' on the inner front cover the book was in his own possession and was perfect, so it must have been mutilated after his death in 1755.

"Our copy is complete except that a few of the headlines have been cut into by the ruthless binder, late in the 17th century.

"This has been no trouble.

"Very truly yours

"F. Madan"

Mr. Palmer's copy was perhaps that advertised by Thomas Thorpe in catalogues for 1834, 1835, 1838, 1839, and 1840 at prices ranging from 10s. 6d. to £1 1s.

² By John Price, Bodley's librarian (†1813), in a letter to Bishop Percy on December 6, 1797 (J. B. Nichols, Illustrations of the Literary History of the Eighteenth Century, VIII [1858], 323).

SONGES AND SONETTES

*written by the right honorable Lord Henry Haward late Earle of Surrey, and
others.*

Apud Richardum Tottell, 1567

Cum priuilegio.

THE SIXTH EDITION (1567) F

other readings prove.¹ But in composing E the printer made many additional errors, eliminating or inserting extra syllables, changing words, and dropping a line on no plan, but by sheer carelessness. For example, E omits the phrase alwaies the end at 234.11, and an entire line at 203.26; it changes hast (27.3) to hall, nay (39.37) to no, Atlas (90.19) to Itlas. These errors, and numerous others, are repeated in every subsequent edition. Some attention, on the other hand, was paid to freeing the text of E from obvious typographical errors, in which respect it is superior to the text of D.

F. SIXTH EDITION 1567

¶ SONGES AND SONETTES/ written by the right honorable/ Lord Henry Haward late/ Earle of Surrey, and/ others/ Apud Richardum Tottell/ 1567/ Cum priuilegio/

[Colophon] ¶ IMPRINTED AT LON-/ DON IN FLETE-STRETE/ within Temple barre at the/ signe of the hand and starre, by/ Richard Tottell./ Anno .1567./ Cum priuilegio./

Collation: 8°, sigs. A–P⁸. [A1] title: [A1^v] “To the reader”: A2–[C2^v] Surrey’s poems, with “SVRREY.” at the foot of [C2^v]: C3–[G1^v] Wyatt’s poems, with “S. T. VVYATE the elder.” at the foot of [G1^v]: G2–P1 poems by anonymous writers, with “Vncertain auctours.” at the top of G2, under the running-title: P1–[P5^v] Grimald’s poems, with “Songes written by N. G.” on P1 (after four lines of text) and “N. G.” at the end of the text on [P5^v]: [P6–P7^v] “The table”, with “Finis.” (in black letter) near the end of [P7^v]: [P8] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: The running-title of the verso from A2^v to P5^v is “Songes”; of the recto, “and sonettes” and “and Sonettes” in the proportion of about two to one (this is the first time there has been no punctuation in the head-lines); of P6–P7^v “The table”.

Folio-numbers run from “fol. 2” on A2 to “fo. 117” on P5. The only error is 23 for 13 (the same misprint is in E). Sometimes the prefix is “Fo.” or “Fol.”, and in a few cases there is no period.

Key-words: Incorrect are T (A7) for To, Am (B8^v) for And, O (C4^v) for Of, In (C7^v) for Im- or Imprisoned, You (F3) for Then, To (G8) for The, W'hy (G8^v) for Which, Verce (H6) for Verses, W'hose (H8) for W'ho, ickle (K2^v) for ¹ E. g., D* has the readings listed for E (some are also in C), not those for D, in the Variant Readings at 4.11, 5.2, 6.34, 7.15, 7.23, 8.12, 9.7, 9.29, 10.10, 11.4, 12.22, 12.29, 13.22, 14.7, 15.6, 16.3, 16.4, 17.28, 18.24, 19.31, 21.33, 22.8, 24.8, 25.28, 26.36, 27.11, 30.29, 37.2, 89.6, 123.32, 126.16, 170.31, 172.7.

INTRODUCTION

Tickle, Cheere (L8^v) for There, As (N2^v) for An, As (N6) for Ah. No key-words appear on C2^v, G1^v, P5^v.

Signatures: Except for A1 (the title-page) and G3, the first four leaves of each signature are signed without error (as they are in D-E).

Copies: Three copies of F are known: those in (1) the John Rylands library, Manchester, (2) the Hunterian Museum of the University of Glasgow, (3) the Pierpont Morgan library of New York.¹ The last, the only one I have seen, Miss Belle da Costa Greene suggests may be the Lefferts copy (which is usually said to be untraced). Its first four leaves and last leaf are slightly torn and mended, with various words restored in facsimile. Accordingly, facing page 29 I have reproduced the title-page of (1).

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of F are identical with those of B-EG+, the page-divisions with those of B-EG.

Characteristics: F was set up from a copy of E, as is definitely proved by the errors they have in common. It introduces dozens of verbal changes (like couered for cowarde at 8.34, wasteth for wisheth at 127.3, games for flames at 187.27, od for on at 188.9, walles for wastes at 236.30, dame for dames at 257.13, and like the omissions of the second that and the second then at 221.25, 36), which reappear in all subsequent editions. It also abounds in typographical errors. The line-arrangement, too, is obviously adopted from E: of the 280 titles of poems, only some 17 differ in arrangement (and those very slightly) from the titles of E.

G. SEVENTH EDITION 1574

¶ SONGES AND SONETS/ written by the right honorable/ Lorde Henry Haward late/ Earle of Surrey, and/ others./ Apud Richardum Tottell/ 1574./ Cum priuilegio./

[Colophon] ¶ Imprinted at London in/ Fleteftrete within Tem-/ ple Barre at the signe of/ the Hand and Starre/ by Richarde/ Tottell./ Anno. 1574./ Cum priuilegio./

¹ In (1) and (2) the title-page has a period after others, Tottell, and priuilegio (cf. Greg, The Library, v [1904], 132, and the facsimile facing p. 29). In (1) the paragraph-sign at the beginning of the colophon has dropped out. In both copies the key-word on A7 is correct; while in (1) a correct key-word appears on B8^v, an incorrect one (Ii for Im-) on C7^v. For these variations from my description of (3) I am indebted to the Rylands and Hunterian librarians. The Rylands librarian also kindly permitted me to have rotographs of signatures A-A4, P8, to compare with (3).

SONGES AND SONETS

written by the right honorable

Lorde Henry Haward late

Earle of Surrey, and

others.

Apud Richardum Tottell

1574.

Cum priuilegio.

THE SEVENTH EDITION (1574) G

Collation: 8°, sigs. A–P⁸. [A1] title: [A1^v] “To the Reader.”: A2–[C2^v] Surrey’s poems, with “SVRREY” at the foot of [C2^v]: C3–[G1^v] Wyatt’s poems, with “S. T. WYAT the elder.” at the foot of [G1^v]: G2–P1 poems by anonymous writers, with “Vncertaine auctours.” at the top of G2 under the head-line: P1–[P5^v] Grimald’s poems, with “Songes written by N. G.” on P1 (after four lines of text) and “N. G.” at the end of the text on [P5^v]: [P6–P7^v] “The table.”, with “Finis.” at the foot of [P7^v]: [P8] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: “Songes and Sonettes.” is the head-line of A2. Thereafter the verso head-line as far as P5^v is either “Songes” or “songes”; except for “and Sonettees.” on A7, the recto head-line to P5 is “and Sonettes.” (usually with a period) or “and sonettes” (usually without a period). For P6–P7^v “The table.” is the running-title on P6, “The table.” on P6^v, “The Table.” on P7–P7^v.

Folio-numbers run from “Fo. 2.” on A2 to “Fo. 117.” on P5, with 4.1 misprinted for 14, 21 for 22, 68 for 83, 70 for 85, 106 for 114, and in some twenty cases with no period after the figure. The prefix also occurs once as “Fo” (B6); on the first and second leaves of signatures B, D, E, H, K, M, O, and on P2, as “fo.”; and on the seventh and eighth leaves of the same seven signatures as “fo.”

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are In (C7^v) for Im-, than (E3) for Then, To (G8) for The, Whoso (H8) for Who, Nor (I2) for Not, To (L4) for The, Cheere (L8^v) for There, As (N2^v) for An, Vnfold (N3) for Vntold, As (N6) for Ah, Doe apparently (P2) for Do- or Doway. No key-word appears on A6, C2^v, G1^v, P5^v. On the key-word of E3^v see above, p. 27 n. 1.

Signatures: The first four leaves of each signature, except of course A1, are signed without error (as in D–F).

Copies: Five copies of G are known: those in (1) the British Museum, press-mark Grenville 11172; (2) the Bodleian, shelf-mark Tanner 149; (3) the Huntington library;¹ (4) formerly in the Britwell library (the Heber copy), which was bought by Messrs. Quaritch on April 12, 1927, for £300; and (5) recently in the John L. Clawson library but now owned by Mr. Owen D. Young, of New York.² I have used the fine Grenville copy, but I have also examined the copies in the

¹ Formerly in the Locker-Lampson and Beverly Chew libraries. It presents a few variations from (1) in the punctuation of the prefix “fo.”

² This copy has the book-plates of Clawson and of two earlier owners, Edward Gordon-Duff and Winston Hagen. It measures $6\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{8}$ inches, the top being cropped, and the title-page, N1, and O2 repaired. Mrs. Robinson, Mr. Young’s librarian, informs me that there are no important variations between this copy and the description I have given above. A copy of G was also once in the University of Cambridge library, but it disappeared (so the librarian tells me) “long ago.” According to a manuscript note in the Rosenbach copy of D it lacked folios 69–73, 104, 112, 113.

INTRODUCTION

Huntington and Bodleian libraries. The Bodleian copy lacks signature A₄, but otherwise has only the slightest of variations.¹ Grenville noted: "This edition is of the greatest rarity. Warton & Nott both quote an edition of 1574, but neither of them appears to have seen it."² It is the more valuable as it differs in some words of the text from the edition of 1557." In the last sentence "the more" should be instead "very much less."

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of G are identical with those of B-FHI, its page-divisions with those of B-F.

Characteristics: G was set up from a copy of F (or from some lost edition based on F), of which it is a close page-for-page reprint. In the "Table" as well as the text it also follows F closely in alignment, and only some 15 of its 280 titles vary in arrangement of the lines, and even those but slightly. Retaining most of the errors of its predecessor, it introduces others and adds to the unintelligibility of the text. For example, it substitutes doleful for doubtful (10.24), Eche stone for eche (A has Eccho, 14.3), do for did (178.33), that for which (197.4), is for he (235.19); it omits the at 14.10 and she at 186.34; it changes her to his at 246.18, the to in the at 257.13. In all these cases, and in others too numerous to mention here, G is followed by HI.

H. EIGHTH EDITION 1585

[Type ornament] SONGES/ AND SONNETS, WRITTEN/by the Right honourable/ Lord Henry Haward late Earle of Surrey, and/ others,/ [Ornament]/ Imprinted at London by Iohn VVin- det.
1585./

[Colophon] Imprinted at London Anno Domini/ 1585./

Collation: 8°, sigs. A-P⁸. [A1] title: [A1^v] "To the Reader"; A2-C3 Surrey's poems, with "SVRREY." on C3 (after three lines of text): C3-[G1^v] Wyatt's poems, with "S. T. WYAT the elder." at the foot of [G1^v]: G2-[P1^v] poems by anonymous writers, with "Vncertaine Auctours." at the top of G2

¹ Many of its leaves are wormed and stained, many (including the title-page) mended. The colophon on the last leaf is mounted. The margins, too, are closely trimmed; but with a few slight exceptions all the text can be made out. On the title-page an old hand has written the name "Johem Layman."

² As a matter of fact, Nott (see pp. 36-37, below) speaks of two separate editions in 1574 as if he had seen both; but his statement cannot be trusted. He had seen one edition of 1574, as his collations in P show.

SONGES AND SON-NETS, WRITTEN

by the Right honourable

Lord Henry Howard

late Earle of Surrey, and

others,

Imprinted at London by Iohn VVier
dec. 1585.

THE EIGHTH EDITION (1585) H

under the head-line: [P1^v-P6] Grimald's poems, with "Songs written by N. G. of the/ ix Muses" (heading combined with poem-title) near the middle of [P1^v], and "N. G." at the end of the text on [P6]: [P6^v-P8] "The Table": [P8] colophon; verso blank.

Running-titles: The complete running-title "Songes and sonnettes." appears on A2. Thereafter the rectos have occasionally "and sonnettes" (never with a period), but in most cases "and sonnettes." (generally followed by a period); "and sonnettes." appears on A5, "and sonnettes." on F5. The versos have "Songes", usually without a period; but among some fifteen periods that do appear one, on F2^v, stands directly over the s of Songes instead of after it. "The Table" is the running-title of P6^v-P8.

Folio-numbers run from "fo. 2." on A2 to "fo. 118" on P6, with 5 misprinted for 8, 38 for 37, 60 for 61, 62 for 63, 64-71 for 65-72, 97 for 97. Further, the 7 of 107 is imperfect, and the 2 of 112 is dropped below the line. The prefix "fo." does not vary; but its period is raised out of alignment some ten times, and on C8 the period after the number is likewise raised. Periods are about equally present and absent after the numbers.

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are of (A5) for The (both rightly in roman, and, were it not for a complicated error by which the last line of A5 is repeated on A5^v, the of might be correct), To (A7) for Vn-, Why (E2^v) for Then, Bu (H1) for But, As (L1) for This, As (M4) for And. The key-words on A2, L1, O2, P7, and P7^v are blurred; those on A3^v, B2^v, C1^v are torn; none appear on E8^v, G1^v, H4^v, P1, P6.

Signatures: The first four leaves of each signature, excepting A1 and K4, are signed. Contrary to the rule, C5 is also signed. On the first leaf of F and M there is no numeral.

Copies: Six copies of H are known. I have not seen those in (1) the Capell collection, Trinity College, Cambridge, (2) the library of Mr H. C. Folger, New York, (3) the Huntington library,¹ (4) the Pierpont Morgan library. I have used the two copies in the British Museum, (5) C.34.a.13 and (6) Grenville 11173. My collations were made from the former (but in the Variant Readings I point out instances where its readings differ from those of the latter), which is a good copy, although its title-page is badly torn and mended. It has the book-plate of Thomas Jolley, F. S. A.

¹ Since writing this sentence I have examined (3), which was formerly in the Locker-Lampson and Chew libraries, and which varies considerably from the foregoing description. For example, its folio-number 97 is correct; its key-words on A2, A3^v, B2^v, C1^v, P7, P7^v are plainly printed; no key-word appears on I7, while that on H1 is misprinted as B; on P4^v 117.3 is, by an unusual type-setting error, misplaced after the key-word; sig. I3 is not signed.

INTRODUCTION

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of H are identical with those of B-GI, but its page-division and line-arrangement differ from those of every other edition. In most cases it reduces the titles of poems in length, as from four or even five lines to three or two, or from three lines to two; but the wider space between the lines of the text makes H run one page longer than G or than any other edition. Its titles, furthermore, are awkwardly arranged, several (as those at the end of folios 12, 19v, 37v, and 42) being printed partly at the foot of one page and partly at the top of the next, while the title of No. 9, of which only four words appear at the bottom of folio 5, is repeated in full at the top of folio 5v. Because of the changed foliation a new Table is provided, in which for the first time "The long loue that in my" is furnished with a folio-number, though it is not changed in position.¹

Characteristics: H has an abominable text, repeating most of the errors of its predecessors — especially of G, from which it was set up — and adding others in almost incredible profusion. An exceptionally careless compositor omitted numerous lines that are in G, — as 59.28, 125.8, 139.21, 250.5, — transposed lines 2 and 3 of page 117, made senseless changes like Macedonians cheife captaines from the Macedonians chieftaines of G (117.27), by an involved error at 194.35 repeated a line, and often neglected to indent stanzas. He was slavishly followed by the compositor of I.

I. NINTH EDITION 1587

SONGES AND/ Sonnets, written by the/ Right Honorable Lord Henrie/ Haward late Earle of Sur-/ rey, and others. [Device]/ ¶ Imprinted at London by/ Robert Robinfon, dwelling in Fetter/ Lane nere Holborne./ 1587./

[Colophon] None.

Collation: 8°, sigs. A-O⁸. [A1] title; verso blank: [A2] "To the Reader." (the preface is printed for the first time in roman and italic, not black-letter, type): [A2v]-C2 Surrey's poems, with "SVRRET." at the foot of C2: [C2v-F7] Wyatt's poems, with "S. T. Wyatt the elder." near the end of [F7]: [F7-O2v] poems by anonymous writers, with the heading "Uncertayne Authours."

¹ In E-I this poem begins, "The one long love," etc.; but the word one never appears in the Tables of E-I. Instead, the Table of I reads, "The longer love," etc.

SONGES AND

Sonnets, written by the Right Honorable Lord Henrie

Howard late Earle of Surrey, and others.

Imprinted at London by

Robert Robinson, dwelling in Fetter,

Lane nere Holborne.

1587.

THE NINTH EDITION (1587) I

on [F7], under the Wyatt signature: [O2^v–O6^v] Grimald's poems, with "Songes written by N. G. of the/ ix. Muses." (heading combined with poem-title) near the middle of [O2^v] and "N. G." at the end of the text on [O6^v]: [O7–O8^v] "The Table." (this index is printed for the first time in roman instead of black-letter type, but with a black-letter capital in place of a roman one to introduce each section), with "FINIS." at the foot of [O8^v].

Running-titles: The running-title throughout A2^v–O6^v is "Songes/ and Sonets."; but "Songes" appears as "Song" on I8^v, while "Sonets" is followed by a comma on ten pages (A5, A6, C7, C8, I6, I7, L5, L6, N5, N6). There is an italic head-line, "The Table,"¹ on O7–O8^v.

Key-words: Incorrect key-words are God apparently (D3) for Go, Whree (E8^v) for Where, Though (H3) for Through, The (N7) for Thy, A (O6^v) for Alas, O (O7^v) for Of. Those on C1^v, E1^v, and K6^v are blurred. There is no key-word on H1^v.

Folio-numbers run from "fol. 3" on A3 to "fol. 110" on O6 without error or variation, but the 5 of 15² is almost blurred out.

Signatures begin with A3 and run by fives to O5; but B5, D4, F5, H5, K5 are not signed at all, and B is the only signature that bears a figure on its first leaf. C5 is signed with a roman, instead of an arabic, numeral; and several figures, as in D2, D3, L3, are so blurred or broken as to be unrecognizable.

Copies: Four copies of I are known: those in (1) the Bodleian, (2) the library of Mr. Carl H. Pforzheimer (from the Huth collection), (3) the Drummond collection in the University of Edinburgh, and (4) formerly in the Bridgewater library. The last is said by Seymour de Ricci³ and Miss Bartlett⁴ to be in the Huntington library, but this is a mistake. I have not succeeded in tracing its whereabouts⁵ but have worked with (2) and consulted (1). Mr. Pforzheimer's copy (a note in the Huth sale-catalogue says that it "was found in the old wainscot of a baker's house at Chobham in Surrey") has two leaves slightly mended and several lower margins stained, but its text is perfect. The Bodleian copy (8° H.43.Art. Seld.) — in which leaf G is torn ¹ On O7^v the initial letter of The is in roman type, but on O8^v it is too badly broken to be read. The Bodleian copy has "The" in both places.

² Not true of the Drummond copy, which otherwise (according to the librarian of the University of Edinburgh) agrees with my description, and not true of the Bodleian copy.

³ The Book Collector's Guide (1921), p. 308.

⁴ Mr. William Shakespeare (1922), p. 93.

⁵ Presumably this is the copy described in J. P. Collier's Catalogue, Bibliographical and Critical, of Early English Literature (1837), pp. 297–298. At the Hoe sale, New York, 1912, it brought $925.

INTRODUCTION

in such a manner that a few letters are missing on GI^v — has dozens of manuscript notes and emendations in two or three hands, all of which Curll in 1717 and Nott in 1814 confidently but erroneously assumed to be the notes of the famous antiquary John Selden, and many of which obscure the original readings of the text. Elsewhere in this Introduction¹ and in the Notes are reproduced some of these annotations.

Contents and Arrangement: The contents and arrangement of I are identical with those of B-H. It has fewer pages than any other edition, thanks to its condensation of titles and to its printing of No. 310 in double columns — the only instance of such printing in any of the editions. Hence the page-divisions of I are entirely different from those of A-G or H.

Characteristics: I was set up from a copy of H, retaining nearly all the errors of the latter and making many of its own, as well as a few corrections (for example, returning to the readings of A at 233.40, 241.6, 246.2). These corrections were, I think, purely arbitrary, involving no comparison with any earlier edition; but, since among other things the folio-numbers are given without blunders, I has a more correct look than has H. This correct look is superficial: I omits lines at 53.21 and 227.10, makes senseless changes, as from herauld (189.3) to he told, and otherwise debases the already debased text of H. An Elizabethan reader who had H or I in his hands must frequently have had difficulty in understanding what the poets really meant.

IV. DOUBTFUL ELIZABETHAN EDITIONS

In the "Advertisements" to their 1717 and 1728 reprints (J, L, below) the printers Curll mentioned a 1569 edition of the miscellany that they had used. As there seems to be no other evidence of its existence, the references to it made by Brydges,² Chalmers,³ Park,⁴ Bliss,⁵ and Nott probably came from the Curlls. Nott⁶ carelessly asserts that Surrey's

¹ See especially pp. 100-101, below.

² Censura Literaria, I (1805), 244.

³ The Works of the English Poets, II (1810), 322.

⁴ Editing Walpole's Catalogue of the Royal and Noble Authors, I (1806), 271.

⁵ Editing Wood's Athenae Oxonienses, I (1813), 158 n.

⁶ The Works of . . . Surrey . . . and Wyatt, I (1815), cclxxvii-cclxxviii. On p. 286 Nott also speaks of the "first 4to. ed. of . . . 1547."

DOUBTFUL ELIZABETHAN EDITIONS

poems (that is, Tottel's Miscellany) "were first printed in June 1557. In the course of that and the following month, they went through no less than four distinct impressions. They were afterwards reprinted in 1665 [sic], in 1567 and in 1569, twice afterwards in 1574, again in 1585, and again in 1587."¹ There is, however, no proof whatever of the existence of four editions in 1557, of one in 1569, or of two in 1574. Sir Sidney Lee, in his sketch of Tottel in the Dictionary of National Biography, says, "A third edition was issued by Tottel in 1558,"² but that date is no doubt a misprint for 1559. That other Elizabethan editions than A-I were published and have disappeared without leaving a trace seems highly probable. In particular the gaps between 1559 and 1565, 1567 and 1574, look suspicious.³

V. EIGHTEENTH-CENTURY EDITIONS (J-M)⁴

J. EDMUND CURLL'S EDITION 1717

SONGES and SONETTES./ WRITTEN/ By the Right Honorable Lord/ HENRY HAWARD, late Earle of SURREY./ [Ornament]/ Imprinted at LONDON, in Fletefstrete, within/ Temple Barre, at the Signe of the Hand and/ Starre, by Richard Tottell. Anno 1567./ Cum Priuilegio./ Re-printed by E. CURLL. Anno 1717./

Collation: 8°, pp. viii, 32. P. [i] half-title, "The/ Earl of SURREY's/ POEMS./ Price One Shilling.,"; verso blank: p. [iii] title; verso blank: p. [v]

¹ Cf. Heinrich Nagel, Sir Thomas Wyatt und Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, eine literatur- und sprachgeschichtliche Studie (1889), p. 5: "Innerhalb zweier Monate wurden sie viermal aufgelegt und von neuem wurden sie publiziert in den Jahren 1565, 1567, 1569, 1574 (zweimal), 1583 [sic] und 1587."

² Padelford, The Poems of Henry Howard (1920), p. 220, also names a 1558, but not a 1559, edition. He repeats the statement in his 1928 edition, p. 260.

³ Cf. the entry of "Songes and Sonnettes" in the Stationers' Register on February 18, 1583. Sotheby's sale-catalogue (1874, lot 3065) of Sir William Tite's library listed a copy of the Songs and Sonnets under the date 1561, remarking: "This is the third edition of the Earl of Surrey's Poems. A former possessor probably wishing it to be considered THE FIRST EDITION (of which only one copy is known) has cropped the small 4to. volume so as to resemble a small 8vo. and to avoid detection of course has cancelled the leaf containing the imprint. According to Lowndes this copy sold for £15." (But Lowndes, in his Bibliographer's Manual, v [1863], 2548, had correctly spoken of the copy of 1557 as "now in Mr. Tite's Collection.") In the Tite sale (cf. The American Bibliopolist, vi [1874], 91) it brought £46, passing into the Rowfant and, finally, into the Huntington library (see p. 10 n. 3, above). The date 1561 is a bad guess for 1557 (B).

⁴ These and all subsequent editions, of course, are printed in roman and italic type.

INTRODUCTION

"Mr. POPE's/ CHARACTER/ OF THE/ AUTHOR./ IN/ His Poem intituled, Windfor Forest, inscrib'd/ to the Lord Lansdown." [eight lines quoted]: p. [vi] "Advertisement by the EDITOR." pp. [vii-viii] "TO THE/ READER." (Tottel's preface, printed in italics): pp. [1]-32 Surrey's poems, with no heading on p. [1] but with "SVRREY." at the end of the text on p. 32.

Running-titles: "To the READER." p. viii; "SONGES/ and SONETTES." pp. 2-31; "SONGES, &c." p. 32.

Signatures: The signatures are [A]-E⁴, with A1-4 unsigned and the first two leaves of B-E signed.

Copies: The British Museum has two copies, with the press-marks 1077.g.13 (2) and 1077.i.26. The former lacks the half-title (pages i-ii); the latter, with the autograph of Thomas Jolley, F. S. A., and the date 1808, has the half-title but lacks pages 9-16 of the text. I own a copy, and there is another in the Harvard College library: in both the half-title is missing. No doubt many other copies exist.

Contents: This reprint contains the forty-one poems (including No. 243, which is not by Surrey) that appeared in the Surrey section of F.

In the Advertisement Curll remarks:

In order to give the Publick as correct an Edition as I could of these valuable POEMS, I procured among my Friends Three several Editions, printed in the Years 1565, 1567, and 1569,¹ all which I found very full of Typographical Errors, but the most correct, was that of 1567, from which this Edition is printed,² and to which, the Folio's number'd by numeral Figures in the Margin refer. When I had made the Edition of 1567 as correct as I could from the other Two; I heard of a nother Copy in the Bodleian Library in Oxford, among Mr. SELDEN's Books, wherein were many considerable Amendments, suppos'd to be made by that eminent Person: which I got collated by a learned Gentleman there.³ So that I hope it will appear I have given my Lord SURREY's Poems in their Antique Dress, in as careful and accurate a manner as possible: And if these admirable SONGES and SONETTES, meet with a Reception

¹ Nothing is known of this edition: see p. 36, above.

² Hence in Lowndes's Bibliographer's Manual, ed. Bohn, v (1863), 2548, we are misinformed that the 1567 edition "is considered the most correct of the early editions."

³ A very learned gentleman there assures me that Selden's hand is not one of the two, or perhaps three, represented in the book (I). Bodley's librarian, John Price, in describing the volume to Bishop Percy on December 6, 1797 (J. B. Nichols, Illustrations of the Literary History of the Eighteenth Century, viii [1858], 324), declared that "none of these written emendations, &c. appear to be in the handwriting of Selden; they rather resemble that of Ascham." Roger Ascham, however, died nineteen years before the 1587 edition of the miscellany was published.

EDMUND CURLL'S EDITION

equal to their Merit, they shall be immediately follow'd by the remainder, in the same Volume, written by himself, and his intimate Friend Sir THOMAS WYATT the Elder. To which will be subjoin'd a very full and particular Account of these noble AUTHORS, who have hitherto been undeservedly deny'd the Justice due to their Memories.

London,
April 13, 1717.

Vale.

This edition was ultimately due to Alexander Pope. As Warton wrote: "Pope, in Windsor Forest, having compared his patron Lord Granville with Surrey, he [that is, Surrey] was immediately reprinted, but without attracting many readers. It was vainly imagined that all the world would eagerly wish to purchase the works of a neglected ancient English poet, whom Pope had called the GRANVILLE of a former age." ¹ Curll, accordingly, was discouraged, and he did not "immediately" carry out the promise of his Advertisement. A manuscript note by Haslewood in a copy of K (1077. g.13 [1]) suggests that Curll's plans to issue the remainder of the Tottel's Miscellany poems were stopped "in consequence of the rival edition by Sewell [K], to which in the typographical arrangement it is far superior." Eleven years later his son, Henry Curll, reissued the edition, with a continuation from the poems of Wyatt (see L, below).

K. MEARES-BROWN EDITION 1717

POEMS/ OF/ HENRY HOWARD,/ EARL of SURREY,/ Who Flourish'd in the Reign of HENRY/ the Eighth./ Printed from a Correct Copy./ WITH THE/ POEMS of Sir THOMAS WIAT, and/others his Famous Contemporaries./ To which are added some MEM-OIRS of his LIFE/ and WRITINGS./ [Double rule]/ LONDON:/ Printed for W. Meares at the Lamb, and J. Brown at/ the Black-Swan without Temple-Bar. 1717./

Collation: 8°, pp. xvi, 263, +7 unnumbered. P. [i] title; verso blank; p. [iii] dedication to Thomas Duke of Norfolk; verso blank; pp. [v-vi] "The Original/PREFACE.": pp. [vii]-xvi "MEMOIRS." of Surrey; pp. 1-40 Surrey's poems, with "SONGES/ AND/ SONETTES." at the head of p. 1 and "Surrey." at the foot of p. 40; pp. 41-107 Wyatt's poems, with "Here Begineth Sir T. Wyattes Woorkes." at the top of p. 41 and "Syr T. Wyatte the Elder." at the end of his poems on p. 107: pp. 107-252 poems by anonymous writers, with "Vncertaine Auctors." on p. 107: pp. 253-263 Grimald's poems, with "Songes written by N. G. of the nine Muses." (heading combined with poem-title) at the top of p. 253, and "N. G." at the end of the text on p. 263: p. [264] blank: pp. [265-269] "THE TABLE.", with "FINIS." at the end: p. [270] "ERRATA." (consisting of fifteen lines).

¹ History of English Poetry, ed. Hazlitt, IV (1871), 29.

INTRODUCTION

Running-titles: "PREFACE." p. vi; "MEMOIRS." pp. viii-xvi; "SONGES and SONETTES." pp. 2-16, 18-112, 161-263; "SONGES and SONNETS." p. 17; "SONGS and SONNETES." pp. 113-123, 125-160; "SONGS and SONNETS." p. 124; "THE TABLE." pp. [266-269].

Pagination: Pp. i-vii, 264-270 are not numbered. Furthermore, 131 is misprinted for 121, 158 for 154, 159 for 155, 155 for 158, 154 for 159, 125-140 for 225-240. In the Grenville and Sumner copies 52 is also misprinted for 152, and the figures are set crookedly.

Key-words: Incorrect are make (p. xii) for made (itself, however, a misprint for make), And (p. 15) for Ah, The (p. 40) for Here, No (p. 143) for Ne, The (p. 241) for Tombed, Thus (p. 245) for This, A (p. 247) for Her, Out (p. 253) for But. (All these key-words are in roman type.) Wher (p. 35) for Where also appears in the Sumner copy. No key-words occur on pp. xvi, 28, 127, 160, or (in 1077.g.17 only) on p. 3.

Signatures: The signatures are A-S⁸, with A₃, A₄, and the first four leaves of B-S signed. Instead of Q the mark is Qq.

Copies: This is a rare book. The British Museum has four copies, in one of which is pasted a clipping from a bookseller's catalogue of 1811, offering a copy at the high price of one pound seven shillings. A copy presented to the Harvard College library in 1874 by Charles Sumner has the book-plate of Horace Walpole, and on the fly-leaf, in Walpole's autograph, the "Epitaph written by the Earl of Surrey on one Clere."

The title-page announces, perhaps as a slap at Curll, that a "Correct Copy" of the miscellany has been followed. So incorrect is the text, however, that some labor was involved in discovering what "Correct Copy" the editor attempted to reproduce. A detailed examination of his readings proves that he followed D^{*}. For example, he omits vayn most (126.9), as well as lines 34.26, 40.10, 43.6, and combines lines 34-35 of page 30, — errors that appear in D-I. But he also omits line 147.19, as do D⁺ +, though not, as do E +, line 203.26 or the phrase alwaies the end (234.11). At 28.3 he has Wyat, with D and D^{*}, where E + have What (but in his Table he has What); while his readings of tracte (6.34),

GEORGE SEWELL'S EDITION

place (7.23), no (37.2) — to name no others — come from *D. The editor changed words and phrases apparently at random, and did not scruple to insert a new line. For instance, feeling that the sense was incomplete after 143.37, he added "Then thrown benethe the Hyll of Blisse."¹ The editor was George Sewell, hack-writer and M.D. of Edinburgh. His should have been the dubious satisfaction of producing from his "Correct Copy" the most corrupt text issued since 1557.

Two of the British Museum copies have no special points of interest — those with the press-marks Grenville 18047 and 79.a.24. The latter, however, came from the library of George III, and bound with it is an eight-page list of "Books sold by John Darby in Bartholomew-Close." Very interesting indeed are the other two copies.

The first of these (1077.g.17) was owned by the antiquary Thomas Park, whose signature, with the date 1796, is on the title-page. There is also a note asserting that he had "Collated [Sewell's edition] with Mr Malone's Copy of the 1st Edit. in 1557." The penciled marginal collations prove that Park consulted B, not A. He also adds, in the margins, references to the folio-numbers of "the first edition"; but there are no folio-numbers in A. This copy, which Park had annotated with the idea of getting out his own edition of the miscellany, passed into the hands of another literary antiquarian, Joseph Haslewood.²

Park owned a second copy (now 1077.g.13 [1]), in which he duplicated most of the notes of the foregoing volume. F. G. Waldron, of Literary Museum fame, had been an earlier, as Haslewood was a later, owner of this copy. A note by Haslewood on the title-page shows that it came into his possession at "Park's sale at Sotheby May 1829."³ The notes and collations in this volume are too numerous to particularize. Most of them were made in order to impress some one, presumably a bookseller, with the desirability of a new edition. Thus after enumerating all the editions with which he was familiar from 1557 to 1815, — including Nott's 1815 edition of Surrey and Wyatt "in two quarto volumes, under the bulk of which the modern book-stalls are now groaning," — Haslewood writes: "there is ample room to believe the merit and rarity of the work [that is, Tottel's Miscellany], although

¹ For the line supplied here by I, see p. 100, below.

² See Haslewood's sale-catalogue, 1833, No. 1257.

³ See Sotheby's Catalogue of the Miscellaneous Library of a Poetical Antiquary [Thomas Park], lot 171 (sold on May 9, 1829).

INTRODUCTION

forming a portion of the national poets,¹ is such, a distinct edition would find a sufficient number of purchasers for 200 copies, but not for one or two thousand, a favourite wholesale number with some well informed, but rather cormorant biblioplists." The notes were evidently submitted to various booksellers, as well as to Edmund Lodge for use in his historical and genealogical works. In Lodge's hands (as an inserted letter from that guilty man evidences) they suffered "a detention of many days." Haslewood was forced to relinquish his editorial plan. In a final preliminary note he calls attention to Park's penciled comments, and adds: "It seems certain he [Park] projected a new edition, but, on that subject, in talking with publishers, [was] fated like me, 'To talk the more because he talked in vain.'" All of which is but one illustration of the bad luck that has overtaken several prospective editors of Tottel's Miscellany.

L. HENRY CURLL'S EDITION 1728

THE/ PRAISE OF GERALDINE,/ (A FLORENTINE LADY.)/ Being, the celebrated/ LOVE POEMS/ Of the Right Honourable/ HENRY HOWARD,/ Earl of Surrey, and Knight of the most noble/ Order of the Garter; who was beheaded by/ King HENRY VIII, in the Year 1546./ ALSO THE/ POETICAL RECREATIONS/ OF/ Sir Thomas Wyate,/ CALLED,/ The DELIGHT of the MUSES./ [Rule]/ Faithfully published from the Original Impression./ Recommended by Mr. POPE./ [Rule]/ LONDON:/ Printed for HENRY CURLL in Clement's-Inn. Pafage. 1728./

Collation: 8°, pp. vi, 90. P. [i] title; verso blank: p. [iii] "Mr. POPE's/ CHARACTER/ OF THE/ AUTHOR./ IN/ His Poem intituled, Windsor Forest, inscrib'd/ to the Lord Lansdown./" [eight lines of the poem quoted]: p. [iv] "Advertisement by the EDITOR.": pp. [v-vi] "TO THE/ READER." (Tottel's preface): pp. [1]-32 Surrey's poems, with no heading on p. [1] but with "SVRRET." at the end of the text on p. 32: pp. [33]-90 Wyatt's poems, with no heading on p. [33] but with "Sir T. WYATE the Elder." at the foot of p. 90. In the British Museum copy, the only one I have seen, there is a separate Wyatt title-page (verso blank), without a signature-mark or page-number, that belonged after p. 32 though it is bound between pp. 40 and 41. It runs thus: "POEMS/ ON/ Several Occasions. / By Sir THOMAS WYATE./ In

¹ Perhaps a reference to M, below.

CURLL'S AND ANDERSON'S EDITIONS

EFFIGIEM/ THOMÆ VIATI./ [Three lines of Latin verse.]/ [The "effigy" between the letters T. and V. is reproduced.] / Aetas Viati./ Syderei peteret quum Cæli Regna Viatus./ Tempora lustrorum non dum compleverat Octo./"

Running-titles: "To the READER." p. vi; "SONGES/ and SONETTES." pp. 2-31, 34-89; "SONGES, &c." pp. 32, 90; none on pp. 1, 33.

This edition is a re-issue of J, with a fresh title-page and with the Wyatt poems added. The title-page itself is cleverly worded, and should have attracted attention. The book contains all the Surrey-Wyatt poems of B-I (including No. 243 and omitting No. 82, in contrast with A). It is now extremely rare.

M. ANDERSON'S EDITION 1793

Robert Anderson, A Complete Edition of the Poets of Great Britain, 8°, 13 vols., 1792-1794.¹

Bibliographical information about this work would be superfluous. In volume 1 (1793), pp. 589-608, are reprinted (along with the original preface of the Songs and Sonnets) 41 poems (including No. 243) attributed to Surrey; pp. 611-637, 96 poems (omitting No. 82) attributed to Wyatt; pp. 638-643, 14 poems (Nos. 170, 174, 175, 181, 193, 199, 209-212, 246, 273, 303, 304) attributed to uncertain authors; ² pp. 643-647, 10 poems attributed to Grimald. Thus the volume contains all the poems printed in the Surrey-Wyatt-Grimald sections of B-I and a mere sample of the Uncertain-Authors section.

Anderson attempted to keep the original spelling and punctuation of an unspecified edition. That he followed *D appears from the following facts: with D+ he omits lines 34.26, 40.10, 43.6, and at 11.12 has A Vow for Vow, at 39.36 The for To a; but some of his readings, like estate (5.2), Prisoner (12.29), appear only in D+*, not in D, and some, like tracte (6.34), only in D-G*, not in D or HI. Of course he introduces readings, like The Complainte (7.10) and his gloves (41.5), that do not occur in A-I.

¹ Anderson's name does not appear on this title-page, nor does the date (which I have adopted from the British Museum catalogue, although the first volume is dated 1793). Another issue has the title: "The Works of the British Poets. With Prefaces, Biographical and Critical, by Robert Anderson, M.D. . . . London: Printed for John & Arthur Arch; and for Bell & Bradfute, and J. Mundell & Co. Edinburgh. 1795."

² These same fourteen poems are reprinted in Bell's edition of Surrey (see p. 55, below).

INTRODUCTION

VI. MODERN EDITIONS (N-V)¹

N. PERCY-STEEVENS EDITION 1808

This unpublished two-volume edition is represented by an incomplete copy in the British Museum (Grenville 11568-69). In the first volume Grenville has a note: "L^d Surrey' [sic] Poems. by Percy & Steevens 8°. 2 vol. s.a. but 1807. Bishop Percy & Steevens had jointly edited & printed two vol^s of L^d Surrey's & other poems of blank verse prior to Milton, when a fire at the printer's Nichols's in February 1808 consumed the whole impression, of which only 4 copies (which had been previously delivered) remained² — this copy had been sent to M^r Park that he might add some biographical notices — see his MS.S. note —."

In the note referred to, Park comments: "Received from Mr. John Nichols at the desire of Bp Percy, in November 1807; and in February following, the whole impression was swept away in the calamitous fire which consumed the offices and warehouse of the worthy printer. Four other copies are believed to have been preserved." Park's signature also appears on the title-page of volume 1, and on a fly-leaf he wrote: "Biog. Notices of blankverse writers in this Vol. (To be prefixed,

¹ See p. 37 n. 4.

² Grenville's is the only copy I know of. It is the same as that listed in Sotheby's Catalogue of the Miscellaneous Library of a Poetical Antiquary [Thomas Park], lot 513 (May 9, 1829), and described as "Extremely Rare. Bp. Percy and George Steevens were joint editors of this Work, which was never completed, nearly the whole impression being destroyed by fire, with Mr. Nichols' warehouse, in February 1808." The printer, John Nichols, in a letter addressed to Percy on December 13, 1808 (J. B. Nichols, Illustrations of the Literary History of the Eighteenth Century, VIII [1858], 89), writes as if only one copy ("by being on a shelf in my dwelling-house") had been saved from the fire of February 8, and promises to send that one to him. J. P. Collier, however, owned another, two volumes bound as one volume, and described in his sale-catalogue, 1884, lot 824, with the added information that "Mr. Collier, in one of his notes, affirms that this copy contains portions which he has never met with in any other." My student and friend, Mr. B. M. Wagner, kindly informs me that in various catalogues issued by Thomas Thorpe from 1833 to 1845 apparently three different copies (to be distinguished by their binding in boards, russia, or morocco) are often advertised at prices varying from £2 12s. 6d. to £5 5s. The copy in boards, uncut, is described as "a present from the Bishop to J. Rose," and as one of six that survived; that in morocco (Thorpe's Bibliotheca Selectissima, n. d. [1840?], p. 103), as "the learned prelate's own copy, who has collated it with the editions of 1565 and 1587, and with a manuscript, the variations are noticed in his autograph," and as one of three (or, in other catalogues, six) that survived.

BISHOP PERCY'S UNPUBLISHED EDITION

at the desire of Bp Percy, by T P.)," followed by the list, "Geo. Turberville/ Geo. Gascoigne/ Barn. Riche/ Geo. Peele/ J. Higgins/ James Aske/ W^m. Vallans/ Nic. Breton/ Geo. Chapman/ Chr. Marlow/ I. Nandernoodt [sic]/ Gab. Harvey/." No other notes of any kind appear in the volumes.

Of volume II — which contains poems (not in Tottel's Miscellany) by Surrey (pages 1–81) and Wyatt (pages 83–141),¹ as well as "POEMS/ in Blank Verse/ (not Dramatique)/ prior to MILTON'S/ Paradise Lost./ Subsequent to/ Lord SURREY'S in this Volume,/ and to N. G.'s in the/ preceding." (pages 143–342) — it is not necessary to speak further. Neither it nor the first volume has a modern title-page. They are octavos of 272 pages (volume I) and 342 pages (volume II).

Volume I, which alone concerns us, may be described as follows:

Collation: P. [1] title from C, "¶ SONGES AND SONNETTES ²/ written by the right honorable Lorde/ Henry Haward late Earle of Sur-/ rey, and other./ Apud Richardum Tottel./ Cum privilegio ad imprimendum/ solum. 1557./": p. [2] "¶ To the Reader." (Tottel's preface): pp. [3]–40 Surrey's poems, with "SURREY." at the end of the text on p. 40, the lower portion of which is blank: pp. 41–111 Wyatt's poems, with "T. WYATE the elder." at the end of the text on p. 111, the lower portion of which is blank: pp. 112–260 poems (without heading or subscription) by anonymous writers: pp. 261–272 Grimald's poems, with "¶ Songes written by N. G." on p. 261 and "N. G." at the end of the text on p. 272.

Running-titles: On the verso, from p. 4 to p. 270, the running-title is "SONGES AND SONNETTES"; on p. 272 "SONGES AND SONNETTES, &c." On the recto appears "BY THE EARL OF SURREY." pp. 5–39; "BY SIR THOMAS WYAT." pp. 41–111; "OF UNCERTAIN AUCTOURS." pp. 113–259; "WRITTEN BY N. G." pp. 261–271.

Key-words: The key-word on p. 3 has been torn out in the Grenville copy; an incorrect key-word (in roman type), To for I serue, appears on p. 247.

This edition was an attempted reprint of C in the original spelling; the pagination is changed, but marginal reference is made to the original folio-numbers of C. Percy's interest in the miscellany antedated the publication of his famous Reliques (1765). On March 24, 1763, he entered into an agreement with Tonson to publish an edition of Surrey's poems (that is, the entire Songs and Sonnets) for twenty guineas. Four months later (July 12) he wrote to Dr. Thomas Birch, "Mr. Tonson and I are meditating a neat 12mo. edition of the Earl of Surrey's works," mentioning that he had copies of Tottel's 1559 and 1574 editions (D, or *D, and G). On March 1, 1772, Michael Tyson asked R. Gough: "What is Dr. Percy about? I saw, three years ago, proof-sheets of his edition of Lord Surrey. What is become of it?" On August 11, 1792, Percy told Walpole that his nephew, Thomas Percy, was "both able and desirous" to finish the work, the text of which had "been printed off about 25 years," but his letters to George Steevens in 1796-1797 show that he himself had taken up the task again, so that on July 13, 1806, Dr. Robert Anderson, editor of The Poets of Great Britain, informed Percy that he had had many inquiries about "your edition of Surrey," to all of which he answered that it was "forthcoming." John Nichols, the printer, brings the story to a conclusion thus: "Dr. Percy had, soon after the year 1760, proceeded very far at the press with an admirable edition of 'Surrey's Poems,' and also with a good edition of the Works of Villiers Duke of Buckingham; both which, from a variety of causes, remained many years unfinished in the warehouse of Mr. Tonson in the Savoy, but were resumed in 1795, and nearly brought to a conclusion; when the whole impression of both works was unfortunately consumed by the fire in Red Lion Passage in 1808."¹ This edition, then, might well have been included in my section on the eighteenth-century reprints; but it was intended for publication in the nineteenth century also. In 1804, according to Thomas Park's "Advertisement" in Nugae Antiquae, Tottel's Miscellany was "again preparing for public exhibition by the accomplished hand of Bishop Percy." The destruction of his edition was a genuine misfortune, not so much for Percy's own accomplished hand as for that (if it was actually engaged in the work) of George Steevens, a scholar of note.²

¹ Pages 82 and 142 are blank.

² C, however, has the spelling Sonnettes.

INTRODUCTION

¹ John Nichols, Anecdotes, III (1812), 161, 753; VIII (1814), 585; John Bowyer Nichols, Illustrations of the Literary History of the Eighteenth Century, VII (1848), 166, 571, VIII (1858), 289.

² There seems to be no evidence of Steevens's collaboration: Sir Sidney Lee's comments to the contrary in his sketch of Steevens in the Dictionary of National Biography are obviously based merely on Grenville's note in the British Museum copy. The letters Steevens wrote to Percy in 1796-1797 (J. B. Nichols, Illustrations, VII, 1 ff.) show that he merely helped the Bishop in finding specimens of pre-Miltonic blank verse, and he died on January 22, 1800. The British Museum catalogue includes the Percy edition under Steevens's name, dating it 1807 — again showing a dependence on Grenville.

ALEXANDER CHALMERS'S EDITION

O. CHALMERS'S EDITION 1810

The Works of the English Poets, from Chaucer to Cowper; Including the Series Edited, with Prefaces, Biographical and Critical, by Dr. Samuel Johnson: and the most Approved Translations. The Additional Lives by Alexander Chalmers, F. S. A., 21 vols., 8°, London, 1810.

Bibliographical information about this work is unnecessary. In volume II, p. 323, Chalmers gives Tottel's preface; pp. 325-337, the 40 poems attributed to Surrey in Tottel's Miscellany, as well as No. 243; pp. 369-388, the 96 poems attributed to Wyatt; pp. 396-441, the 133 (not including No. 243) by uncertain authors; pp. 441-444, the 10 poems attributed to Grimald. In his Surrey-Wyatt sections there are also poems by the two not to be found in the miscellany, as well as a memoir of each. In other words, Chalmers reprints C,¹ which he thought to be the first edition, though he interrupts his reprints of Surrey and Wyatt by adding to them poems not in C. The reprint purports to be in the original spelling and punctuation, but is not successfully carried through. It does not, of course, keep the page-division, typography, or line-arrangement of C, and it often divides a poem into separate stanzas.

P. NOTT'S EDITION 1814

Of this edition the British Museum has four partial copies. No modern title-page, no preface,² no original covers, are in any of the four. The most nearly complete copy, which has the press-mark 11607.i.7, indicates that the edition was to be in two volumes. The first volume may be described as follows:

Collation: 4°, pp. 1-367. Pp. 1-48 Surrey's poems, with the heading "Songs And Sonnets/ Of The/ Earl of Surrey." on p. 1: p. [49] half-title, "Sir Thomas Wyatt/ The Elder."; verso blank: pp. [51]-136 Wyatt's poems, with the heading "Songs and Sonnets/ Of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt/ The Elder." on p. [51]: p. [137] half-title, "Uncertain Authors."; verso blank: pp. [139]-322 poems by anonymous writers, with the heading "Songs And Sonnets/ Of/

¹ This is evident by the absence of any of the unique readings of B; by the inclusion of such lines as 34.26, 40.10, 43.6, that are omitted in D+; and by the presence of such readings as turnde (17.37), ioynde (26.13), chaunced (36.13), standes (37.23), hath (42.8). On the other hand, in the title of No. 12 as given by Chalmers ("A Vow to Loue," etc.), the "A" appears first in D, and so do The (instead of To a) in the title of No. 53 and the name of Wyatt in the first line of No. 31; while in the title of No. 15 his reading of Prisoner does not come until *D.

² But Nott refers at least twice to a preface: see p. 89, below.

INTRODUCTION

Uncertain Authours." on p. [139]: p. [323] half-title, "Nicholas Grimoald."; verso blank: pp. [325]-338 Grimald's poems, with the heading "Songs And Sonnets/ By/ Nicholas Grimoald." on p. [325] and with "N. G.", "FINIS.", and Tottel's colophon from B at the end of the text on p. 338: p. [339] half-title, "Appendix."; verso blank: pp. [341]-367 "Appendix.": p. [368] blank. All the headings and half-titles are in large roman capitals.

Running-titles: "Songs And Sonnets./ Earl of Surrey." pp. 2-48; "Songs And Sonnets./ Sir Thomas Wyatt." pp. 52-136; "Songs And Sonnets./ Uncertain Authors." pp. 140-322; "Songs And Sonnets./ Nicholas Grimoald." pp. 324 [326]-338; "Appendix./ Nicholas Grimoald." pp. 342-367. All the running-titles are in large roman capitals.

Pagination: By an error the half-title "Nicholas Grimoald" and its blank verso, which should be pp. 323, 324, were not counted (although they have the signature 2T2 and belong to the original gathering), and are followed by the numbered pages [323] and 324. Later, when the error was detected, the page-numbers 327, 328, were omitted, p. 329 following p. 326 and thus restoring the correct pagination. In other words, the page-numbers run thus: 322, [no numbers = 323, 324], [323 = 325], 324 [= 326], 325 [= 327], 326 [= 328], 329, 330.

In 11607.i.7 are preserved also a portion of the Notes that were intended to make Nott's second volume. These pages are numbered 3-24, 41-72. Page 72 ends in the middle of a note on the seventeenth line of No. 15; from which it appears that Nott's annotations, if carried out at the same rate with which they began, would have reached enormous proportions. Nevertheless, the gap in pagination between 24 and 41 is misleading; for Nott is discussing No. 8 on page 24 as well as on page 41, and it seems likely that not more than a page or two is actually missing and that the numbers 41-72 are press errors. Even Nott, obsessed as he was with the Fair Geraldine, heroine of No. 8, would hardly have devoted almost fifty pages (25-71) to a discussion of her charms and of Surrey's slavery.

Nott's reprint was made, in modern spelling and punctuation, from B. In an appendix (see the Collation above) he also prints the thirty poems of Grimald that appeared in A but were omitted in B. His notes are excellent, and many of them were taken over almost without change in his edition of Surrey's poems.

A second copy (11604.ff.4) has the complete text (pages 1-367), plus a duplicate set of pages 49-56 (that is, signature H).

A third copy (11623.ff.1) has only pages 1-48 of the text (all of Surrey's poems), but these are interleaved with elaborate collations from other editions of the miscellany. It is noticeable that, although Nott reprinted B, in this third copy he has restored the readings of A in the text of Surrey's poems, as if sometime he intended to get out an edition based on A. A manuscript note explains that he has given in black ink collations from the 1564 (sic) edition, in red and blue ink collations from the editions of 1567 and 1574 respectively. But 1564 was a slip of the pen, for the readings Nott gives in black ink are to be found in the edition of 1565 (E). Furthermore, the black-red-blue collations for pages 139-338 of Nott's text are preserved in the British Museum's fourth copy (C.60.O.13), on page 338 of which, in collating the date of the colophon (1557), Nott wrote in black ink "1565." That disposes of the mythical 1564 edition.

GEORGE NOTT'S UNPUBLISHED EDITION

In both the third and the fourth copy there are also many penciled readings marked "Seld" or "Selden," which are thus, no less than the textual corrections made from A, shown to have resulted from a period of study in the Bodleian; for Seld(en) is a reference to the manuscript notes in the Bodleian copy of I. In C.60.O.13 there is a complete text (pages 1-367) of Nott's reprint, interleaved with very elaborate collations and critical and explanatory notes of great value. Some of the latter were used in his edition of Surrey and Wyatt, others were not (they may possibly be later in date). Separately bound and catalogued as part of C.60.O.13 is a series of manuscript collations made by Nott from editions that I have not attempted to identify.

Some problems of interest arise in connection with P. In the British Museum catalogue the editor is said to have been John Nott, M.D. (the uncle of G. F. Nott), the place of publication Bristol, the date 1812. Accordingly, in 1906, Professor Padelford published an article entitled "The Relation of the 1812 and 1815-1816 Editions of Surrey and Wyatt,"¹ in which with entire plausibility he argued that G. F. Nott had used without acknowledgment the work of his uncle. This argument could, however, almost be refuted from Nott's statements in the Surrey-Wyatt volumes, where he refers to the edition of Tottel's Miscellany in terms that suggest his own editorship; while it is not likely that, if he had been the unblushing plagiarist Mr. Padelford makes him out to be, he would have referred readers to the exact source of his plagiarisms. But Mr. H. J. Byrom has recently proved ¹ that the manuscript notes in all four copies of P are in the hand of G. F. Nott, and has thus freed his name from the stigma of dishonesty.

¹ Anglia, xxix, 256-270. The Cambridge History of English Literature, III, 577 (American ed.), also lists the "1812" edition as the work of John Nott.

INTRODUCTION

The date of P is uncertain. The British Museum catalogue evidently gives 1812 on mere guess-work. It also quotes two penciled notes from 11607.i.7 and 11604. ff.4: "This intended Edition was nearly totally destroyed in Bensley's fire,"² and "Just as it was completed all but the preface, a fire destroyed the whole impression." Bensley, it should be noted, was a London (not a Bristol) printer. He printed Nott's Surrey and Wyatt in 1815-1816. Mr. Byrom observes (page 51) that "the accepted date 1812 for the destruction of the edition should be questioned, for in his bulky notes to the 1815-16 edition of Surrey and Wyatt Nott several times refers to 'Tottel's Songs and Sonnets, ed. 1814,' and the page references correspond with [11607.i.7, 11604. ff.4, and C.60.O.13]."

Not before cited in this connection is the evidence of Sir Egerton Brydges, who, editing Davison's Poetical Rhapsody in 1814, remarks in his "Advertisement" (page 32) that "'Tottel's Miscellany' . . . is about to re-appear with splendour, aided by the industrious and learned researches of Dr. Nott," — a remark that effectually disposes of the claims advanced for John Nott, M.D. But if any doubt as to the identity of "Dr." Nott remains, it can be removed by a glance at Philip Bliss's edition of the Athenae Oxonienses (1813),³ where we are informed that "the last edition [of Tottel's Miscellany], with biographical . . . and other remarks by Dr. Nott, fellow of All Souls, and prebendary of Winchester, has been lately printed in two volumes, 4^{to}." Perhaps Bliss actually meant printed, not published. In any case, A. F. Griffith's Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica ⁴ of 1815 speaks of "the forthcoming edition, under the skilful editorship of Dr. Nott, which, in the opinion of competent judges, bids fair to become the standard."

There can be no doubt that, so far as the text and part of the notes

¹ "Tottel's Miscellany, 1717-1817," The Review of English Studies, III (1927), 47-53.

² See Sotheby's sale-catalogue (1874) of Sir William Tite's library, lot 3066, where this copy is (apparently) described. The cataloguer adds that this was "G. F. Nott's copy, with his autograph signature and notes," and that it contained also a "Dissertation on English Poetry before the XVIth Century (p. cxxxvii to cclxxxvi)." But that dissertation really belonged to Nott's Surrey volume of 1815, and is not in 11607.i.7.

³ I, 158 n.

⁴ No. 691, p. 329.

GEORGE NOTT'S UNPUBLISHED EDITION

are concerned, P was in page-proof before Nott published (or at least wrote some of the notes for) his Surrey volume of 1815.¹ But that it had not been published is proved by the numerous references to it in the Wyatt volume of 1816 as "Tottel's Songs and Sonnets, Ed. 1816"² and "the late edition of Tottel's Songs and Sonnets."³ These references indicate that Nott had stopped work on the miscellany to complete the Surrey-Wyatt edition, but that he had expected to issue the former in 1816. For one reason or another he failed to do so. I think it likely that a few of the manuscript notes in P are later than 1816, and perhaps that some of the collations are. In 11623. ff.1 Nott, in collating his reprint of B with A, inserted the readings of A in the text itself; and this seems to me to point to a date later than 1816 and, possibly, to an intended reprint based on A.

Mr. Byrom believes⁴ that P "could not have been destroyed in either of the two fires which are recorded to have devastated Bensley's printing offices — on November 5, 1807 (since we know it to have been printed after 1810), or on June 26, 1819 (since it was obviously earlier than the 1815-16 Surrey and Wyatt), and the note prefixed to [11607.i.7] asserting this is a misleading conjecture. The probability is, therefore, that some one else printed the work." "Unless, indeed," he adds in a foot-note, "publication of the edition was for some other reason abandoned, and the story of the fire was a mere invention to explain the absence of perfect copies." As I have shown above, however, P was not published earlier than 1816. Probably it was never actually published;⁵ and it is by no means unlikely that the much-postponed edition was destroyed by the fire of 1819 to which Mr. Byrom refers. I assign the reprint the date of 1814 simply because by that time the text and at least part of the notes were in type.

¹ In the Surrey volume he refers to P as the edition of 1810 on pp. 331, 335; of 1813 on p. 369; of 1814 on pp. 251, 286, 296, 307, 310 (twice), 329, 330, 331, 359; as the "late ed." on pp. 310, 360; and as the "new edition" on p. 367.

² E. g., pp. 541, 542 (three times), 545 (three times), 559, 562.

³ E. g., pp. 537, 545, 556.

⁴ The Review of English Studies, III (1927), 51.

⁵ Padelford (Anglia, xxix, 259-260) makes much of the fact that John Nott entered none of his books at Stationers' Hall, while G. F. Nott's Surrey and Wyatt was entered in the Stationers' Rolls immediately after its publication. The non-entry there of P suggests that it was not published, though Padelford interprets that fact as evidence of the editorship of John Nott.

INTRODUCTION

Nott was a man of great erudition.¹ How wide his reading was can hardly be appreciated by any one who has not examined the annotated copies of P. Mr. Byrom has pointed out the exhaustiveness of Nott's annotations on Grimald, particularly in the matter of sources. Almost equally learned are those, not yet published, on the poems of the uncertain authors.

2. NOTT'S EDITION 1815-1816

The Works/ of/ Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey/ and of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt/ the Elder./ [Rule]/ Edited by/ Geo. Fred. Nott, D.D. F.S.A./ Late Fellow of All Souls College/ Oxford./ [Rule]/ In Two Volumes./ Vol. I. [Vol. II.]/ [Rule]/ London:/ Printed by T. Bensley,/ Bolt Court, Fleet Street;/ for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown,/ Pater-noster-Row./ MDCCCXV. [MDCCCXVI.]/ (4^o)²

This edition, though written in a somewhat grandiloquent style, is enormously erudite.³ It is a mine of information (some of it to modern taste superfluous) about the poems and lives and times of Wyatt and Surrey, a mine to which all present-day students of those poets are heavily indebted. Of course Nott paid no attention to Tottel's Miscellany except for its connection with Wyatt and Surrey; that is, he did not edit it completely; but his texts, based on a collation of the manuscripts with the miscellany and printed in modernized spelling and punctuation, were the best that had appeared, and on them later nineteenth-century editors made almost no improvement. They have since been rendered obsolete by the investigations of Miss Foxwell and Mr. Padelford; the biographical sketches, too, have naturally been expanded and, in certain particulars, corrected; and a few additions have

¹ On his life and works see The Gentleman's Magazine, n. s., xvii (1842), 106-107, and the Dictionary of National Biography.

² Volume I contains about nine hundred pages, volume II about eight hundred, and in each there are various illustrations. The pagination is extremely involved and confused, especially in the first volume, where the signatures run as follows: [a⁴], a⁴, b², b-s⁴, s^{*2}, t-20⁴, B-2G⁴, 2G^{*4}, 2G^{4}, [2G^{4}], 2H-2Z⁴, 3A-3Q⁴, 3R², B-X⁴. In most cases they are signed in twos; 3C3 (on p. 379) is misprinted for 3C2.

From this point onward I do not reproduce the typography of the title-pages or give exact bibliographical descriptions.

³ The irreverent will note with some amusement that in spite of the pious, almost sanctimonious, tone of the preface to volume II, Nott dedicated his work to the Prince Regent.

SANFORD AND ALDINE EDITIONS

been made to Nott's notes on sources. But no other one individual has yet done such good work in explaining and illustrating the miscellany poems as did Nott. His edition, made at a time when modern scholarship was in its infancy, merits high admiration and high praise, and in many ways still remains the best that has appeared.

R. SANFORD'S EDITION 1819

Ezekiel Sanford, The Works of the British Poets, 50 vols., 12°, Philadelphia, 1819-1823 (vols. 18-21, 23, 25-50, edited by Robert Walsh).

Volume 1 contains, pp. 283-335, "Select Poems of Sir Thomas Wyatt. With a Life of the Author, by Ezekiel Sanford" (Nos. 65-81, 83-123, 266-271); pp. 337-364, "Select Poems of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey. With a Life of the Author, from Campbell" (Nos. 2, 5, 9, 12, 13, 15, 20, 24, 30, 31). Though Sanford says nothing whatever about the source of his text, he apparently attempted to reproduce that of Chalmers (O).

S. ALDINE EDITION 1831

(1) The Poems of Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey/ [Device]/ London/ William Pickering/ 1831/

Collation: 8°, pp. lxxix, 188, with frontispiece portrait. P. [i] fly-leaf, "The Aldine Edition/ Of the British/ Poets/ [Ornament]/ The Poems of Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey"/; verso blank: p. [iii] title: p. [iv] imprint: pp. [v]-vii "Contents.": p. [viii] blank: pp. [ix]-x "Index of First Lines.": pp. [xi]-lxxix "Memoir of Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey.": p. [lxxx] blank: pp. [1]-188 Surrey's poems (including Nos. 243 and 278).

(2) The Poetical Works of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt/ [Device]/ London/ William Pickering/ 1831/

Collation: 8°, pp. xcvi, 244, with frontispiece portrait. P. [i] fly-leaf, "The Aldine Edition/ Of the British/ Poets/ [Ornament]/ The Poems of Sir Thomas Wyatt"/; verso blank: p. [iii] title: p. [iv] imprint: pp. [v]-xlii "Memoir of Sir Thomas Wyatt.": pp. xliii-lii "Sir Thomas Wyatt's Letter to the Privy Council in 1541.": pp. liii-lxxxvii "Sir Thomas Wyatt's Defence, after the Indictment and Evidence": p. [lxxxviii] blank: pp. [lxxxix] xcvi "Contents.": pp. [1]-197 Wyatt's poems: p. [198] blank: p. [199] fly-leaf, "Penitential Psalms.": verso blank: pp. [201] 236 Psalms: p. 237 "An Epitaph of Sir Thomas Gravenor,/ Knight.": p. 238 "Sir Antonie Sentleger of Sir T. Wyatt.": pp. 239-244 "Index of First Lines."

INTRODUCTION

Notwithstanding their title-pages, the British Museum catalogue dates these volumes 1830. The editor, who is said to have been Sir Nicholas Harris Nicolas, speaks severely of G. F. Nott's textual methods, and asserts that "the present edition has been printed from the collection of Surrey's pieces by Tottel in 1557, which was the first that appeared."¹ Nicolas quotes Nott's statement that there were "four distinct impressions" in 1557:² he gives no further particulars; but he follows the second edition C, whereas Nott had favored the readings of B as corrected from manuscripts. The Aldine text has no value; for Nicolas arbitrarily switches from one to another of the printed editions, and occasionally borrows from Nott's manuscript readings. In Nos. 7 and 8, for example, he apparently follows C (though varying its spelling); but at 9.6 he has fixed, which does not appear till D; at 9.25 doth she, whereas all the editions except B (did she) have she doth; at 12.23 Garret, which is found in B only. Again, he has Thomas [Wyatt] at 27.6, 22, where A-I read T. W.; at 27.34 the corpse, of which the first occurs in D, corps in *D; at 28.3 Wyatt, which appears in D and *D only; at 31.8 wearier, which is found in no early edition; and he modernizes the spelling, punctuation, and stanza-divisions throughout. Nicolas's work is in all respects inferior to that of Nott: his one contribution lies in his attack on the Fair Geraldine theory that had colored Nott's every comment on Surrey.

Another edition appeared in 1831 with the title: "The Poetical Works of/ Surrey and Wyatt/ [Device]/ Vol I [Vol II]/ London/ William Pickering/ 1831/." Volume I has pages cxiv, 190; volume II, pages xii, 290. The contents and page-arrangement are identical with those of the other Aldine edition; but, since the preliminary matter is shifted so that volume I contains the memoirs of both Surrey and Wyatt, the page-numbering differs.

Other editions based on S may be dismissed briefly.

S. (a) AMERICAN EDITION 1854

This consists of two volumes (8°, pp. lxxii, 190, and pp. xc, one unpagged leaf, 244, respectively, each with frontispiece portrait), and with the following titles:

(1) The/ Poetical Works/ of/ Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey./ With a Memoir./ Boston:/ Little, Brown and Company./ New York:

¹ Surrey's Poems, p. lxxviii.

² Page lxxvii.

BELL'S EDITION

Evans and Dickerson./ Philadelphia: Lippincott, Grambo and Co./ M.DCCC.LIV./

(2) The/ Poetical Works/ of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt./ With a Memoir./ Boston:/ Little, Brown and Company./ New York: Evans and Dickerson./ Philadelphia: Lippincott, Grambo and Co./ M.DCCC.LIV./

In these volumes the text of S is reproduced.

S. (b) BELL'S EDITION 1854

The general title-page of Bell's series, as given in his Wyatt volume,¹ is:

The/ Annotated Edition/ of the/ English Poets./ By/ Robert Bell,/ Author of/ 'The History of Russia,' 'Lives of the English Poets,' etc./ In Monthly Volumes, 2s. 6d. each, in cloth./ London:/ John W. Parker and Son, West Strand./ 1854./

This was issued in twenty-four volumes, 1854-1857. Those that concern us are entitled:

(1) Poetical Works/ of/ Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey/ Minor Contemporaneous Poets/ and/ Thomas Sackville, Lord Buckhurst/ Edited by Robert Bell/ [Device]/ London/ John W. Parker and Son West Strand/ 1854/

(2) Poetical Works/ of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt/ Edited by Robert Bell/ [Device]/ London/ John W. Parker and Son West Strand/ 1854/

In the latter are included all the poems attributed to Wyatt in B-I; in the former, all the poems attributed to Surrey in B-I, plus Nos. 243 and 278, and, in the "Minor Poets" section of the volume (pages 207-227, 231-256), the ten attributed to Grimald in B-I,² with the same fourteen poems by uncertain authors (Nos. 170, 174, 175, 181, 193, 199, 209-212, 246, 273, 303, 304) that Anderson prints. Bell remarks (Surrey, page 36): "The text of this edition has been carefully revised and collated with preceding editions [that is, modern editions]; the variances between them and the manuscripts referred to by Dr. Nott have been compared, that which seemed to be the best reading being in all cases adopted; and the original order and headings of the poems, as they were

¹ It differs in the Surrey volume by reading "Edited by" in line 5, carrying over "etc." in line 8 as a separate line, and substituting a device for line 9.

² They are headed here, as in HI, "Songs written by N. G. of the Nine Muses."

INTRODUCTION

first published, have been restored." An examination shows, however, that the order, headings, and readings come direct from the Aldine edition (S), so far as it goes. For example, Bell follows S in substituting "a wearier lover" for "a wearied lover" in the title of No. 36, although that reading appears in none of the original editions. Occasionally in the Wyatt-Surrey section Bell changed the Aldine text in matters of spelling (especially in putting ed for 'd, thus destroying the movement), capitalization, and punctuation; but his changes apparently represent little or no original work on the text and are all for the worse.¹ Whence came his text for the fourteen poems by uncertain authors I have not tried to discover.

S. (c) GILFILLAN-CLARKE'S EDITION 1856-1879

(1) The/ Poetical Works/ of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt./ With Memoir and Critical Dissertation./ The Text Edited by Charles Cowden Clarke./ Cassell Petter & Galpin:/ London, Paris & New York./

(2) The/ Poetical Works/ of William Shakspeare, and the/ Earl of Surrey./ With Memoir and Critical Dissertation./ The Text Edited by Charles Cowden Clarke./ Cassell Petter & Galpin:/ London, Paris & New York./

The British Museum catalogue dates the second volume 1878, but notes that it forms part of "Cassell's Library Edition of British Poets," being "a reprint of the Edinburgh edition of 1856, with a new title-page."² Another issue had appeared in 1862 with the imprint, "Edinburgh: James Nichol./ London: James Nisbet and Co. Dublin: W. Robertson. Liverpool: G. Philip & Son./ M.DCCC.LXII./" According to the same catalogue, Clarke's Wyatt volume was published in 1879, likewise in "Cassell's Library." The earliest copy that I have seen has the title: "The/ Poetical Works/ of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt./ With Memoir and Critical Dissertation,/ by the/ Rev. George Gilfillan./ Edinburgh:/ James Nichol, 104 High Street./ London: James Nisbet & Co. Dublin: W. Robertson./ M.DCCC.LVIII./"

Clarke's two volumes are octavos of pages xlvii, 211, and xl, 316, respectively. In the second, pages [215]-316 are devoted to Surrey. The text used is not specified, but a hasty collation indicates that it was S, and that the editing of Gilfillan's 1856 text referred to on the title-pages was extremely superficial.

¹ Thus he changed Lux, the first word of No. 92, to Look!; The restfull place, of No. 62, to Thou! restful place!; and What man hath hard, of No. 68, to Who hath heard of.

² I have not seen the 1856 edition.

THE SECOND ALDINE EDITION

S. (d) ALDINE EDITION 1866

(1) The/ Poems of Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey/ [Device]/ London/ Bell and Daldy Fleet Street/ 1866/

(2) The Poetical Works of/ Sir Thomas Wyatt/ [Device]/ London/ Bell and Daldy Fleet Street/ 1866/

These octavo volumes have pages lxxvi, 180, and civ, 243, respectively. The "Advertisement" to the former says: "The present work, although substantially a reprint of the Aldine edition . . . published in 1831, has been critically and carefully revised, and some additional notes appended explanatory of words now become obsolete. The Poems have been collated with the edition of the 'Songs and Sonnets,' edited by Bishop Percy and George Steevens [i. e., N], as well as by the recent reprint [T] of the first edition of 'Tottel's Miscellany,' by John Payne Collier, Esq., whose ready kindness is acknowledged for the loan of the sheets of that rare work."¹ The collation spoken of was superficially carried out: for example, the readings Garret, the corpse, [Wyatt], Wyatt commented on above,² are retained from the 1831 text, but doth she is changed to she doth. Hence the 1866 text has no real authority and is of little value. Its editor is said to have been James Yeowell. A re-issue of this edition bears the imprint of Bell and Daldy, York Street, Covent Garden, and (on what authority I do not know) is assigned the date of "1871?" in the Harvard library catalogue.

T. COLLIER'S REPRINT 1867

Seven English/ Poetical/ Miscellanies,/ Printed between 1557 and 1602./ Reproduced/ under the care of/ J. Payne Collier./ [Ornament]/ London./ 1867./ (4°)

Tottel's Miscellany, the first of Collier's series, has no separate title-page. It was issued in three parts (which reached the British Museum on April 21, 1868), the first of them (pp. 1-124) accompanied by a "Notice" that announces:

"The cost of the first Part of the Reprint is 10 s.; and the other two Parts will, as nearly as possible, be of the same bulk and price. Thus the expense of each of the fifty copies (consisting of more than 350 pages) will be, as originally stated, 30 s. . . . the price of the whole undertaking has been somewhat enhanced by the unusual cost of an exact transcript, observing all the errors of the press, and the old mistakes of punctuation."

¹ Although Collier's reprints (see T, below) are dated 1867, the last of them, A Poetical Rhapsody, was issued before December 22, 1866 (see The Athenaeum for that date, p. 842).

² At p. 54.

INTRODUCTION

Actually the reprint runs to 299 pages, as follows: p. [1] Tottel's title-page: p. [2] "The Printer to the Reader": pp. [3]-43 Surrey's poems: pp. [44]-124 Wyatt's poems: pp. [125]-164 Grimald's poems: pp. 165-286 poems by uncertain authors: pp. 287-294 additional poems by Surrey: pp. 295-298 additional poems by Wyatt: p. [299] Tottel's colophon; verso blank.

In his "General Introduction" Collier boasts of having "discovered" A, whereas Park, Bohn, and Hazlitt certainly knew that it preceded B and C, while Nott had studied it carefully and in his edition P reprinted its thirty unique poems. In Notes and Queries, 3d series, x, 224, under the date of September 22, 1866, Collier made further preposterous claims for his reprint:

What purported to be the first edition was reprinted by Dr. Sewall in 1717, and by Bishop Percy, Dr. Nott, and Sir Harris Nicolas afterwards; but I discovered a copy which showed that they were all in error, and that the second edition had been all along mistaken for the first, which differs in many essential particulars, and clears away many corruptions. Nobody had ever heard of this first edition, and I reprinted it in three parts, at the cost of 72*l.* 10*s.*, or 1*l.* 5*s.* of each of my fifty copies.

Collier's reprint of Tottel's Miscellany sold well enough. "I had more claimants for it than I could supply," he explains, "so that here I was not out of pocket"; but with considerable bitterness he complains of the lack of interest in the whole series shown among those who should have been subscribers and buyers.¹

No doubt Collier deserves some credit, not for discovering, but for making fairly accessible, the text of A and in calling attention to its importance; but evidently he knew little or nothing about its variations from B and C. His assertion that "we have implicitly followed the edition we had the good fortune to discover; and our text represents the true language of the various poets," is, as usual, somewhat exaggerated.²

¹ Notes and Queries, 3d series, x, 220; The Athenaeum, July 28, 1866, p. 113.

² So in The Athenaeum, July 28, 1866, p. 113, he remarks: "As to type and paper, I boldly assert that the reprints are admirable — quite 'books of luxury,' as the French call them; and as to accuracy of text, I spare no pains to make my reproductions, even as to errors of punctuation, exactly represent the originals." The reprints that I have collated entire are, however, swarming with errors.

ARBER'S REPRINT

I have not collated the entire text with A, but a comparison of a dozen or so pages, widely separated in A and chosen at random, suggests that his reprint is fairly accurate.

U. ARBER'S EDITION 1870

English Reprints./ Tottel's Miscellany./ Songes and Sonettes/ by/ Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey,/ Sir Thomas Wyatt, the Elder,/ Nicholas Grimald,/ and/ Uncertain Authors./ First Edition of 5th June; Collated with the Second/ Edition of 31st July, 1557./ By/ Edward Arber,/ Associate, King's College, London, F.R.G.S., &c./ London:/ 5 Queen Square, Bloomsbury, W.C./ Ent. Stat. Hall] 15 August,¹ 1870. [All Rights reserved./

Arber's is the best of the modern reprints up to the present time. It gives the text of A on pages 1-226 and of the thirty-nine additional poems of B on pages 227-271. Notes inserted in the text, in head-lines, and at the foot of the pages call the reader's attention to various changes made by B in the text of A; on pages ii-v, ix-xvi, 272, some valuable though haphazard biographical, bibliographical, and historical notes are supplied; while pages vi-viii are devoted to a poorly alphabetized, but still fairly serviceable, index of first lines. Issued at an extremely low price and in a convenient small octavo, Arber's reprint has been the only copy of Tottel's book available to the majority of students, — particularly in America, — and it has helped to make Tottel's the best known of the Tudor poetical miscellanies.

So indispensable has it been that to speak severely of its defects would be ungrateful. It must be said, however, that although the reprint purports to be an exact reproduction, it is unsuccessful. It does not, of course, attempt to reproduce the pagination, line-arrangement, or typography of the original, — a fact of no real importance. But even in the matter of typography perhaps some objection might be raised to Arber's methods: for example, the titles of poems in A and B are everywhere in roman type; this Arber properly represents by italics, though when proper names occur in the titles he arbitrarily prints them in roman letter.² Perhaps, too, when he transfers the headings at 93.1

¹ Other issues have the date of "1 October."

² In some dozen cases, however, he puts the proper name in italics (as in Nos. 8, 15, 32, 44, 63, 97, etc.); in one case (No. 29) he uses both types for proper names in the same title; in No. 201 he prints Thestilis in italics and in No. 234 in roman. But on and 121.1 into large capitals he gives a somewhat inexact idea of the original.

INTRODUCTION

But there are genuine faults to be pointed out. All through the text misprints are corrected with no notice whatever; and all contractions, like ſ, cā, w̄, ȳ, ẏ, are silently expanded, the last two into the abnormal and indefensible spelling of ye and yat. Passing over these deviations, I have in volume 1, pages 327-335, printed collations of his text with his originals. A glance through that list will show how serious some of his errors are. For instance, he omits words of the original, substitutes words of his own, changes the spelling and punctuation on no ascertainable plan, and introduces various new typographical errors.

All this is bad enough, but the damage is perhaps increased by the foot-notes. In them Arber gives what purport to be variants from the second edition — that is, B; for his notes do not recognize the highly significant variations in the readings of B and C. The impression any careful reader of Arber's reprint gets is that all the variants, at least of B, are enumerated. This impression is ill-grounded: not a twentieth of them are given, and many that are enumerated have no importance. On page 171, for example, Arber lists seven variants, five of which differ from A in capitalization only, one in spelling only, one in both capitalization and spelling. Why these seven are singled out for attention is inexplicable, for in practically every line A varies from B and from C in spelling, capitalization, or punctuation. Furthermore, many of Arber's variants are imaginary: that is, he introduces an incorrect reading into his text, and then in a foot-note calls attention to the correct reading, which he attributes to B. As an example, on page 160 he transposes two lines in his reprint of A, gives the reading of B in a note, and adds, "The rhyme in couplets shows that the Second edition is here the correct reading." In my collations I have marked with an asterisk the numerous other instances of this kind of blundering. Evidently Arber depended on a careless copyist. Then when the first impression of his text was collated with C, he failed to consult A again, assuming instead that all the readings of his own text were correct.

The plates of this edition were bought by Messrs. Constable and Company, Ltd., who have issued reprints with slightly altered and

p. 226 he reproduces the colophon of A exactly as it stands in the original, as he does also the authors' names at the end of sections (31.25, 92.13, 120.22); while in No. 15 he follows A even in spelling windsor without a capital.

MISS FOXWELL'S WYATT

redated title-pages. The first that I have seen has the following title-page:

English Reprints/ Tottel's Miscellany/ Songes and Sonnettes/ by/Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey/ Sir Thomas Wyatt, the Elder/ Nicholas Grimald/ and/ Uncertain Authors/ First Edition of 5th June, Collated with/ the Second Edition of 31st July 1557/ Edited by/ Edward Arber/ F.S.A. etc. Late Examiner in English/ Language and Literature/ to the University of/ London/ Westminster/ A. Constable and Co./ 1897./

I have a copy with the imprint "Constable and Company Ltd/London Bombay Sydney/ 1921/" and apparently others have been issued in more recent years. These re-issues do Arber less than justice, for the plates are worn so badly that they make his work look more inaccurate than it actually is. Yet the re-issues have served, and no doubt will continue to serve, a useful purpose in providing cheap copies of a valuable miscellany for the general public.

V. MISS FOXWELL'S WYATT 1913

The Poems of/ Sir Thomas Wiat/ Edited/ from the MSS. and Early Editions/ by/ A. K. Foxwell, M.A. (Lond.)/ Lecturer in English,/
Late Lecturer and Tutor at the Ladies' College, Cheltenham/ Vol. 1/
Preface and Text/ [Vol. II/ Introduction/ Commentary/ Appendixes]/
London: University of London Press/ Published for the University of London Press, Ltd./ By Hodder and Stoughton, Warwick Square,
E. C./ 1913/

These octavo volumes have pages xxiv, 400 (with ten illustrations), and xxiv, 272 (with one illustration), respectively.

In 1909 Miss Foxwell issued a small volume called A Study of Sir Thomas Wyatt's Poems, giving an account of the manuscripts, the sources, and the metrical characteristics of the poems. Her edition of 1913, a continuation of the Study, made all of Wyatt's poems (three of them, in volume 1, pages 319, 325, 327, for the first time) accessible. It provided also some biographical as well as some explanatory material, with reprints of various source-poems, and discussions of Wyatt's prosody based not on Tottel's more or less corrupt texts but upon the manuscripts, some of them holograph. Nineteen of the poems, however, she reprinted from the miscellany.¹ This is the only critical edition of Wyatt yet made, though it was carelessly planned and carelessly printed.

INTRODUCTION

The bibliography attached to the Study indicates that Miss Foxwell consulted but four of the early printed editions of Tottel's Miscellany (BDGH), and it seems likely that for A and B she relied on Arber's reprint. In any case, her collations of the manuscripts with AB are not always to be trusted: they have many faulty readings, a number of which appear to be taken from Arber's inaccurate text. Furthermore, as a glance at the facsimile opposite page 272 of her first volume will show, her transcription of the manuscripts does not uniformly attain literal accuracy.² To conclude an ungrateful task of criticism, it may be noted that she is, no doubt pardonably, over-enthusiastic about Wyatt's merits, and that her comments on the influence the printed editions of Chaucer had on Wyatt, as well as some of her biographical interpretations (for example, her reiterated suggestion that the Duchess of Richmond, as in No. 93, represents Wyatt's ideal of womanhood), are sheer assertions that will convince nobody. Faults aside, Miss Foxwell's book is indispensable for any serious student of Wyatt and of the miscellany. To its later editors of the poet will be greatly indebted.

W. PADEFORD'S SURREY 1920

University of Washington Publications/ Language and Literature/
Volume 1 October, 1920/ The Poems of Henry Howard/ Earl of Surrey/Frederick Morgan Padelford/ [Seal of the University]/ University of Washington Press/ Seattle/ (8°, pp. 238).

¹ But in the "Contents," p. xxii, of her first volume of Wyatt's poems, she lists only fourteen as coming from the miscellany. See p. 95, below. It is extremely difficult to follow Miss Foxwell's statements about her texts, but after long study one finds that she reprinted from A Nos. 74, 76-78, 80, 81, 84, 101, 105-109, 113, 114, 117, 119, 269, 270, and that of those nineteen only one (No. 101), according to her statements, is also found in MS. No. 101 she declares at 1, 43, appears in MS. Egerton 2711, but in her table of contents (1, xviii) she locates it only in the miscellany and in MS. Additional 28635.

² On p. 272, line 3, she prints save the as save thee; line 7, hathe as hath; line 9, ys as is; and in the refrains she prints only one Say with a capital instead of both. Again, the facsimiles in volume 1, facing pp. 2 and 45, reveal that she misprints from the former wherof (line 3) as whereof, unarmed (line 6) as unarmed, and from the latter greuously (line 3) as grevously, kisse (line 6) as kysse.

PADELFORD'S SURREY

In this edition are reprinted, among others, all the poems attributed to Surrey in A-I plus Nos. 243 and 282,¹ while in the Appendix Nos. 181 and 201 are given as 'not improbably' by Surrey. No autograph copies of Surrey's poems are known to exist; the manuscripts that do survive are later in date than Tottel's Miscellany (except for Nos. 17 and 29²) and no doubt like it contain many revisions or corruptions of the poet's original lines. Accordingly, there can be little certainty as to Surrey's text. Still, as an attempt at the first critical edition of the poems this is a valuable book, and its introductory and explanatory notes are sometimes excellent. Unhappily it is disfigured by many misprints and inexact readings, some of which work disaster with the text of the poems, and several of which were evidently caused by a too close dependence on Arber's reprint of the miscellany. For instance, in both Arber's and Padelford's reprint No. 201 begins "Thestilis is a sely man," whereas A-I have "Thestilis a sely man."³ So, too, in various passages the text of A, or of the manuscripts, is not reproduced literatim; nor are the collations of AB with the manuscripts always exact. Students, however, have cause to be grateful to Mr. Padelford; for, perhaps to a greater degree than any other contemporary scholar, he ¹ The order of poems is altogether different from that of A-I, and all the titles are rewritten in shorter form. These titles are in modern spelling; but in the case of Nos. 6, 7, 12, 15, 17, 19, 29 (Padelford's Nos. 4-6, 31, 21, 33, 38) the editor omits the apostrophe in possessive nouns, printing odd forms like "Loves Extremes" and "Lady Surreys Lament." Mr. Padelford has re-issued his work — in what the title-page describes as a "revised edition" — under the date of October, 1928. This book was published too late to be referred to by me. It is hardly a revised edition, but is rather, as p. vii calls it, a "second edition." Except that part of the Introduction has been rewritten, most of the book is unchanged, so that the comments in the foregoing paragraph apply as well to it as to the first edition of 1920. Many new misprints are introduced, various old misprints are retained. Thus Miss A(gnes). K. Foxwell appears as Miss Ada on p. 45, as Miss Ida on p. 222; Harrington continues to be misspelled as Harrington (p. 259), Steevens as Stevens (p. 260). John Nott is still said (pp. 260-261) to have edited the "1812" edition of the miscellany, G. F. Nott to have borrowed from that work without acknowledgment; T. Sewell is still credited with having manuscript notes in the British Museum copy of the 1717 edition of the miscellany, which instead G. Sewell edited; and so on. It is too bad that with an opportunity to get out a revised edition (a blissful opportunity that seldom comes to a scholar) the editor failed to take advantage of it.

² On which cf. p. 97 n. 1, below.

³ In his variant readings (p. 170) he gives the reading of A at 3.13 as the shade instead of shade (an error made by Arber); but, curiously enough, he also lists night as a variant reading at 3.27, although night is the correct reading found in his own text (p. 49), in Arber, and in A.

INTRODUCTION

has stimulated interest in Surrey, and by his researches he has made possible a more intelligent study of that poet.

The foregoing books are all that it seems necessary to mention, though a few minor editions of Wyatt and Surrey have been omitted. Works on special topics connected with the miscellany, as well as Dr. Merrill's edition of Grimald, are cited elsewhere in the Introduction or the Notes.

The present edition is based upon a study of the nine sixteenth-century editions,¹ and is the first with a critical apparatus of introduction, notes, glossary, and variant readings. In volume I, I have reprinted the first edition (A), as well as the additional poems of the second edition (B) from the Grenville copy in the British Museum. In the Variant Readings and Misprints A is fully collated with B-I, the new poems of B with C-I. Each edition, then, is in effect collated with every other one.²

Although my reprint of A does not aim to be an exact facsimile, yet, thanks to the skill and interest of the Harvard University Press (to all the members of which I am deeply obligated), it has much of the appearance and flavor of the original. A is reprinted page for page, line for line; but in reprinting the additional poems of B it was of course impossible to keep their exact pagination.³ They are, however, reprinted line for line, and are numbered continuously from the last poem in A. The order in which they occur in B-I and the signatures on which they appear are indicated elsewhere in this Introduction and in the Notes. The pages in my volumes are so much larger than those of A that it was impossible to reproduce the original spacing of words and lines with complete exactness. Nevertheless, they closely imitate the arrangement and spacing of the original head-lines and titles, and vary but occasionally and slightly in the line-arrangement of the verses. For ease of reading and for economy, all the black-letter type in the texts and key-words has been transferred to roman. Apart from that change

¹ There were really ten sixteenth-century editions if B and C are counted as separate editions.

² *D is not collated: see p. 25, above.

³ As a matter of fact, in my reprint pp. 242, 243, 246-258 follow the page-divisions of B exactly; so, indeed, do pp. 218-236, except that the rectos of B are printed on the versos of my pages, and vice versa.

THE CONTRIBUTORS

the typography of A and B is followed exactly, with the title-page and colophon in type-facsimile. Throughout the text the long f has been printed s.

The miscellany has, in a word, been reprinted with as few editorial changes as possible. Only the most obvious misprints, like inverted, transposed, or broken letters, or like words faultily run together or separated, are corrected; and even these are noted in the Variant Readings. Other errors are allowed to remain in the text, but are corrected in the Notes or mentioned in the descriptions of the editions on pages 7-12, 16-17, 20-36. Line-numbers and page-numbers are, of course, editorial insertions, as are also the bracketed numbers, from 1 to 310, that precede the titles. The original punctuation is retained throughout.

VII. THE CONTRIBUTORS

For reasons of his own, Tottel made no parade of the authors concerned in his publication: in the first edition he names only three — Surrey, Wyatt, Grimald — and in all subsequent editions replaces Grimald's name with his initials N. G. On the title-pages of all the sixteenth-century editions the only name given is that of "the ryght honorable Lorde Henry Haward late Earle of Surrey," — Wyatt, Grimald, and the uncertain authors being dismissed in the laconic phrase "and other." Probably enough, Surrey's name appears on the title-page, just as his poems come first in the text, because of his rank. But Tottel evidently esteemed Wyatt as highly as Surrey, for he gives them equal attention in his preface, speaking of "the weightinesse of the depewitted sir Thomas Wyat the elders verse." I suggest that he omitted Wyatt's name solely from the fear that it might be confused with that of his son, the unfortunate Sir Thomas Wyatt, usually called "the younger," who in 1554 had been executed for rebellion against Queen Mary. The miscellany throughout reveals an editor who worked nervously with his eye on political conditions and possible censorship. One of the poems (No. 279) seems to be a veiled account of Wyatt's rebellion; another (No. 205) originally mentioned young Wyatt, but the reference was omitted in the miscellany; for, since "Wyatt" was a name with a sound odious to the ears of the government, Tottel would hardly have jeopardized the success of his volume by advertising the connection of the traitor's father with it. Caution, too, is seen in the qualifying phrase of "the elder" that is added after Wyatt's name in the preface, in the titles of Nos. 29, 263, 273, at the top of page 211, and at the end of No. 127.

INTRODUCTION

The miscellany itself bears testimony to the value attached to Wyatt's work by including five poems in his honor, four of them (Nos. 29-31, 263) by Surrey, the fifth (No. 273) by St. Leger. Yet the featuring of Surrey's name on the title-page had a curious effect in exaggerating his importance at the expense of Sir Thomas Wyatt. Thus in The Defence of Poesy (about 1580) Sir Philip Sidney, evidently with the entire miscellany in mind, referred to Surrey but neglected Wyatt and Grimald completely; and whenever other Elizabethan critical writers mentioned Wyatt, they usually characterized him as inferior or subordinate to Surrey.¹ That habit continued till at least the middle of the nineteenth century, with Surrey always preceding Wyatt in any discussion of the miscellany, and with editors like Nott and Nicolas christening their editions The Works of Surrey and Wyatt. Critical opinion generally went on the calm assumption that the two poets were exact contemporaries, or even that Wyatt was Surrey's disciple; till Nott, whose penchant for Surrey kept him from being fair to Wyatt, declared,² "Surrey soon became Wyatt's master in poetic composition; but in the first instance he must have been his scholar." *The Edinburgh Review*³ took Nott to task for editing Wyatt in as great bulk as Surrey:

The credit Dr. Nott might have procured, as an unostentatious enthusiast for great genius, on the strength of his first volume, he is in danger of losing, from the unwarrantable zeal for proportion which he has exhibited in his second. . . . Sir Thomas Wyatt was a man of wit, a shrewd observer, a subtle politician; but, in no true sense of the word, was he a poet; and as our object . . . is to consider poets and poetry, we shall here take our leave of him at once.

Actually Wyatt was the older man as well as the pioneer; Surrey was his ardent disciple and a personal friend of the younger Wyatt. Recog-

¹ Thus the compiler of England's Parnassus (1600) attributes eleven quotations to Surrey (from Nos. 2, 57, 63, 133, 171, 176, 177, 197, 270); but Charles Crawford, editing the Parnassus in 1913, shows that four of them are from Wyatt, one from Grimald, five from mistaken or unknown authors, and (p. 269) only one from Surrey. See the Parnassus, pp. 543-544.

² In his Wyatt volume, p. lxxxvi.

³ xxvii (New York, 1817), 392.

OLD ATTRIBUTIONS OF AUTHORSHIP

dition of these facts is nowadays taken in the conventional order of names, Wyatt and Surrey.

Even yet, however, Surrey's name is the first that comes to mind when the miscellany is mentioned, largely because it is the only name that appears on the title-page. If one suddenly thinks of a poem in that volume, one perhaps almost instinctively associates it with Surrey, less commonly with Wyatt. Such has been the case ever since Elizabethan times. The contributions of Surrey and Wyatt, it should be observed, were printed without any author-headings¹ and were signed only at the end: hence very likely many people failed to grasp the attributions of authorship. The famous poet Michael Drayton, to illustrate, was an admiring student of the Songs and Sonnets, part of which he appears to have memorized. Nevertheless, he did not realize that all the poems before the signatures on pages 31 and 92 were Surrey's and Wyatt's respectively, and hence he thought No. 121 was written by Surrey or Sir Francis Bryan, although it is printed as Wyatt's. Drayton's misunderstanding was shared by William Fulman (†1688),² whose copy of E has on the fly-leaf the note:

From fol. 1. to the end of fol. 18. [Nos. 1-36, 243, 262-265] seemes to be written by the Earle of Surrey, his Name being there added.

From thence to fol. 49. end. seems to be Sir Thomas Wiate the elders, who dyed of the plague at Shirburne 1541. his Name being likewise there added: And the next fol. beginning with the Title of Uncertaine Authors.

But some perhaps may be intermixed.

HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY

In A forty poems were assigned to Surrey. In B-I the number was apparently increased by one when No. 243, with the title of "An answer in the behalfe of a woman of an vncertain auctor," was inserted among his poems as an answer to No. 26; but the new title clearly states that No. 243 was composed by an unknown author. Various other poems have been attributed to Surrey, as is pointed out in the Notes. For example, by England's Parnassus (1600) his name is appended to several selections that do not belong to him,³ and by England's Helicon

¹ Except that in A (but not in B-I) Nos. 262-271 had such headings.

² See p. 28, above.

³ Cf. note 1 on p. 66, above.

INTRODUCTION

(1600) to reprints of Nos. 181 and 201; by George Turberville, John Weever, and Sir Richard Barckley he is regarded as the author of Nos. 278, 227, and 243 respectively; and in manuscripts he is credited with the composition of Nos. 174 and 282. As none of these ascriptions, however, except perhaps that of No. 282, can be taken seriously, and as No. 9 is very likely the work of Lord Vaux, Surrey's total remains at forty poems. But his importance is not to be measured by quantity, for in this respect he is equalled by Grimald.

Henry Howard, known by courtesy as the Earl of Surrey, was born about 1517 as the eldest son of Thomas Howard, third Duke of Norfolk, by his wife Lady Elizabeth Stafford, daughter of the Duke of Buckingham. His illustrious ancestry, which included royalty, and his equally illustrious family-connections made him the greatest noble of his own age, and contributed to the haughtiness and pride that eventually caused his ruin. Surrey himself, and no doubt others, thought his ancestry fully equal to that of the Prince of Wales (afterwards Edward VI), whose mother was Jane Seymour; for a time it was rumored that he was to marry the Princess (afterwards Queen) Mary; and he was the closest friend of Henry VIII's bastard, Henry Fitzroy, Duke of Richmond, a youth who married Surrey's sister Mary. Other impressive connections may be observed in the sketch of Surrey in the Dictionary of National Biography.¹

The facts of Surrey's life may be passed over rapidly. Educated under his mother's direction by a well-known tutor, John Clerk, Surrey in 1529, at the command of Henry VIII, became companion to the Duke of Richmond, with whom he lived for almost three years at Windsor Castle. His affection for that youth and his grief at Richmond's early death are touchingly recounted in No. 15.² Surrey and Richmond accompanied Henry to France in 1532, and were left at Paris for almost a year with the three sons of King Francis I. When they returned to England in October, 1533, Richmond, then about fifteen, was married to Surrey's fourteen-year-old sister, but the early death of the bridegroom made the marriage nominal.

¹ From this work and from Padelford's biographical sketch all my facts have been taken.

² See also "A lytyll ballet mayde of y^e yong duk' g^ace," printed from manuscript in The Yorkshire Archaeological and Topographical Journal, xi (1891), 201.

HENRY HOWARD, EARL OF SURREY

In the spring of 1532 Surrey had been married to Lady Frances de Vere, daughter of the Earl of Oxford, though because of their youth the two did not live together until some three years later. Their first child, Thomas (afterwards the fourth Duke of Norfolk), was born on March 10, 1536. In that year, too, Surrey perforce acted as earl marshal at the trial of his cousin, Queen Anne Boleyn, served with his father in crushing the rebellion known as the Pilgrimage of Grace, and was confined at Windsor for striking a courtier in the royal grounds of Hampton Court. During this confinement he wrote Nos. 8, 11, 15.

A period of marked royal favor culminating with the king's marriage to Catherine Howard on August 8, 1540, and ending with her execution on February 11, 1542, came to all the Howards. During that time Surrey was made Knight of the Garter, seneschal of the king's domain in Norfolk, and steward of Cambridge University. In July, 1542, he was again imprisoned for striking a courtier, John a Leigh, but was released shortly afterwards, and in the autumn accompanied his father to Scotland on a military expedition, returning to write certain poems (Nos. 29-31, 263) in honor of his master, Wyatt, recently deceased. A bit later he was confined to the Fleet prison for a riot in which he, with the younger Wyatt and other gay gallants, had broken windows about London with "pellets" from their stone-bows, as well as for the offense of eating meat in Lent; and in prison he whiled away the hours in writing a "satire" on London.

Military operations in France filled most of the years 1543 and 1544, with Surrey acting as governor of Boulogne and as lieutenant-general on land and sea of the English Continental possessions, till he was supplanted by his family rival, the Earl of Hertford (later Duke of Somerset and lord protector), as lieutenant-general on land, by Lord Lisle on sea, and by Lord Grey de Wilton as governor. Then, as the health of the king declined, enmity between the Howard and Hertford factions increased. In October, 1546, the latter found a trifling excuse to cause the poet's ruin.

On a charge of high treason he was committed to the Tower, December 12, and his father was also lodged there as an accomplice. The charge was based on the fact that Surrey had put the royal arms and the supposed arms of Edward the Confessor in his escutcheon, modifying the emblems with three silver labels in the first quarter of his arms, a sign used by Prince Edward to distinguish his arms from those of the king. Although later, at the accession of Queen Mary, Parliament passed an act authorizing the use of these arms by the Howards, yet it was alleged at the time that Surrey had expressed a treasonable intention to seize the throne on the death of Henry VIII in defiance of the rights of the prince. He was accordingly indicted for high treason, tried by a hostile jury at the Guildhall on January 13, 1547, condemned to death, and executed on Tower Hill on January 19 before he had reached his thirtieth birthday — his only real crime being that he was the most brilliant and most accomplished aristocrat in England, and that he had too openly boasted of his royal descent. His father escaped execution because of the opportune death of Henry VIII on January 28, shortly after which he was released.

INTRODUCTION

In the midst of a brief and crowded life Surrey found time to write the poems that, thanks almost solely to Tottel's Miscellany,¹ made him famous. His special importance comes from the improvements he made on the models set by Wyatt; for his admiration of his master, attested by four poems in the miscellany, did not blind him to the elder writer's defects. It seems likely that Surrey consciously attempted to make his metrical accents fall in general upon words that were accented because of their importance, and upon the accented syllables of those words. He experimented, furthermore, with run-over lines, cesura-variations, and other prosodic matters in such a way as to make Wyatt seem antiquated by comparison and so acceptably as to affect the practice of subsequent poets. His metrical forms, too, were varied; especially noteworthy was his introduction of blank verse into English (in his translation of Virgil's Aeneid, books II and IV) and his establishment of the so-called English, or Shakespearean, form of the sonnet. The great advance of Surrey over Wyatt can perhaps best be seen by a comparison of the manuscript copies of Nos. 6 and 37, poems translated from the same sonnet of Petrarch. Modern readers may find Surrey's subjects too conventional or insincere, his images and diction too artificial or naïve, for complete enjoyment; but in the history of English poetry his position is high and secure.

It is not surprising that Surrey rapidly became a figure of romance among the Elizabethans, who regarded him as the first modern verse-

¹ At least Nos. 27 and 31 were published before the miscellany was compiled.

SURREY AND GERALDINE

writer, as the greatest poet since Chaucer. When the miscellany itself was published, ten years after his death, his alleged connection with "Geraldine" was already common rumor, as is shown by the title of No. 8;¹ further countenance was given to the rumor by Richard Stanyhurst in the description of Ireland that in 1577 he published in Holinshead's Chronicles; and from this small beginning sprang the romantic farrago in Thomas Nashe's novel, The Unfortunate Traveller, or The Life of Jack Wilton (1594),² the hero of which meets the Earl of Surrey in Holland and as a page accompanies him on his travels. Among various other impossible episodes, Nashe tells how in Germany Surrey consulted the German alchemist Cornelius Agrippa (who really died in 1535) in regard to Geraldine's welfare and was shown her image in a magic mirror, "sicke weeping on her bed, and resolu'd all into deuout religion for the absence of her Lord"; and how "he published a proud challenge in the Duke of Florence court against all commers, (whether Christians, Turkes, Iewes, or Saracens,) in defence of his Geraldines beautie." In the combats that followed, the doughty earl "made all his encounterers new scoure their armor in the dust: so great was his glory that day as Geraldine was therby eternally glorifid . . . the trumpets proclaimed Geraldine the exceptionlesse fayrest of women."

Perhaps Nashe told this yarn with tongue in cheek, but the credulity with which it was accepted for more than two hundred years is amazing. Thus Michael Drayton, a generous admirer of the miscellany poets, believed Nashe's story without qualification, and made use of it in his Englands Heroicall Epistles (1598). One of the poems in that volume, "Henry Howard Earle of Surrey to Geraldine" (M6-N2^v), has the following argument:

Henry Howard, that true noble Earle of Surrey, and excellent Poet, falling in loue with Geraldine; descended of the noble family of the Fitzgeralds of Ireland, a faire and modest Lady; & one of the honorable maydes to Queen Katherine Dowager: eternizeth her prayses in many excellent Poems, of rare and sundry inuentions: and after some fewe yeares, being determined to see that famous Italy, the source and Helicon of al excellent Arts; first visiteth that renowned Florence, from whence the *Gerald*s challenge their descent,

¹ See also the note on 12.23.

² R. B. McKerrow's Nashe, II (1904), 187-328 (the quotations are on pp. 254, 271, 278). The novel was registered for publication on September 17, 1593 (Arber's Transcript, II, 636).

INTRODUCTION

from the ancient family of the Geraldî: there in honour of his mistresse he aduanceth her picture: and challengeth to maintaine her beauty by deedes of Armes against all that durst appeare in the lists, where after the prooue of his braue and incomparable valour, whose arme crowned her beauty with eternall memory, he writeth this Epistle to his dearest Mistris.

With Nashe and Drayton to vouch for it, belief in the Surrey-Geraldine romance spread until these "lovers" became the English equivalent of Dante and Beatrice or Petrarch and Laura. Thus, during the interregnum Nicholas Hookes, in his Amanda, a Sacrifice to an Unknown Goddess, 1653, F5, referred to the story as follows:

"Were Surrey travel'd now to Tuskanie,
"Off'ring to reach his gauntlet out for thee;
"If on the guilt tree in the List he set,
"Thy pretty, lovely, pretty counterfeit,
"All Planet-struck with those two stars, thy eyne,
"(Outshining farre, his heav'nly Geraldine;)
"There would no staffe be shiver'd, none would dare,
"A beautie with Amanda's to compare.

And even into the sober pages of the Athenae Oxonienses (1692)¹ Anthony Wood inserted part of Nashe's narrative.

In the eighteenth century it seems to have met with no skeptics. It was evidently in the mind of Elijah Fenton when in 1711 he wrote that "Surrey's numbers glow'd with warm desire";² and it was definitely mentioned two years later by Pope in Windsor Forest. Hence George Sewall, editing Tottel's Miscellany in 1717,³ wrote smugly of Surrey's romance: "It is uncertain what Success his Passion and his Poetry obtained, but Mr. Drayton would made [sic] us believe that their Loves were far from being criminal, which I think we at this distance of time ought not in good manners to question." Henry Curll, evidently in the hope of attracting romantic readers, gave to a collection of Surrey's poems that stood immovably on his book-shelves the new title of The Praise of Geraldine (1728).⁴ Elizabeth Cooper's Historical and Poetical Medley: or Muses Library (1738)⁵ asserted that Surrey "became first eminent for his Devotion, to the beautiful Geraldine,

¹ Ed. Philip Bliss, I (1813), 154-155.

² "An Epistle to Mr. Southerne," Poetical Works, 1779, p. 46.

³ Pages xii-xiii.

⁴ See pp. 39, 42-43, above.

⁵ Pages 55-56.

SURREY AND GERALDINE

Maid of Honour to Queen Catherine: "Twas she first inspir'd Him with Poetry, and that Poetry has made her Immortal." Horace Walpole, in A Catalogue of the Royal and Noble Authors of England, Scotland, and Ireland (1758),¹ accepted the story without question, and his account of Geraldine herself won the approval of Thomas Warton, who retold it in his History of English Poetry (1781).² George Ellis also fully believed in the love-story when he got out the second edition (1801) of his Specimens of the Early English Poets,³ and Sir Walter Scott included a song based upon it in The Lay of the Last Minstrel (1805), canto vi, stanzas 16-20.

Although Alexander Chalmers, editing Surrey in The Works of the English Poets (1810),⁴ attacked the legend, it nevertheless reached its apogee in the romantic edition of Surrey issued by G. F. Nott in 1815.⁵ So thoroughly was Nott obsessed by it that he lost all sense of proportion and evidence, distorting his material, changing the order and titles of poems to make them harmonize with his preconceived ideas, and connecting every love-poem of Surrey's with the always capitalized Fair Geraldine. Perhaps it was not altogether indefensible to give No. 8 the new title of "Surrey declares the Fair Geraldine to be the Mistress of his heart: and describes the place where he first saw, and first began to love her"; but in all other cases Nott drags the maiden in by the hair of the head — drags her into poems where she has no possible business.

Thus No. 262, which obviously is a purely conventional love-lament addressed to no specific person, Nott entitles "Surrey complains of the malice of fortune in separating him from the Fair Geraldine; but assures her that absence shall not diminish his love." A still better example of his contortions is No. 17, which he calls "In the person of a lady anxiously looking for the return of her absent lord, Surrey describes the state of his own mind, when separated from the Fair Geraldine." No. 243, unsigned in the manuscript and specifically attributed to an uncertain author in A I, Nott reprints with the preposterous title, "The Fair Geraldine retorts on Surrey the charge of artifice, and commends the person whom he considered to be his rival, as superior to him in courage and ability."

¹ Ed. Park, 1806, I, 262-267.

³ II, 46-47.

⁴ II, 311-359.

² Ed. Hazlitt, IV, 23-28.

⁵ See pp. 52-53, above.

INTRODUCTION

More rhapsodic still are Nott's annotations. A single illustration will suffice. Although it is clear that No. 264 is directed at Lady Stanhope, Nott entitles the poem "Surrey renounces all affection for the Fair Geraldine," juggles evidence in his notes to make it appear that the white wolf refers to the Fitzgerald coat of arms, and concludes the verses to be "an account of a quarrel between Surrey and the Fair Geraldine, which, as we hear nothing of any reconciliation afterwards, was the occasion probably of his renouncing his ill-fated passion."

Nott's romantic extravagance is a blemish on an otherwise admirable edition, and it effectually killed the legend he tried so hard to authenticate.¹ In reviewing his Surrey *The Edinburgh Review*² alludes significantly to "the more romantic fables" he relates. Nicolas, editing Surrey and Wyatt in 1831, remarked³ that Nott's treatment of No. 264 furnished "an amusing instance of first imagining a fact, and then making every circumstance support it. The learned editor, as in most other instances, assumes that Geraldine was the subject of the poem, without a shadow of evidence." At the present time nobody believes in the Surrey-Geraldine tale, which has been formally disproved by Courthope⁴ and Bapst.⁵

But Geraldine, or Elizabeth Fitzgerald, herself deserves a word. The youngest daughter of the ninth Earl of Kildare, she was born in Ireland about 1528 and was brought to England in 1533. In 1537 she entered the household of the Princess Mary at Hunsdon, whence she was transferred to that of Queen Catherine Howard in 1540. Surrey is supposed to have met her in March, 1537, and to have written No. 8 (the only poem, except possibly for No. 14, that can definitely be connected with her) in July, when Geraldine was some nine years of age

¹ But see Samuel Rogers, Human Life, 1819 (Complete Poetical Works, ed. Sargent, 1854, p. 186):

"Thou, all-accomplished SURREY, thou art known;
The flower of knighthood, nipt as soon as blown!
Melting all hearts but Geraldine's alone!"

See also the elaborate account of Geraldine in Mrs. K. B. Thomson's Celebrated Friendships, I (1861), 83-90, and the casual belief expressed in the story by Francis Hackett, Henry the Eighth (1929), p. 353.

² xxvii (1816), 392.

³ Surrey, p. 47 n.

⁴ A History of English Poetry, II (1897), 76-79.

⁵ Deux Gentilshommes-Poètes de la Cour de Henry VIII, 1891, ch. xv.

SIR THOMAS WYATT

and Surrey a married man of about nineteen and a father. "The truth probably is," Professor Padelford¹ justly remarks, "that Surrey whiled away an idle hour of confinement by composing a sonnet in compliment to a little girl of nine whose pretty face chanced to have caught his fancy. If he did for the time being accept her as the 'Laura' of his verse, it must have been in a spirit of playfulness. Most of his amatory verse is undertaken largely as a literary exercise, as any student of Renaissance polite verse must appreciate." In 1543, when she was fifteen, Geraldine became the second wife of Sir Anthony Browne, who was sixty, and after his death in 1548 she became the third wife of Sir Edward Clinton, first Earl of Lincoln. She died in March, 1589, and was buried in St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle.

SIR THOMAS WYATT THE ELDER

Wyatt was by far the most important contributor to the miscellany. In the first edition ninety-seven poems (Nos. 37-127, 266-271) were attributed to him, but in later editions that total was reduced to ninety-six by the attribution of No. 82 to an uncertain author. Other poems, like Nos. 149 and 261, have been loosely assigned to him in one place or another, but the assignments have no weight.

Wyatt² was born at Allington Castle, Kent, about 1503, and was sent to St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1516, when he was twelve years old; but the degrees usually assigned to him (B.A., 1518, M.A., 1520) are now said to have been granted instead to a John Wyat.³ His marriage to Elizabeth Brooke, daughter of Lord Cobham, took place in 1520, but long afterwards he was popularly supposed to be the lover of Anne Boleyn, whom he had met as a boy. His son, later known as the rebel, Sir Thomas Wyatt the younger, was born in 1521.

Barely twenty-one years old, Wyatt was appointed clerk of the king's jewels in 1524, a position which he held until about 1530. During 1525-1526 he was in France, and the next year he accompanied Sir John Russell on a mission to the pope at Rome and the council at Venice. After visiting various other Italian cities, he was taken prisoner by the

¹ The Poems of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, pp. 189-190.

² This sketch is based on the Dictionary of National Biography and Miss Foxwell's works.

³ John and J. A. Venn, Alumni Cantabrigienses, iv (1927), 480.

INTRODUCTION

imperial forces and held for ransom; but he escaped to Bologna, and from 1528 to 1532 served as marshal of Calais. Appointed to the Privy Council in 1533, he acted as chief "ewerer" at the coronation of Anne Boleyn, but by her downfall he was brought into trouble. In May, 1536, he was committed to the Tower to be held as a witness against Anne, but was released in June and sent to Allington Castle to remain under his father's charge. Henceforth he grew in favor with Cromwell and the king.

In 1536-1537 Wyatt officiated as sheriff for Kent, but in April, 1537, was appointed ambassador to Spain, and, except for a short visit to England, remained abroad till April or May, 1539. After a brief sojourn at Allington, to which he had succeeded on the death (November 10, 1537) of his father, Sir Henry, he was sent in November, 1539, as envoy to Emperor Charles V. Soon after his return to England (May, 1540) he saw Cromwell disgraced and executed, and he himself was arrested in the following January, imprisoned in the Tower on charges of treason, and deprived of his property. Two months later, however, a full pardon was granted him, and his position with the king seemed secure. But this favor he did not long live to enjoy. Sent in the autumn of 1542 to conduct the imperial ambassador from Falmouth to London, he fell ill on the journey, died at Sherborne, Dorset, and was buried there in the great church on October 11.

None of Wyatt's work was published during his lifetime. His metrical version of the Penitential Psalms, translated from Aretino during 1540-1541, was printed in 1549; but, except to the fortunate possessors of manuscript copies, his lyrics were known only by the selections in the miscellany, a book on which his reputation and influence in Elizabethan times were largely based.

The ninety-six poems in A-I consist of sonnets, epigrams, satires, and occasional miscellaneous forms. The inspiration behind most of them is Italian, and of the Italians Wyatt's chief masters were Petrarch and Serafino. In many cases the poems are translated so closely as to suggest mere literary, or language, exercises; for the most partial enthusiast must admit that Wyatt's genius was chiefly derivative. Few of his poems show traces of humanistic influence: of those that do, two epigrams translated from Ausonius and Pandulpho, two moral songs from Seneca and Boethius, two satires suggested (though perhaps indirectly through the Italian) by Horace, and a tiresome "Song of Iopas" indebted to Virgil make up the known total. Because Wyatt had a fondness for elaborate conceits, for grotesque imagery, his reputation has suffered greatly.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD

Many hard sayings, too, have been directed at his inability to write smoothly flowing lines and at his "carelessness" about accents; but some of this criticism has been based on Tottel's text rather than on Wyatt's, and hence should be ignored.¹ The uncertain accents, the strange pronunciations, the rough movement of his lines, are due to the practice of his time. He is no worse, he is indeed better, than his immediate contemporaries; but in any case he was the pioneer who fumbled in the linguistic difficulties that beset him and prepared the way for Surrey's smoother lines and more pleasing accentuation. Surrey, to be sure, improved on his model, but the importance of the model is only intensified by that fact. As no one at the present day is in danger of underestimating Wyatt's significance in the history of English verse, so no one should be tempted to put too high a value on his intrinsic merit. It is undoubtedly a good thing for his reputation among general readers to-day, as it was in the sixteenth century, that in the miscellany many of his texts were subjected to an editorial process that modernized even though it debased them.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD

So far as the first edition of the miscellany is concerned, Grimald ranks with Surrey in the number of his poems. By Tottel he is credited with the authorship of forty pieces, but it is not unlikely that Nos. 131 and 132 were composed by the N. Vincent and G. Blackwood whose names appear in the titles, instead of by Grimald.² In B-I his contributions were reduced to ten and his name was replaced by initials. As a result, he became an obscure figure whose very name few Elizabethans knew — a melancholy fact, since he doubtless hoped to be regarded as one of the 'fine poets' who, he tells us at 101.10, were so rare in the England of his day.

¹ As, for example, the criticism of No. 37 by Child in The Cambridge History of English Literature, III, 191 (American ed.).

² Apparently a similar case is that of Barnabe Googe's Eglogs, Epytaphes, and Sonettes, 1563 (Arber's reprint, pp. 80-83, 86-87, 92, 102-105), where two poems are by L. Blundeston, three by Alexander Neville, each an "answer" to a poem addressed to the person named as the writer. Other instances will be found in certain volumes by Turbervile and Thomas Howell.

INTRODUCTION

Grimald was born about 1519 at "Brownshold" (probably Leighton-Bromswold), Huntingdonshire, of an old yeoman family.¹ His elegy on his mother Annes, or Agnes (No. 162), is the chief source of information regarding his early life. He was educated at Christ's College, Cambridge, where he received the degree of B.A. in 1539-1540. In April, 1542, he was incorporated B.A. at Oxford; in May he was chosen probationer-fellow of Merton College; and in 1544 he became a Master of Arts of both Oxford and Cambridge. Cardinal Wolsey's foundation was re-opened in January, 1547, as Christ Church, and to this college Grimald received an appointment as "a senior or theologist" to give lectures on rhetoric in the refectory. He left Oxford in January, 1552, to preach at Eccles (now a suburb of Manchester), and was subsequently appointed chaplain to Nicholas Ridley, Bishop of London.

With the accession of Mary I and the re-establishment of the Roman Catholic church, Ridley with other Protestants was imprisoned, first at London and later at Oxford, whence he sent Grimald copies of everything he wrote. Presently, however, the poet himself was (in 1555) committed to the Bocardo prison in Oxford. That he secured his freedom by recanting his religion seems likely; but much more questionable is the theory that he acted as a spy and brought to their deaths the Protestant martyrs Ridley, Cranmer, Latimer, and others. He died about 1562, as appears from the highly eulogistic elegy published in Barnabe Googe's Eglogs, Epytaphes, and Sonettes (1563).

Grimald was a voluminous writer who holds a place of genuine importance in the history of English literature. Unfortunately for him, much of his work is lost and much that is extant is written in Latin; hence the present generation of readers scarcely knows him except for the appearance of his name in the miscellany. Yet important and influential were his Latin plays of Christus Redivivus (1543) and Archipropheta (1548), as well as his numerous translations from and com-

¹ On Grimald see the Dictionary of National Biography; Notes and Queries, 11th series, IV (1911), 275-276, 384; L. R. Merrill, "Nicholas Grimald, the Judas of the Reformation," Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, XXXVII (1922), 216-227, and The Life and Poems of Nicholas Grimald (Yale dissertation, 1925); C. R. Baskervill's comments on Merrill in Modern Philology, XXIII (1926), 377-378, and G. C. Moore Smith's in The Modern Language Review, XXI (1926), 81-83.

THE UNCERTAIN AUTHORS

mentaries on Greek and Latin authors. His English poems are somewhat inferior to those of Surrey, but most of them should be judged as metrical translations from Latin rather than as poems. They all, even the touching elegy on his mother, abound in frigid, pedantic references to the classics, and at times in a ponderosity still popularly associated with the academic quill; and they show a limited vocabulary which involves the continual repetition of words.¹ It appears, too, that Grimald had a favorite spelling of his own — especially the use of oo for o (Room, soom, coom, twoo, soondry) — and that he favored northern forms like tane and shinand. The most interesting of his poems are the two in blank verse (Nos. 165, 166), which after Surrey's translations from the Aeneid were the first English poems to be written and published in that meter.²

UNCERTAIN AUTHORS

In his reprint of the miscellany (page xvi) Arber declares that the phrase "uncertain authors" was "undoubtedly a designation more of concealment than ignorance"; but I see no basis for that assertion.³ The editor of A must have had a manuscript, or manuscripts, before him in which there were a large number of unsigned poems, the authors of which were totally unknown to him. Some of the poems may well have been signed with the very phrase he uses, for this practice was far from uncommon. For example, poems in MS. Rawlinson Poet. 85, fols. 88, 98, are signed "Incertus author," while most of the contents of that manuscript are ascribed to definite authors; MS. Additional 38823, fol. 58^v, contains a poem headed "Jncerti Authoris," and MS. Ashmole 48⁴ one signed "Finis, the autor unsertayn." Again, a manuscript

¹ Courthope (A History of English Poetry, II, 151) says: "The pedantry and learned allusion which characterise them are perhaps the earliest notes in English poetry of that manner which culminated in the 'metaphysical' style of Cowley and his contemporaries."

² Merrill, pp. 369-374, argues that Grimald's blank verse was published earlier than Surrey's because Tottel issued the two books of Surrey's translation on June 21, sixteen days after the miscellany appeared. Miss Willcock, however, shows (The Modern Language Review, XIV [1919], 163-167) that John Day had in all probability published his edition of Surrey's fourth book in 1554.

³ It is, however, echoed by Child in The Cambridge History of English Literature, III, 203 (American ed.), who says that calling the authors uncertain "does not, necessarily, mean that they were unknown."

⁴ See Thomas Wright, Songs and Ballads, p. 161, Roxburghe Club, 1860.

INTRODUCTION

copy of No. 175 is signed "huomo inconstosito." It seems reasonable to suppose, then, that the editor of the miscellany found warrant in his "copy" for the phrase "uncertain authors," and that it was a designation of ignorance, not of concealment.

The uncertain authors, it should be observed, show comparatively little knowledge of the Italian poets who had dominated Wyatt and Surrey. Among these contributors, on the contrary, humanistic influence predominates, accounting for their frequent references to classic mythology, as well as for their translations or paraphrases from Ovid, Lucretius, Seneca, and Horace. To uncertain authors ninety-four poems were credited in A; and this number was increased in B-I by No. 82 plus thirty-nine new pieces, making a total of one hundred thirty-four. Arber identified the authors of three anonymous poems.¹ It is hardly possible that the anonymity of them all will ever be solved, but the following "uncertain" authors are more or less "certain."

J. CANAND, a ballad-writer about whom no biographical information is available, was the author of Nos. 177 and 180.

GEOFFREY CHAUCER wrote No. 238. The poem is given in the miscellany probably from one of William Thynne's editions of his works, and as a result Chaucer here seems no more archaic in style than Wyatt himself. Accordingly, the editor of A can hardly be blamed for failing to identify this great "uncertain author."

Sir JOHN CHEKE (1514-1557), tutor to Edward VI, secretary of state, and one of the leading lights of the English Renaissance, was probably the author of No. 284.

WILLIAM GRAY wrote No. 255 and possibly (but not at all probably) No. 256. A ballad-writer of note, a favorite servant of the Protector Somerset, M.P. for Reading, he died on February 1, 1557. His career and works are discussed in Ernest W. Dörner's Gray of Reading (1923).

JOHN HARINGTON, father of the epigrammatist and translator Sir John, wrote No. 169 and perhaps others that cannot now be identified. He was an ardent collector of the poems in Tottel's Miscellany,² who

¹ Nos. 199, 211, 212. His identification of Edward Somerset as the author of No. 200 (see the Notes) cannot be accepted.

² See "Harington MSS." in the Index.

THE UNCERTAIN AUTHORS

according to Sir John "could bothe write well and judge well";¹ and various poems attributed to him are reprinted in Nugae Antiquae.²

JOHN HEYWOOD (1497?-1580?), famous epigrammatist and writer of interludes, was the author of No. 199.

THOMAS NORTON (1532-1584), lawyer and poet, best known for collaborating with Sackville in the composition (about 1561) of the first English blank-verse tragedy, Gorboduc, wrote Nos. 257 and 289. Both he and Grimald, by the way, contributed complimentary verses to William Turner's A perseruatiue or triacle, agaynst the poyson of Pelagius (1551). Norton's "ditties" are highly praised in the verses (quoted on pages 84-85, below) which Jasper Heywood prefixed as a preface to his own translation (1560) of Seneca's Thyestes.

SIR ANTHONY ST. LEGER (1496?-1559), K. G., and lord-deputy of Ireland, wrote No. 273.

D. SAND, if the evidence of The Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576) may be accepted, was the author of No. 171. In spite of his voluminous contributions to the Paradise, nothing is known of him.

THOMAS VAUX, Baron VAUX (1510-1556) certainly composed Nos. 211 and 212, and perhaps Nos. 9 and 217. All four poems are attributed to him in manuscripts, as is also a twelve-line poem, beginning "Syns by examples daylye we are taught," in MS. Additional 28635, fol. 70^v. The last two poems were apparently unknown to his editor, Grosart, who reprinted Nos. 211, 212, and thirteen poems from The Paradise of Dainty Devices as the work of Vaux, in Miscellanies of the Fuller Worthies' Library, volume IV (1872-1876).³

Thomas Warton loosely remarked⁴ that, "from palpable coincidences of style, subject, and other circumstances, a slender share of critical sagacity is sufficient to point out many others" of the uncertain authors. Unfortunately, he contented himself with that vague assertion, and subsequent scholars have lacked the "slender share of critical

¹ A Tract on the Succession to the Crown (A.D. 1602), ed. C. R. Markham, p. 105 (Roxburghe Club, 1880). On p. 101 Sir John gives two specimens of his father's verse.

² See pp. 91-92, below.

³ Grosart (p. 358) declares that No. 9 "has not the ring" of Vaux's poetry, but this is opinion, not evidence.

⁴ History of English Poetry, ed. Hazlitt, IV (1871), 59.

INTRODUCTION

sagacity" to elucidate it. A few other poets, to be sure, are usually associated with the miscellany, although their specific contributions have not been identified. The most important are GEORGE BOLEYN, Viscount ROCHFORD († 1536), and Sir FRANCIS BRYAN († 1550).

Michael Drayton apparently speaks with authority of Bryan's share in the volume. In Englands Heroicall Epistles (1598), signature N1, he has Surrey write to Geraldine, in reference to the "beauteous [Lady Anne] Stanhope":

And famous Wyat who in numbers sings,
To that inchanting Thracian Harpers strings,
To whom Phæbus (the Poets God) did drinke,
A bowle of Nectar fild vnto the brincke,
And sweet-tongu'd Bryan (whom the Muses kept,
And in his Cradle rockt him whilst he slept,
In sacred verses (so diuinely pend,
Vpon thy praises euer shall attend.

In the elegy to Henry Reynolds, appended to The Battaile of Agincourt, 1627, page 205, Drayton explicitly mentions Bryan's share in the Songs and Sonnets:

They with the Muses which conuersed, were
That Princely Surrey, early in the time
Of the Eight Henry, who was then the prime Of Englands noble youth; with him there came Wyat; with reuerence whom we still doe name
Amongst our Poets, Brian had a share
With the two former, which accompted are
That times best makers, and the authors were
Of those small poems, which the title beare,
Of songs and sonnets, wherein oft they hit
On many dainty passages of wit.

Bryan is also named along with Wyatt, Surrey, and others in Francis Meres's Palladis Tamia, 1598, fol. 284, as "the most passionate among vs to bewaile and bemoane the perplexities of Loue." It is a pity that his share in the miscellany cannot be identified.¹

¹ In No. 126 Wyatt mentions Bryan's knowing "how great a grace In writyng is to counsaile man the right." Miss Elsa Chapin, of the University of Chicago, informs me that she has found in a Huntington library manuscript [MS. 183, fols. 7-9^v, formerly owned by Thomas Park and Henry Huth] a poem of one hundred eighty-four lines by

THE UNCERTAIN AUTHORS

Rochford, ill-fated brother of Henry VIII's queen, Anne Boleyn, is highly praised in verses which Richard Smith prefixed to one of his publications, George Gascoigne's Posies (1575):

Sweete Surrey suckt Pernassus springs,
And Wiat wrote of wondrous things:
Olde Rochfort clambe the stately Throne
Which Muses holde in Hellicone.

The juxtaposition of names suggests that Smith had Tottel's Miscellany in mind, though why he should know of any connection between it and Rochford does not appear. It is remarkable that an entire book, Bapst's Deux Gentilshommes-Poètes de la Cour de Henry VIII (1891), has been written on Rochford (and Surrey), when not a single one of Rochford's verses is known. To be sure, Bapst argues that Rochford wrote No. 87; but that poem was almost certainly composed by Wyatt.

Of the share that THOMAS CHURCHYARD (1520?-1604) had in the miscellany there can be no doubt. In A light Bondell of liuely discourses called Churchyardes Charge (1580), which is dedicated to Surrey's grandson, he speaks of Surrey as "my master (who was a noble warriour, an eloquent Oratour, and a second Petrarke)," telling with pride how he served him as a page for four years, "And usd the penne as he was taught."¹ Churchyard loved Surrey just this side idolatry.² To Churchyard's Challenge (1593) he prefixes "The bookes that I can call to memorie alreadie Printed" — a list of his own works — including the item, "And many things in the booke of songs and Sonets, printed then [that is, in Mary I's reign], were of my making," and he refers to "An infinite number of other Songes and Sonets, giuen where they cannot be recouered, nor purchase any fauour when they are craued." Churchyard was an honest man, if a poor poet. His word cannot be doubted; and the last quotation is interesting as helping to show how the Songs and Sonnets grew into being. Unsigned manuscript copies of poems by various authors no doubt went into the making of the miscellany, and because they were unsigned they were lumped among the compositions of uncertain authors.

Bryan, in which he 'counsels man the right' in a series of proverbial and didactic sayings. Hence she suggests that No. 286, which is of a similar nature, may possibly be Bryan's.

¹ Collier's reprint, pp. 2, 11.

² Cf. p. 111, below.

INTRODUCTION

It is not possible to identify Churchyard's "many things." The style of his acknowledged works, however, is extremely mannered, depending for its effects on the over-use of alliteration, proverbs, antithetical or balanced phrases, and — what is more distinctive — piled-up commonplaces or figures that elaborate and suspend the thought. Nos. 82, 178, 188, and perhaps 240, written in such a fashion, suggest his authorship. Another test may be cautiously applied. In 1924 Miss Muriel Byrne discussed "Thomas Churchyard's Spelling,"¹ pointing out the very queer orthography consistently found in his manuscript letters, and showing that his spelling was generally normalized by the compositors but that his characteristic forms do occur sporadically in his printed books.² For example, he regularly spelled are, state, home, hope, like, as aer, staet, hoem, hoep, liek. Professor Moore Smith has suggested to me that on the basis of certain curiously spelled words,³ as well as of style, Nos. 176, 184, 192, 224, 246 may plausibly be assigned to Churchyard. Not improbably, too, he wrote No. 205, as well as one of the poems on Sir James Wilford (Nos. 182, 189), under whom he had served in Scotland.

I have not identified any other contributors.⁴ It is a reasonable guess that among them were EDMUND SHEFFIELD, BARON SHEFFIELD, and SIR CHRISTOPHER YELVERTON. Although no poem by Sheffield (1521-1549) can be recognized, a 'book of sonnets' of his composition is mentioned by Bishop Bale, Thomas Fuller, and others. Yelverton (1535?-1612) is named along with Sackville and Norton in Jasper Heywood's preface to Thyestes (1560):⁵

There Sackuyldes Sonetts sweetely sauste and featly fyned bee,
There Nortons ditties do delight,
there Yeluertons doo flee

¹ The Library, v, 243-248.

² She might well have added that a long poem, "Thomas Churchyarde Gentleman, in commendation of this worke," prefixed to Barnabe Rich's Allarme to England (1578), has a discreet, printed, marginal note: "His orthographie and maner of writing obserued."

³ E. g., lief (129.36), liekt (136.34), liefe, spirites [pronounced as a monosyllable] (149.6, 21), sprete, lief (175.11, 20), wieffy (193.16).

⁴ Sir Sidney Lee, in his sketch of Tottel in the Dictionary of National Biography, names William Forrest (on whom see the notes to Nos. 199 and 212) as one of them — perhaps because of a too hasty glance at Arber's reprint, p. xii.

⁵ Ed. H. de Vocht, in W. Bang's Materialen zur Kunde des älteren Englischen Dramas, xli (1913), 102.

THE UNCERTAIN AUTHORS

Well pewrde with pen: suche yong men three,
as weene thou mightst agayne,
To be begotte as Pallas was,
of myghtie Joue his brayne.

It would be only natural to include THOMAS SACKVILLE, later Lord BUCKHURST and Earl of DORSET (1536-1608), in the list of "probable uncertain authors." But there is no advantage in further speculation of this sort.

The most important contributors were Surrey, Wyatt, Grimald, and Vaux. Of these all but Grimald were in one way or another connected with the court: except for his contributions Tottel's Miscellany is an anthology of court-poetry. Furthermore, all four were connected with Cambridge University, Surrey in the honorary position of steward, the other three as undergraduates; while, of the uncertain authors mentioned above, Cheke, Norton, St. Leger, and possibly Sackville were Cambridge men. That university, long noted as the mother of poets, is the foster-mother of the miscellany which ushered modern English verse into being. Again, the known contributors, except for Grimald and possibly for Canand, were men of affairs to whom poetry was an avocation: they wrote not as a profession but because they felt the urge to write and because it was the thing for men of their class to do. They penned verses during lives crowded with action, and several of them experienced the favor as well as the frown of royalty. Wyatt and Grimald and Surrey became acquainted with prison cells and courts of law; violent death stared each in the face, and Surrey met his end on the scaffold. All of which seems prophetic of the literary profession in Elizabeth's reign, when violence, imprisonment, or legal execution had its way with Marlowe, Jonson, and Raleigh, among others.

VIII. THE "EDITOR"

It is a striking fact that the two principal contributors to the miscellany had long been dead when it appeared—Wyatt fifteen, Surrey ten, years. Sir Francis Bryan and Lord Rochford, assumed to be among the uncertain authors, had died respectively about seven and twenty-one years earlier, Lord Vaux in the year immediately preceding the publication. Among other known contributors, John Heywood, Thomas

INTRODUCTION

Churchyard, and Nicholas Grimald were living in 1557 and later. "If to any of these [last] four," observes Arber,¹ "we might assign as a guess, first the existence of the work, in conjunction with the printer; then its chief editing and supervision through the press; it would be to Grimald." The reasons for this guess he sets forth as follows:

We know that he was previously in business relations with the Printer of this work: for Tottel had printed in 1556, Grimald's translation of Cicero's De Officiis, dedicated by him, as his humble 'Oratour,' to Thirleby, Bishop of Ely: and on the 23 April 1558, Tottel finished a Second edition of the same work. It is probable, also, that it was to Grimald's position as Chaplain to that genial Bishop, that Tottel was able to put Cum priuilegio on so buoyant a book, at a time when the martyrs' fires were luridly lighting up England. Furthermore, the only poems suppressed in the revision, are Grimald's own. It may, therefore, be fairly guessed that Grimald, if not the Originator, was the chief Editor of this Collection of Poetry upon a plan then new to English Literature.

Arber's guess — it is nothing more — is based upon unimpressive reasoning, but it has met with such general acceptance² that many people treat it almost as a fact. It assumes that Grimald edited A, but no later edition; and speculation has long been rife as to why he was displaced as editor and why thirty of his poems were omitted from B-I.

Hermann Fehse, in a dissertation on Surrey,³ accepts Arber's guess, and explains the changes in the second edition as due to Tottel's desire for greater anonymity in his publication. Wyatt and Surrey, he argues, were dead, and so there was no good reason for concealing their names; the uncertain authors, he believes (though his belief is not well founded), were men of high rank, who wrote poems not for the public but for the pleasure of their friends, and who, accordingly, could not be named. Hence "Nicholas Grimald" was displaced by "N. G." It seems to me likely that a desire for anonymity did play some part in accounting for

¹ Tottel's Miscellany, p. xv. The "four" include Vaux, who was dead.

² See, e. g., W. E. Simonds, Sir Thomas Wyatt and his Poems, 1889, pp. 55-56; Greg, in The Library, v (1904), 114-115; Child, in The Cambridge History of English Literature, III, 202 (American ed.); F. E. Schelling, The English Lyric, 1913, p. 40; J. M. Berdan, Early Tudor Poetry, 1920, p. 344 n. 1; A. W. Reed, in The Review of English Studies, IV (1928), 445. A contributor to Notes and Queries, 11th series, IV (1911), 384, speaks of Grimald as "the Elizabethan poet and translator, and editor of Tottel's 'Miscellany,'" and thinks it "probable that most of those [poems] by 'uncertain authors' were by N. G."

³ Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Petrarchismus in England, p. 19 (Programm der städtischen Realschule I. O. zu Chemnitz, 1883).

THE EDITORSHIP AND GRIMALD

the changes in BC. To object, as does Heinrich Kolbe,¹ that, since Rochford and Bryan were dead, they too should have been named is beside the mark; for there are no grounds whatever for believing that Tottel knew of their connection, actual or alleged, with the miscellany. Kolbe's further pronouncements that the editor (by whom he appears to mean Tottel) regarded his book as a 'lyric-erotic anthology,' in which the personality of the poets was unimportant, but that, to secure a favorable reception among buyers, he named the two most famous poets of the time, are far from convincing.

Dr. L. R. Merrill, in an article called "Nicholas Grimald the Judas of the Reformation" (1922),² as well as in The Life and Poems of Nicholas Grimald (1925), argues that the suppression of Grimald's name and poems was due to his alleged betrayal of Protestant friends to the stake. "It seems more probable," he writes in the latter work,³ "since Grimald had become persona non grata because of his recantation during the Reformation, and because of his having betrayed his friends, the Protestant martyrs, Cranmer, Latimer, and Ridley, to the Roman Catholic prelates, that Tottel, fearing Grimald's name would injure the sale of the book, removed all of his poems with any personal allusions, and for his name substituted his initials."⁴ It is hardly just to call Grimald "the Judas of the Reformation," though he probably did recant to save his life. But after his recantation, actual or supposed, he was eulogized by Bishop Bale and Barnabe Googe, both of whom were strongly opposed to Roman Catholicism; and from this fact it follows that Dr. Merrill's suggestion, which has not met with favor,⁵ lacks plausibility.

Now Grimald's poems are rather noticeably out of harmony in A because of their heavy-footed classicism and their uncourtly tone. Among the other contributors, too, Grimald was out of place: he was a member, not of the court circle, but of the university group. Hence there is considerable point to Miss Gladys D. Willcock's conclusion:

It is a more natural explanation to suppose that it was felt that, in the first edition, too much space and prominence had been given to one who was not a

¹ Metrische Untersuchungen über die Gedichte der "Uncertain Authors" in "Tottel's Miscellany," Marburg dissertation, 1902.

² Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, xxxvii, 216-227.

³ Page 366.

⁴ A similar suggestion is put forth in J. M. Berdan's Early Tudor Poetry (1920), p. 350.

⁵ See, for example, C. R. Baskervill in Modern Philology, xxiii (1926), 377-378.

INTRODUCTION

member of the order of courtly makers who contributed the bulk of the poems. That Grimald ever acted as supervisor for Tottel is, therefore, more than doubtful.¹

If Miss Willcock's theory meet with objection, — though it seems more plausible than any hitherto made, — at least one guess is as good as another. In the absence of any facts, I offer an alternative suggestion that the disappearance of Grimald's name and of his highly personal poems was due to his own expressed desire, to his complaints to Tottel, whom evidently he knew well. An ecclesiastic of Grimald's position, whether he was a spy or not, could hardly have relished seeing intimate verses, which he had manifestly kept from the press before 1557, published for the delectation of vulgar readers. For a gentleman to publish original lyrics was at this time regarded as distinctly bad form, and there is no good reason to suppose that Grimald deliberately revolted against that convention. He was not unconventional when he published his Latin plays or his translations; and it is a significant fact that nine ² of the ten poems of his authorship allowed to remain in B-I are known to be translations from Latin, four being translated from the famous Calvinist leader, Theodore Beza.

In BC (whatever may be true of A) Grimald's poems were subjected to the same modernizing touch as was inflicted in A upon Wyatt's and Surrey's. Thus taratantars (115.13) was changed to dredfull trompets — a change that no poet, or at least no poet versed in the classics, as Grimald was, would have thought of countenancing. Again, the northern present participle shinand (115.34) was replaced by shinyng, and the old proper noun Alisander (116.33, 117.38) by Alexander. These, and numerous other examples that might be cited, seem to me to point to an editor who, if not identical with the editor of A, certainly shared his views and his methods.

Finally, attention should be called to the fairly trustworthy evidence that exactly the same kind of editing or smoothing as (apparently) characterizes Surrey's poems in the miscellany occurs also in the 1557 edition of his translation of the Aeneid, books II and IV.³ Since Tottel

¹ The Modern Language Review, xvii (1922), 147.

² Nos. 133, 134, 149-152, 165-167. The tenth is No. 154.

³ Equally striking are the variants that appear in John Day's edition (1554?) of the fourth book. See Miss Willcock, in The Modern Language Review, xvii (1922), 144-149; and the collations (based upon her work) in Padelford's Poems of Henry Howard, pp. 176-177.

CHURCHYARD OR HARINGTON AS "EDITOR"

printed both works, surely it is reasonable to believe that, directly or indirectly, he was responsible for the changes which seem to have been made from Surrey's original readings, or else that some other person had already made the changes before the copy came into Tottel's hands. In any case, sheer speculation, and not very probable speculation at that, has connected Grimald with the editorship of the Songs and Sonnets.

But other candidates have been proposed for that place. J. P. Collier thought the claim of Thomas Churchyard worth mentioning. In the introduction to his reprint (1867) of The Firste Parte of Churchyardes Chippes (1575) Collier says that the miscellany (presumably in its first edition only) "may possibly have been originally edited by Churchyard himself: we only put forward his claim to the discharge of that duty upon conjecture, but there are two or three points in his biography that render it not altogether unlikely. He was at that date about the Court, he had a strong rhyming propensity, he was acquainted with at least several poets, who, like himself, certainly were contributors to that collection, and he was in want of money. Still, if Churchyard had really superintended the publication of so important and popular a volume, we hardly think it probable that he would not somewhere have asserted his right to the distinction." Since Collier evidently did not take his own suggestion seriously, it merits no further consideration here.

G. F. Nott believed that John Harington initiated and edited Tottel's volume. In his edition of Surrey's poems (page cclxxix) Nott says of Harington, "I think he was the person who first gave both Surrey's and Wyatt's poems to the public." Editing Wyatt, he speaks (page 537) of "the conjecture advanced in the preface to the late edition¹ of Tottel's Songs and Sonnets; that the Harington MS. altered by the editor to reduce as much as possible the lines to the Iambic measurement of five equal feet, supplied the text for Tottel's publication." In one copy of P (11607.i.7, page 10) Nott, mentioning Nugae Antiquae declares: "For the reasons assigned in the preface, the pieces to be found in that publication may be considered as having the authority of a MS." But, unfortunately, no copy of the preface is known to exist.²

¹ I. e., P, discussed on pp. 47-52, above.

² See p. 47 n. 2, above.

INTRODUCTION

Perhaps Nott reasoned somewhat as follows: (1) A manuscript compiled by John Harington formed the basis of Tottel's edition. (2) In the eighteenth century Henry Harington reprinted pieces from Elizabethan manuscripts in his possession, and thus gave to Nugae Antiquae the "authority of a MS." (3) Wyatt's own manuscript of the Psalms, written about 1541, passed after his death in 1542 into the possession of John Harington, who caused an edition to be published in 1549, though he had planned it earlier and had secured a commendatory sonnet (No. 29) from Surrey. (4) Since Harington knew Surrey and actually published Wyatt's verses, and since in the manuscripts known to be in his possession (and later owned by Henry Harington) are to be found a large number of the poems that were printed in Tottel's Miscellany, it is likely that his manuscripts plus his initiative led to the publication of the book.

Whether or not the last two reasons fairly represent Nott's beliefs is open to some doubt. It is important to recall that the Psalms of Wyatt were printed "at London in Paules Church yarde at the sygne of thee Starre, By Thomas Raynald, and John Harrington,"¹ and that the dedication to the Marquis of Northampton was written by the latter. This Harrington was a London bookseller, who in 1550 published William Hunnis's Certayne psalmes.² There is no proof that he was identical with the John Harington, poet, whom Nott had in mind; but his sign of the Star, as well as his apparent disappearance from the bookselling trade in 1550, tempts one to believe that he and Tottel, whose sign was the Hand and Star, had some business connections. In that case the original manuscript of the miscellany might have passed through his hands to Tottel.

Nott's faith in John Harington the poet's editorship of the Songs and Sonnets seems to have weakened³ as he learned more about the editorial methods of Henry Harington. To say a word about them is a necessary digression.

The various editions of Nugae Antiquae: Being a Miscellaneous Collection of Original Papers in Prose and Verse . . . By Sir John Harington,

¹ The title-page is given by Bishop Percy in N (the edition described on pp. 44-46, above) and reproduced in Miss Foxwell's Wyatt, I, facing p. 203.

² E. G. Duff, A Century of the English Book Trade, 1905, p. 66.

³ Cf. the notes to No. 306.

HARINGTON AND NUGAE ANTIQUAE

The Translator of Ariosto, and others who lived in those Times, present some curious problems, which, so far as they concern the poems therein, bear directly on Tottel's Miscellany. The first edition, dated 1769, appeared in one volume under the editorship of Henry Harington, a direct descendant of the poet John Harington the elder and of his son Sir John, the epigrammatist and translator of Orlando Furioso. Henry Harington possessed at least three manuscripts that had belonged to his poet-ancestors. Two of these are continually referred to in Nott's edition of Surrey and Wyatt as "Harington MS. No. 1" and "Harington MS. No. 2." The first of these, containing the autograph poems of Wyatt as well as No. 29, is now in the British Museum, where it is called MS. Egerton 2711, and where Nott's copy of it is preserved as MS. Additional 28636; the second manuscript has disappeared, but a careful transcript was made of it by Nott and is now MS. Additional 28635. A third Harington manuscript, often used in Nugae Antiquae, is now known as MS. Additional 36529.

In his volume of 1769 Henry Harington printed from these manuscripts thirteen poems (Nos. 3, 15, 17, 24, 45, 49, 55, 72, 92, 93, 171, 175, 267) that appear in the miscellany; and three of them (Nos. 17, 171, 175) he explicitly claimed for John Harington the elder, supplying titles and dates to support the ascription: "By John Harington, 1543, for a Ladie moche in Love"; "Elegy wrote in the Tower by John Harington, confined with the Princess Elizabeth, 1554"; and "Sonnet by John Harington, 1554." In 1775 he issued an additional volume (called volume II) in which the following new poems appear: Nos. 65 and 86 rightly ascribed to Wyatt, No. 87 wrongly ascribed to George Boleyn, Lord Rochford, and No. 235 no doubt wrongly assigned to John Harington. Nugae Antiquae was newly edited in three volumes in 1779, and this "corrected and enlarged" edition was re-issued in 1792; but in neither were there additional poems from the miscellany. Finally, in 1804 Thomas Park issued a revised edition in two volumes, eliminating all the poems that in the miscellany were definitely assigned to Wyatt and Surrey except No. 87, which he retained and unequivocally ascribed to Rochford. Hence in Park's second volume appear only two of the poems (Nos. 171, 175) that had been claimed for John Harington, though why No. 235 was dropped is not clear to me.

INTRODUCTION

Henry Harington's ascriptions have not the slightest authority.¹ A comparison of his texts with the manuscripts shows that he manufactured titles at will, apparently crediting to John Harington any poem that he had not observed to be attributed to somebody else. No. 171, for example, is unsigned in Nott's transcript, MS. Additional 28635; and in a note in one of the copies of P Nott positively states that it was unsigned in the original manuscript owned by Henry Harington. Its ascription to D. Sand in The Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576) needs no questioning. In the case of No. 175 the editor's processes seem more dubious than usual. He begins his reprint of it with the second stanza, not the first, thus hiding his tracks from a hasty reader. In the manuscript, however, this poem was carefully signed "huomo inconnosciuto," although Nott remarks in one of the copies of P that the signature was "in a later hand." Furthermore, Henry Harington emulated Bishop Percy in smoothing and polishing his texts. He changed words at will, often substituted whole lines, and sometimes (as in Nos. 171, 175) discarded entire stanzas. His work, then, has almost no value, and has no authority whatever; but his sins have, of course, no bearing on Nott's belief that John Harington was the editor of the Songs and Sonnets.

Nott's suggestion, though it has points in its favor, seems to have been completely ignored. Arber and most later scholars accept Grimald as the editor, and some of them evidently believe that he deliberately chose and compiled for publication the two hundred seventy-one poems found in A. For this belief I can see no warrant. Instead, the probability is that A was based upon a manuscript, or manuscripts, compiled by some person like Harington for his own use and pleasure. This hypothetical person evidently attempted, but without success, to secure all the short poems of Wyatt, Surrey, and Grimald,² and to them he added other poems that happened to be available, perhaps in separate copies, perhaps in one complete manuscript.³ In one way or another, by accident, gift, loan, purchase, the manuscript so compiled passed into the hands of Richard Tottel. He decided to print it, — just as

¹ Though Charles Crawford, in Notes and Queries, 11th series, III (1911), 201, 322, 423, takes the opposite point of view.

² Over a hundred poems by Wyatt that are preserved in manuscripts are omitted in the miscellany; five short poems by Surrey are likewise omitted (Padelford's Nos. 10, 32, 35, 36, 47).

³ Hence the appearance in A (and to a less extent in B-I) of numerous elegies and other poems out of tone with the "songs and sonnets" that make up most of the book.

THE EDITORSHIP AND TOTTEL

some twenty years later another stationer, Henry Disle, published Richard Edwards's manuscript as The Paradise of Dainty Devices, — and he exerted himself to make the collection representative and complete. Accordingly, after the body of the book was already in type he secured copies of additional poems by Wyatt and Surrey, which he printed at the end as a sort of appendix or addendum.

It is possible that most of the editing had been done before Tottel saw the manuscript, and that he (or his "corrector of the press") made few alterations beyond giving each poem a title, inadvertently corrupting the text by misprints, and adding Nos. 262–271. In date of composition the poems in the miscellany vary widely: they include not only the early poems of Wyatt but also many (as Nos. 199, 255, 279) that were written in the reign of Mary I. The manuscript followed by Tottel may, then, have been written piecemeal from, say, about 1520 to 1557, in which case editing was necessary after it came into his possession; or it may have been compiled from other copies shortly before 1557, in which case the compiler probably made the editorial changes. Certainly in the sixteenth century few copyists took pains to reproduce texts accurately, and few scrupled to venture upon "improvements" of their own.

But, in the absence of any proof one way or another, I think it not too arbitrary to consider Tottel himself the guiding spirit, or editor, behind the book. Certainly in the whole tradition of English printing from Caxton to Tottel (and later), the combination of editor-printer-publisher in one man was common. In his preface Tottel speaks with evident indignation of those who have 'hoarded up' this beautiful verse as if it were too beautiful for public gaze; in other words, he attacks the anti-publication complex that — for there is no reason to believe otherwise — affected Grimald as a lyric poet as much as it had affected Wyatt, Surrey, Rochford, or Bryan.¹

¹ Child, in The Cambridge History of English Literature, III, 203 (American ed.), asserts that "Tottel's Miscellany is the first symptom of the breaking down of this bashful exclusiveness" on the part of the authors. But it seems to me that the miscellany strongly emphasizes that bashfulness, since it was a publication unauthorized by the authors, most of whom were dead. In The Furies. With Vertues Encomium (1614) Richard Niccols complains that many people despise all printed books of poems: they "esteeme of verses vpon which the vulgar in a Stationers Shop, hath once breathed as of a peece of infection, in whose fine fingers no papers are holesome, but such, as passe

INTRODUCTION

The guess that I have outlined surely agrees better with the time and its traditions, and is surely more plausible, than that which hits upon Grimald as the editor of A and some person, or persons, unknown as the editor of B and C. That Tottel was the editor of ABC cannot, of course, be proved: it is merely a reasonable and a safe assumption. Nor would it be unreasonable to suppose that Tottel wrote one or more of the poems in the collection: if he did not write verse, then he was practically unique among the printers of his time, who, like Silas Wegg, dropped into poetry on almost no provocation.

The poems in A were thoroughly, but not critically, edited. This editing, or part of it, may, as I have said, have taken place before the verses reached Tottel; it may have been done by Tottel himself, by his "corrector of the press," or by some other agent employed by him. Whoever the editor (and the word editor will henceforth be used without reference to any particular theory or person), his chief qualification was the ability to count syllables and accents on his fingers, and thus to make the verses regular. His methods are plainly visible.

Confronted with a series of poems in manuscript, he found them too archaic in rhythm and pronunciation to please his ear, and in order to make them acceptable to himself and to prospective readers he revised lines without mercy. For his text he had no awe, because undoubtedly he felt that his changes improved the work of the original poets. His editorial procedure was similar to that followed by Bishop Percy in his eighteenth-century Reliques of Ancient English Poetry. Both editors, judged by the standards of their times, were justified in "improving" their texts, and beyond question the improvements thus introduced helped both the Songs and Sonnets and the Reliques to attain their remarkable popularity.

The goal at which the editor aimed was regularity, but he did not always attain it. Under his hands Wyatt was therefore the chief sufferer. Wyatt's poems sounded extremely rough because of the irregular by priuate manuscription." And as late as 1627, in his epistle to Henry Reynolds (appended to The Battaile of Agincourt, 1627, p. 208), Drayton refused to discuss or praise

"such whose poems, be they nere so rare,
In priuate chambers, that incloistered are,
And by transcription daintly must goe;
As though the world vnworthy were to know,
Their rich composures."

THE OLD EDITORIAL AIMS AND METHODS

number of syllables in his lines and because of his clumsy accentuation. These defects the editor tried, not always successfully, to eliminate. So far as possible he brought Wyatt up to date, changing the verses, wherever he could, to make them conform to regular iambic movement. Thus No. 39 originally began, "There was never file half so well filed," which in A is smoothed to "Was neuer file yet half so well yfiled." This modernizing process, which runs throughout the miscellany, often involved the insertion or the omission of words or entire phrases, the substitution of more recent words for those that were archaic, or the transposition of words and phrases. Sometimes (as in No. 41) a whole line was transposed; and in numerous cases (as Nos. 205, 216, 243, 255) only parts of long poems were given.

The effort to secure a correct iambic movement led the editor into some very strange acts. Thus, he disliked refrains and needlessly omitted those in the originals of Nos. 79 and 225; while in three cases (Nos. 69, 70, 103) poems written by Wyatt as rondeaux he changed into fourteen-line poems that he perhaps thought to be sonnets. Furthermore, he attempted to eliminate rhymes between final syllables; and his insertions, although they usually remove the accent from these final syllables, usually also obscure Wyatt's rhymes in hopeless fashion.¹ That Grimald, a poet and a student of poetry, was the editor responsible for such changes seems to me incredible; but it is easy to believe that Tottel himself, or a "corrector" employed by him, or possibly the original compiler of the manuscript, would have edited exactly in this manner.

Editorial changes of the kind mentioned were most unfair to Wyatt, but at the same time they no doubt enhanced his reputation. In any case, he was known as a poet by the public at large almost solely through Tottel's book, for his only other publication was his version of the Penitential Psalms, translated from Aretino, which appeared in 1549, after his death. Important, also, is the fact that eighteen of his poems (Nos. 74, 76, 77, 78, 80, 81, 84, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 113, 114, 117, 119, 269, 270) are preserved in the miscellany only.² From it, too, No. 101 is printed by Miss Foxwell, Wyatt's most recent editor, as having a better text than the manuscript version;³ and in several other

¹ E. g., see the notes to No. 94.

² Cf. above, p. 62 n. 1.

³ In spite of the fact that it is in MS. Egerton 2711, which she usually follows to the exclusion of all other texts.

INTRODUCTION

cases the variations between A and the manuscripts are very slight indeed. On the whole, then, the editor's sins against Wyatt are counterbalanced by his benefactions. He did Wyatt a good turn in making him suitable for popular taste; and, whether good or bad, his texts spread Wyatt's name and influence abroad.

A glance through the collations of the poems by Surrey and the uncertain authors, as given in the Notes, suggests that exactly the same tactics were used in editing them as in the case of Wyatt. But, while some of Wyatt's poems are extant in his holograph,¹ no such texts by Surrey and the uncertain authors remain. Indeed, only two of Surrey's poems (Nos. 17, 29) are, if his most recent editor can be trusted, preserved in manuscripts earlier than the reign of Elizabeth — and even for those two that editor followed the texts given in the miscellany and in a late sixteenth-century manuscript. Of the seven manuscripts used by Mr. Padelford, none was written by Surrey, almost none agrees with another or with the printed editions; and so it is impossible to tell exactly what Surrey wrote. But a comparison of the various manuscripts indicates that in many cases they have been subjected to much the same sort of editing as A was. Again, where two or more copies of the anonymous poems are found in manuscript or in print, the variations between them are so great as to prove that an "editor" had busied himself in intended improvements.² There is little doubt that Grimald's verses were changed as much as those by the other contributors, although I have found only a single manuscript copy of a poem by him, and that later than A.³

The changes made by the editor did no harm, but probably a great deal of good, to the reputation of the poets. Mr. Padelford, in "The Manuscript Poems of Henry Howard" (1906),⁴ points out dozens of apparently unauthorized variants introduced by Tottel or his editor. Nevertheless, in his edition of Surrey he reprints twenty-one poems from A, nineteen of which occur only in A I, and the other two of ¹ Miss Foxwell prints 63 of the Tottel poems (counting No. 64, on which see the Notes) from MS. Egerton 2711, which is partly in Wyatt's own hand, and 6 from MS. Additional 17492, which is contemporary in date with Wyatt. Hence for at least 69 poems her texts have more authority than those in the miscellany. But she prints at least 6 poems from MSS. later than the miscellany.

² See, for instance, the notes to Nos. 199, 206, 212, 225, 251.

³ See the notes to No. 154.

⁴ Anglia, xxix, 273-338.

THE OLD EDITORIAL AIMS AND METHODS

which are superior to the texts preserved in manuscript.¹ It is difficult, then, to speak severely of the editor of the miscellany: he found his manuscript texts old-fashioned, and so far as possible he made them conform to contemporary standards. From the point of view of a publisher this was a wise move, the like of which is not unknown even in the present year of grace.

The editor, it is important to observe, also exercised the functions of a censor, removing objectionable references and phrases. Thus at 89.12 Kitson was replaced by the ladde. The year 1557 was one calculated to make censorship thorough. Hence in A all comments on Roman Catholicism were ruthlessly struck out, a fact that no more indicates a Roman Catholic editor than it does a prudent Protestant.² Wyatt's lines at 87.37-38 were originally,

Nor I am not where Christ is given in prey
For money, poison, and treason at Rome;

but the italicized words appeared in print as truth and of some. Likewise William Gray's rabid attack on Roman Catholicism in No. 255 was omitted en bloc, while No. 199 was carefully pruned of its references (complimentary though they were) to Queen Mary and No. 205 of its mention of the traitor Wyatt, son of the miscellany poet.

In every previous discussion of the "editor" of the Songs and Sonnets, scholars have apparently assumed that editorial supervision was confined to A, and that in B no changes were made except to drop most of Grimald's poems, to add thirty-nine new poems, to vary the order and titles of certain old ones, and to introduce an occasional new read-

¹ The twenty-one are Nos. 2, 5, 9, 10, 14, 16, 17, 18, 20-23, 25, 26, 28, 31, 34-36, 262, 265 (numbered in his edition 2, 23, 7, 1, 8, 13, 21, 24, 18, 12, 25, 16, 17, 26, 42, 46, 37, 39, 9, 19, 28). Nineteen of these (all but Nos. 17 and 28) are found only in A-I. Padelford remarks that No. 17 (his 21) is found in MS. Additional 17492 and (incompletely) in MS. Harleian 78, No. 28 (his 42) in MS. Harleian 78; but he reprints both from A. Furthermore, he states that No. 29 (his 38) appears in MS. Egerton 2711, No. 282 (his 20, which may not be by Surrey) in MS. Harleian 78; but he prints No. 29 from the late sixteenth-century MS. Additional 36529, No. 282 from a 'compilation' of the MS. and B. Note also that No. 13 (his 3) in the late MS. he follows lacks its tenth line, which, accordingly, he supplies "conjecturally" from the line in A. Since on p. 219 he dates only MS. Additional 17492 and MS. Egerton 2711 earlier than 1558, it appears that not one of his texts is pre-Elizabethan, and that the texts in *A-D are earlier than any he reproduces from manuscript.

² H. J. Byrom, in his monograph on Tottel (see p. 5 n.), pp. 204-205, states his opinion that Tottel was a Roman Catholic, or was at least friendly to the old faith.

INTRODUCTION

ing. But the facts are altogether different. The editorial changes in the text of B are almost as numerous as those made in the text of Wyatt in A. Particularly noteworthy are the striking changes of text that were introduced into B, only to be discarded in C for the original readings of the first edition.¹

I shall not attempt to settle all questions. Whether the editor of A was identical with the editor of B and of C is a matter of sheer speculation. In the absence of proof for or against, I feel that probability favors identity of editorship, at least in the case of A and B. Certainly the editor of B had exactly the same standards as the editor of A, and his passion for regularity and modernity led to some important changes. It is necessary to keep in mind that the alterations made in B, and sometimes in C, find almost no warrant in such manuscript copies as have been preserved; they seem to be purely arbitrary — to have been made to please the ear or the eye of the reviser.² A slight exception to the foregoing remark occurs at 9.26, where B (but not C) has With a and ghostly food, as in the manuscript.

In BC many titles (for example, Nos. 178, 234, 243) are rephrased in accordance with the shifted order of poems. Undoubtedly the editor made these changes; they have no manuscript authority, and indeed it is practically certain that all the titles in A and BC are editorial insertions. Some of them, as in the case of No. 302, are based on a flat misapprehension of which no author could possibly have been guilty. Others, like No. 188, scarcely fit the subject-matter, or, like No. 243, are differently worded in A and BC, clearly revealing the editor's hand. Furthermore, titles seldom appear in manuscript anthologies of the sixteenth century, and never (so far as I am aware) in such regularity and with such patness as in the printed book.³ It is worthy of note, too,

¹ See p. 19, above.

² Thus the readings of A and the MS. are identical at 9.4, 7-9, 16, 22, 12.10, though in all these places B differs. It changes, for example, "That in the hart that harborde freedome late" (9.9) to the unintelligible "Feeleth the hart that harborde freedome smart," and "So dothe this cornet gouerne me alacke" (12.10) to the senseless "So doth this corner gouerne my alacke." A, B, and the MS. have different readings at 9.11, 12.5-7.

³ So G. T., in Gascoigne's A Hundreth Sundrie Flowres, 1573 (ed. B. M. Ward, p. 31), says: "[I] will only recite unto you sundry verses written by sundry gentlemen, adding nothing of myne owne only a tytyle to every Poeme, whereby the cause of writing the same may the more evidently appear."

THE EDITOR AND THE MANUSCRIPTS

that Wyatt's own name appears in the titles of Nos. 64 and 116: it would hardly have been inserted by the poet; in any case, his editor, Miss Foxwell,¹ insists that in his holograph manuscript Wyatt "never names [that is, never gives titles to] his poems." Again, if the editor in revising B had had any real authority like authors' manuscripts, he could hardly have avoided giving the missing lines, say, at 54.2 and 145.36 (on which see the Notes). In one place, to be sure (after 172.36), he has inserted, evidently from a manuscript, six lines that are not in A, and in a few other cases (as at 191.7) he has corrected the text; but elsewhere personal taste is apparently the clue to the revisions. For instance, the editor of B obviously did not understand the meaning of his life to traine (146.36) when he replaced it with to end his life; and there are manifest cases of smoothing at 170.23 ff., where words are lavishly omitted in order to secure a more perfect iambic movement. Again at 62.12, in order to avoid the pronunciation promesse, although it is required by the rhyme, B changed the line to now hath kept her promise (with the word as before spelled promesse). So, too, at 81.23 the insertion of now changes the accent of balance from the last to the first syllable, and ruins the rhyme.

Why in C the original readings of A are often restored in preference to those of B is a mystery which, in general, I feel incompetent to solve.² Occasionally, as in the substitution of Ladie (12.23) for Garret, the reason may lie in the impersonality or anonymity that both B and C sought for. An important matter remains to be noticed: a second manuscript, or various manuscripts, served as copy for the thirty-nine additional poems of BC. These may have been on separate sheets or in one manuscript. Three of them (Nos. 288-290), being answers to poems earlier printed in A, may well have been composed after the publication of that volume.

The editorial methods followed in ABC have had admirers in the nineteenth century. Thus Robert Bell, editing the poems of Wyatt in 1854,³ remarked that "the general superiority of Tottel's edition [superiority, that is, to the manuscripts, one of them holograph, of Wyatt and Surrey] consists in the presentation of a more perfect metre." Since this absurd statement did not seem absurd to an editor in 1854,

¹ II, 82.

² But see p. 19, above.

³ Page 80 n.

INTRODUCTION

no wonder that in 1557 the editor (or editors) of ABC thought perversion of the manuscripts justifiable.

Finally, an exact parallel to this procedure may be seen in the elaborate manuscript notes made in the text and margins of the Bodleian copy of I by two or three hands of different dates.¹ So thoroughgoing are the changes — in many instances involving actual erasure of letters — that in numerous passages it is almost impossible to tell just what printed readings that copy has. The notes often show an utter disregard for what the poets may have written, a sublime confidence in individual powers of emendation. For instance, 26.36 is emended to read “Ne will $\dot{y}$ ay thus don Phœbus doe lowre,” 27.3 to “Take hede of rifte: hale must waters depth finde,” 67.32 to “That which with high disdayn you thus refuse.” Opposite 4.39 the annotator frankly writes, “J had rather say Jn them their sweete, in me my sorowe springes.”

In literally dozens of similar emendations the annotators of this copy proceeded exactly as did the editor (or editors) of ABC, changing words or phrases wherever they believed the rhythm or the sense, or both, could be improved. Thus at 3.17 in My fresh grene yeares, that wither, the word yeares is omitted (as in F-H), and to restore the pentameter movement a note suggests which dothe for that; at 8.34, where F+ had changed cowarde to couered, a note proposes smothered or scorned. Occasionally the annotators had consulted some earlier edition,² from which (as at 34.26, 53.21, 125.8) they supplied lines dropped in I; but more often they depended on their own ingenuity rather than on any printed text. Hence for lines dropped in I at 147.19, 227.10, and 250.5 they manufactured “Come then my dearest deare, come spedely to me,” “The onely heaven $\dot{y}$ hear J find,” “To hir $\dot{y}$ it deserved to haue”; while they invented certain lines, as “& most secure in ioye $\dot{y}$ is” after 143.37. With I as an object-lesson, one is inclined to be chary of criticizing unfavorably the procedure of the early editor of ABC. He (or they) made no such havoc with the manuscript texts as did the annotators of I with a plain, printed text.

The manuscript emendations of I were heartily approved of by Horace Walpole,³ the eighteenth-century owner of *D, who, wherever

¹ See p. 36, above.

² Probably A, B, or C. The insertion made at 34.26 does not appear in D+.

³ See p. 26.

THE STYLE OF THE POEMS

his own text gave the slightest excuse, copied them.¹ He was hardly critical in his work: for example, the manuscript suggestions at 227.10 and 250.5 in I were due to the omission of lines in the printed text. In *D the text has no such omissions, but Walpole copied in his margins the notes of I, prefixing to that at 250.5 an or — “Or, To hir y it deserv'd to have.” So, too, he reproduced word for word the manuscript readings of I at 4.39, 26.36, 27.3, 67.32, 143.37, 147.19; but the line added at 34.26 is absent from *D because (as the handwriting shows) it was a late addition to I, made after he had examined that book.

IX. THE STYLE

Too many pens are represented in the miscellany to make generalizations about its style at all safe. But the most casual reader will, of course, observe the tendency to conceits that runs throughout the work of Wyatt and occasionally in the work of the uncertain authors. Wyatt seldom failed to admire the worst features of his Italian masters, and by translating their stiff figures and images he set a bad example that helped to deform English poetry. When he took his pen in hand, “his conceytes,” like those of Anthony Munday’s Strabino, “began to come so nimbly together: that he now rolled in his Rhetoricke, lyke a Flea in a blanquet.”² It may be that he admired the conceited poems of Petrarch and Serafino because they could easily be translated. In one poem (No. 63) he compares his love “to a streame falling from the Alpes”; in another (No. 73), his heart to “the ouercharged gone”; in a third (No. 97), his life of love to the “vnmesurable mountaines,” the Alps. Likewise Lord Vaux adopts this manner in No. 211, with an account of how Cupid laid a regular sixteenth-century siege to the fortress of a lover’s heart.

Throughout the book, too, there is much dependence on commonplaces — too much dependence, it would seem to an eye well read in Elizabethan verse. Certain poems, as Nos. 188, 191, 215, are based upon nothing but one trite figure after another, a type of poetry that was apparently esteemed beautiful by later writers, like Turbervile and Howell. In fairness, however, one should recall that many of the apparent commonplaces were original and fresh (at least in English) when the miscellany appeared, and lost their freshness only because of continual imitation. Thus hackneyed subjects like Troilus and Cressida, the phoenix, coals that burn in water, and long-besieged and finally yielding towers were not stale in 1557, although they soon became the stock-in-trade of poets and would-be poets. Another stylistic device dear to all English-speaking people, namely, alliteration, decorates almost every line. Sometimes, as in

¹ The emendations and “editorial” comments that are reproduced from I in the Notes may, unless a specific remark is made to the contrary, be assumed to appear also in *D.

² Zelauto, 1580, P3.

INTRODUCTION

O Temerous tauntres that delights in toyes Tumbling cockboat tottryng to and fro,¹

the particular letter is hunted for with the mechanical zeal distinctive of A Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions; but, at least in the work of Wyatt and Surrey, alliteration is seldom used so baldly as this, and as a rule it even lends an aid that may justly be called artful. Puns are also too abundant for modern taste. But No. 186, with its insistent play on the name White and the color white, surely pleased Elizabethan readers; while even to-day the punning in No. 304, on Bays, the poet's mistress, and the bay, or laurel, tree, has a moderately pleasing sound.

One of the most interesting features of the miscellany is its widely varied meters and stanzaic forms, a feature in which it was unrivaled for two or three decades. Wyatt in particular was fond of metrical experiments, in the range of which he surpassed even Surrey. Among the most noticeable of his forms are ottava rima in some twenty-four poems,² terza rima in three,³ poulter's measure in two.⁴ Though his terza rima has been harshly criticized, its importance as a pioneer effort⁵ in English can hardly be destroyed by the criticism. To him also belongs the credit of introducing the jog-trot poulter's measure, which Surrey took over and popularized.

In addition to quatrains, douzaines, and the like,⁶ Wyatt has about

¹ No. 217.

² Nos. 54-56, 63, 67, 68, 71-73, 85, 88, 90, 92, 93, 109, 110, 112, 114, 115, 116, 120, 121, 123, 267.

³ Nos. 124-126.

⁴ Nos. 104, 127.

⁵ The twenty-five lines of terza rima in Chaucer's "A Complaint to his Lady" (Skeat's Chaucer, I, 360-361) hardly deserve mention.

⁶ Notice No. 268, every line of which ends with the word not.

METRICAL AND STANZAIC FORMS

thirty sonnets of various types, for some of which the editor of the miscellany, rather than Wyatt himself, is accountable. A few of these, like Nos. 69, 70, 103, were originally rondeaux, but were transformed by the editor to queerly rhymed "sonnets." Wyatt seems to have preferred five rhymes, as did Petrarch; but it is noteworthy that, while he gives some variation to the rhyme-schemes of his octave and sestet, he invariably — so far as the miscellany is concerned — ends the sestet with a couplet.¹ The majority of his sonnets are rhymed according to the scheme abba abba cddc ee; ² but one (No. 84) has only three rhymes (abab abab abab cc), while six rhymes appear in No. 42 (abba acca deed ff). No. 101 is a double sonnet with the repeated rhyme-order of abba cddc effe gg; that is, it makes two English, or "Shakespearean," ³ sonnets of the type that Surrey is usually said to have invented, and rightly said to have established in the English tradition.

Of Surrey's sonnets eleven are "Shakespearean"; ⁴ but Nos. 9, 10, 36 have only three rhymes, No. 2 has only two. Whether these last four were intended to be correct sonnets is a matter of considerable doubt. Surrey shows less metrical ingenuity, less metrical experimentation, than his predecessor. Although he uses various four, six, and seven-line stanzas, he avoids the ottava rima of which Wyatt was so fond; terza rima he employs only once,⁵ but poulter's measure, perhaps the most ineffective meter in English, nine times.⁶ To Surrey's example is due the flood of dreary sixes and sevens that inundated Elizabethan poetry. Grimald, who may well have known both Wyatt's and Sur-

¹ Elizabeth D. Hanscom discusses "The Sonnet Forms of Wyatt and Surrey" in Modern Language Notes, xvi (1901), 274-280, basing her remarks on the Aldine edition of those poets. Hence her conclusions apply more to the editors of A and the Aldine text than to Wyatt and Surrey. The same is true of Rudolf Alscher's Sir Thomas Wyatt und Seine Stellung in der Entwicklungsgeschichte der Englischen Literatur und Verskunst, 1886 (Wiener Beiträge, vol. 1). But Padelford's article on "The Scansion of Wyatt's Early Sonnets," Studies in Philology, xx (1923), 137-152, and, to a less extent, H. B. Lathrop's "The Sonnet Forms of Wyatt and Surrey," Modern Philology, ii (1905), 463-470, take account of the manuscripts. On Wyatt's models see W. L. Bullock, "The Genesis of the English Sonnet Form," Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, xxxviii (1923), 729-744.

² E. g., Nos. 38-40, 45-51, 94-100.

³ Shakespeare's rhyme-scheme is slightly different (abab cdcd efef gg).

⁴ No. 13 has exactly the same rhyme-scheme as Wyatt's No. 101. In ten other cases (Nos. 6-8, 11, 12, 14, 29, 30, 32, 263) Surrey uses the regular Shakespearean rhyme-scheme given in the preceding note, though No. 263 has one false rhyme (207.6, 8).

⁵ No. 1.

⁶ Nos. 4, 5, 18, 19, 22, 26, 33, 264, 265.

INTRODUCTION

rey's compositions through manuscript copies, makes use of poulter's measure in seven poems,¹ the uncertain authors use it in some twenty-five.²

Grimald's meters, however, deserve attention. He has heroic couplets in fifteen poems,³ septenaries in nine,⁴ blank verse (with occasional rhymes) in two.⁵ Furthermore, he contributes a rhyme-royal stanza,⁶ a peculiar douzaine (No. 134) with the rhyme-scheme aaaaaa bb cc dd, and three "Shakespearean" sonnets,⁷ which, be it noted, have no connection with the theme of love. Among the compositions of the uncertain authors are nine sonnets (five of them "Shakespearean,"⁸ four in a scheme of five or six rhymes⁹), two poems in octosyllabic couplets,¹⁰ two in heroic couplets,¹¹ three in hexameters,¹² and many in septenaries. There are also various other stanza-forms,¹³ including ottava rima, dizaines, and douzaines; but the favorite verse, as noticed above, is poulter's measure.

Modern readers are no doubt more interested in the sonnets than in any other literary form in the miscellany; but only slightly less important are its numerous epigrams and satires, those by Wyatt being the first formal examples of each in English. Of considerable interest, too, is the pastoral song of Phyllida (No. 181), which did something toward establishing the type that reached its zenith in England's Helicon (1600), an anthology containing nothing but pastoral lyrics.

The subjects used by the three contributors named in the miscellany were in the main prescribed by the authors from whom they translated or adapted. Wyatt and Surrey, familiar by travel and residence with Continental modes, were primarily concerned with love; but, as they

¹ Nos. 128, 138, 151, 152, 154, 155, 158.

² Nos. 168, 169, 172, 178, 183, 184, etc.

³ Nos. 129-132, 135, 136, 143, 149, 150, 157, 160-162, 164, 167.

⁴ Nos. 139, 140, 142, 144, 145, 147, 148, 153, 163.

⁵ Nos. 165, 166.

⁶ No. 159.

⁷ Nos. 137, 146, 156.

⁸ Nos. 173, 179, 186, 232, 233 (233 is slightly varied).

⁹ Nos. 218, 219, 241 (the only sonnet with a regular Italian sestet, cdecde), 300. No. 187 is also a sonnet (of six rhymes) with a line in the second quatrain of the original text omitted.

¹⁰ Nos. 278, 286.

¹¹ Nos. 245, 281.

¹² Nos. 182, 200, 296.

¹³ See also the notes to No. 203.

SUBJECTS OF THE POEMS

had the habit of borrowing their concern from writers like Petrarch and Serafino, autobiographical interpretation is in most cases doubtful.¹ Some of Grimald's verses, on the other hand, even when they are translations, are of a more personal nature, and were written with actual people in mind, in spite of the matter-of-factness with which they reproduce their Latin originals. The uncertain authors followed Wyatt and Surrey in ringing changes on amorous themes, but they wrote also on many other subjects. Like Grimald, they devoted poems to the praise of real people, vicariously immortalizing in that fashion ladies named White, Rice, Bays, and Arundel.²

Abstract moralizing makes up about a fourth of the entire contents. Oftentimes it takes the form of proverbial philosophy of the kind favored by Dionysius Cato; but formally stated proverbs appear less frequently than in many Elizabethan works. Again, it is paraphrased from Horace or Alamanni. Elegies, too, abound, and seem a bit out of place in a collection where love-songs predominate; but Surrey set the fashion with three elegies on Wyatt, Grimald contributed nine on various individuals,³ and the uncertain authors eleven.⁴ The editor evidently wished to include all of Surrey's poems, whatever their themes; and perhaps he made the same attempt with Grimald's. I suspect that the elegies by uncertain authors were reprinted, not from deliberate choice, but merely because they happened to be available.

The subjects of the miscellany established the vogue for later anthologies, although the proportions in which they were used varied, and although the satires and epigrams had no immediate effect. In The Paradise of Dainty Devices and A Gorgeous Gallery moralizing poems predominate. Noteworthy, too, are the funeral elegies in all editions of the Paradise from 1578 to 1606. A Gorgeous Gallery has one elegy, while The Phoenix Nest devotes a prose composition to the deceased Earl of Leicester and three long poems to the memory of Sir Philip Sidney. In the miscellanies between Tottel's and The Phoenix Nest the love-element is not greatly stressed, probably because the contributors

¹ Egon Wintermantel attempted such an interpretation in his Biographisches in den Gedichten von Sir Thomas Wyatt und Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, Freiburg dissertation, 1903.

² Nos. 186, 246, 304, 309.

³ Nos. 156-164. His Nos. 165-167 are likewise "historical elegies."

⁴ Nos. 169, 182, 189, 205, 209, 213, 227, 248, 253, 255, 273.

INTRODUCTION

had not enough knowledge of French and Italian to paraphrase or translate their joys and woes, and not enough ingenuity to manufacture them. The Paradise and the Gorgeous Gallery show a stronger humanistic than Renaissance influence, so that in a sense Grimald, rather than Wyatt and Surrey, is their spiritual father. On the whole, Tottel's Miscellany is more akin to The Phoenix Nest than to any intervening anthology; its last Elizabethan edition appeared only six years before that beautiful collection.

The diction of the miscellany is extremely archaic. To lexicographers it affords a happy hunting-ground, not exhausted by the editors of A New English Dictionary. Although that great work cites, for instance, from the miscellany its earliest examples of bluntly, bowt, clowt, forepast, intermitted, neck, overthwarts, rakehell, rashly, rife, steaming, and its only examples of clergions ("songsters"), fantaser, shright (the infinitive), stale, unnocht, yet earlier than any instances noted by it are uses in the miscellany of certain other words, as begins (the noun), eigh, and pleasurable.¹ In spite of the frequent archaisms, however, modern readers will not very often be seriously puzzled by the meaning of passages in Tottel's book, which, compared to the Paradise and the Gorgeous Gallery, is straightforward and clear. An occasional Italianate or Latin word offers some temporary difficulty, but in the main the miscellany poets knew what they wished to say and said it with comparatively little obscurity and fumbling. In most of the other difficult passages there is a likelihood that the text has been corrupted by the copyist or the Tudor printer. By the latter careless agency the texts of all issues after the second were rendered largely unintelligible; but in the first two editions (ABC) there is generally a pleasing swing to the lines that carries them on with rapidity and makes too close analysis or paraphrase seem unnecessary. In its habitual clarity of expression the miscellany has few rivals before the date of The Phoenix Nest.

Many separate pieces in the book were composed with music in mind. One of the prettiest is Wyatt's song to the lute (No. 87), with which should be compared No. 65. The editor of the miscellany evidently had no liking for refrains (perhaps because they wasted space in printing), which in themselves point to musical accompaniment, and in several instances he eliminated them.¹ But the further considerations that some of the poems were published as ballads and that musical settings are preserved for others (as for Nos. 17, 87, 173, 201, 212, 251, 265) show that music and the poems usually went together. As songs many of them can be highly praised, and it is unquestionably true that certain faults that worry a reader would hardly be observed if the poem were sung. The miscellany was published in a notably musical age, and part of its popularity no doubt came from the fact that it afforded a matchless collection of new songs, one of which (No. 212) was sung on Shakespeare's stage.

¹ In an unimportant Strassburg dissertation (1894) Franz Hoelper has treated Die englische Schriftsprache in Tottel's "Miscellany" (1557) und in Tottel's Ausgabe von Brooke's "Romeus and Juliet" (1562).

THE VALUE OF THE MISCELLANY

There is some fine poetry in the miscellany. Critics have long waxed enthusiastic over the work of both Wyatt and Surrey, in particular giving to the latter's description of his boyhood at Windsor Castle (No. 15) superlative praise. There is likewise much tiresome, third-rate verse. But historically all of the three hundred ten poems merit commendation. For two decades after its publication Tottel's book was without a serious rival. It was then eclipsed (so far as modern judgment is concerned) by the appearance of The Shepherds' Calendar in 1579; but for years after that date Elizabethan readers may well have continued to regard it as a unique "golden treasury." Though not now unique, it is still a treasure-house, the gold in which the passing of almost four centuries has not hopelessly tarnished.

X. THE INFLUENCE

It is hardly possible to overestimate the influence of Tottel's Miscellany on sixteenth-century, and hence indirectly on later, English poetry. That the early imitators did not equal their model in excellence is beside the mark, as is also the slight immediate effect which the model had on certain metrical forms. The earliest imitators confined themselves to the simpler meters, like poulter's measure — which had the merit, or the demerit, of making many hacks think themselves poets — and to reproductions of topics or phrases. Yet the appearance of new editions of the miscellany till 1587, when the magnificent outburst of Elizabethan lyricism had begun, kept its influence constant and potent.

¹ As in Nos. 69, 70, 79, 103, 225. But he retained them in Nos. 294, 298.

INTRODUCTION

Tottel's Miscellany is largely responsible for this great outburst, and adequately to discuss its influence would be almost to write a history of the first three decades of Elizabethan poetry. Even in the pages of the book itself imitation is manifested. Instances of Surrey's verbal borrowings from Heywood and Wyatt are pointed out in the Notes, but much more numerous are the cases in which the uncertain authors took from Wyatt and Surrey not only subject-matter but also exact phraseology.¹

Probably the blank-verse and terza-rima poems had almost no effect in ultimately popularizing those measures; nor, considering the infrequency of their occurrence in the miscellany, is this a matter for surprise. It seems remarkable, however, that the most noticeable form in the book, the sonnet, did not spring into immediate favor. Perhaps it was shunned for poulter's measure, septenary couplets, and simple quatrains because of its difficulty — a difficulty that led to some weird "sonnets" in the very pages of the miscellany. Poets like Googe and Turbervile christened their verses "songs and sonnets," but no genuine sonnets can be found among them; and for a time the word *sonnet*² meant nothing but a brief lyric.

In the imitative miscellanies that soon sprang up, the same lack of genuine sonnets is noticeable. Earliest in point of time was the lost first edition (1566) of A Handful of Pleasant Delights. The 1584 edition borrows from Tottel's Miscellany with considerable lavishness, and was undoubtedly inspired by it; yet among the "sundrie new Sonets and delectable Histories, in diuers kindes of Meeter," promised by the title-page of the Handful, are no sonnets that Petrarch or Wyatt or Surrey would have recognized. In The Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576) only one sonnet is found,³ and it disappears in all the later editions (1577?–1606) — a striking fact inasmuch as the Paradise lifts bodily from the miscellany two poems,⁴ as well as various passages and ideas. Possibly Richard Edwards and his collaborators thought sonnets suitable only

¹ Various examples are listed also by Heinrich Kolbe, Metrische Untersuchungen über die Gedichte der "Uncertain Authors" in "Tottel's Miscellany," Marburg dissertation, 1902, pp. 3–5.

² In the miscellany it appears only on the title-page and in the head-lines, and for its presence in those places Tottel alone must be responsible. Probably he did not realize the importance of this new form which imitated the Italian sonetto, but by sonnet meant simply a song, or lyric.

³ Ed. Rollins, No. 38.

⁴ Nos. 106, 171.

IMITATIVE ELIZABETHAN MISCELLANIES

for frivolous love-topics, and hence eschewed them. But the poets of A Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions (1578) not only borrowed ideas, phrases, and poems¹ from the miscellany, but wrote four sonnets.

While the vogue of new anthologies increased, the original miscellany held its own in popular estimation. Its editions of 1585 and 1587 undoubtedly played some part in keeping the sonnet-form before the minds of poets, and these final sixteenth-century editions came at the very time when the rage for sonnet-sequences was beginning. The popularity of subsequent miscellanies, like Brittons Bowre of Delights (1591, 1597), The Phoenix Nest (1593), The Arbor of amorous Deuises (1594?, 1597), England's Helicon (1600), and A Poetical Rhapsody (1602), is at least indirect evidence that the influence of Tottel's Miscellany operated as strongly at the end of the century as in the middle. The first and the third of these books, compiled by Richard Jones and published under the name of Nicholas Breton, afford direct evidence. Jones had a penchant for the miscellany, and he extracted poems from it for these compilations,² just as he had done earlier in the case of his Handful and his Gorgeous Gallery. Furthermore, on Tottel's Miscellany were modeled the "garlands" that humble poets collected for the delectation, not of educated or courtly readers, but of the common people. The first of these was the lost 1566 edition of the Handful,³ a frank collection of ballads made by a ballad-poet and issued by a ballad-printer with the common reader chiefly in mind. Others, like Thomas Deloney's Garland of Good-will (1593?) and Richard Johnson's Crown Garland of Golden Roses (1612), established a fashion that has not yet wholly died in England. Literally hundreds of similar ballad-collections appeared in the three centuries after 1557.

Nor were printers slow to observe another opportunity to exploit the courtly Songs and Sonnets as entertainment for the man in the street; for, simultaneously with the editions of 1557-1567, they abstracted some of the poems and issued them as broadside ballads. Thus before 1569 No. 16 was three times registered for publication as a ballad, No. 199 and perhaps No. 212 twice, Nos. 3, 18, 180, 181, 211, 251, 265, and possibly 172 and 286 once; Nos. 16 and 265 were also "moralized"

¹ Nos. 206, 207.

² See the notes to Nos. 33, 170, 180.

³ See Modern Language Notes, xli (1926), 327.

INTRODUCTION

or parodied.¹ Obviously, these poems succeeded in pleasing low-class as well as high-class readers.

The earliest Elizabethan poets, like Thomas Sackville,² took the miscellany as an infallible guide and text-book. Barnabe Googe, in his Eglogs, Epytaphes, and Sonettes (1563) shows the same tendency, but less strongly because he was usually adapting some foreign author. George Turbervile, however, displays in almost every poem the most thorough study of his model. Very often his poems (as well as his titles) are mere paraphrases of those in the miscellany. With more smoothly accented verse than is to be found in either Wyatt or Surrey, he draws out their ideas to tiresome length, taking twenty lines for a theme which they could develop in ten. Nowadays Turbervile would be regarded as a plagiarist: in his own age there was apparently nothing unethical in his action, which he might, if necessary, have defended on the ground that he was modernizing, and thus improving, poems already antiquated. In any case, he made no effort to hide his tracks; and the "Verse in prayse of Lorde Henrye Howarde, Earle of Surrey," which he included in his Epitaphes, Epigrams, Songs and Sonets (1567),³ expresses frankly his whole-hearted admiration:

WHat should I speake in prayse of Surreys skill, Unlesse I had a thousand tongues at will?
No one is able to depaint at full,
The flowing fountaine of his sacred skull;
Whose pen approovde what wit he had in mue,
Where such a skill in making Sonets grue.
Eche worde in place with such a sleight is coucht,
Eche thing whereof he treates so firmly toucht,
As Pallas seemde within his noble breast
To have sojournde, and beene a daylie guest.
Our mother tongue by him hath got such light,
As ruder speach thereby is banisht quight:
Reprove him not for fansies that he wrought,
For fame thereby and nothing else he sought.
What though his verse with pleasant toyes are fright,
Yet was his honours life a lampe of light:

¹ See Rollins, An Analytical Index to the Ballad-Entries, s. v. "Tottel's Miscellany."

² See The Times Literary Supplement (London), April 18, 1929, p. 315, for praise of Wyatt and Surrey in a manuscript attributed to Sackville.

³ Collier's reprint, pp. 16-17.

OTHER ELIZABETHAN IMITATORS

A mirrour he the simple sort to traine,
That ever beate his brayne for Britans gaine.
By him the nobles had their vertues blazde,
When spitefull death their honors lives had razde:
Eche that in life had well deserved aught,
By Surreys meanes an endles fame hath caught.
To quite his boone and aye well meaning minde,
Whereby he did his sequell seeme to binde,
Though want of skill to silence me procures,
I write of him whose fame for aye endures;
A worthie wight, a noble for his race,
A learned lorde that had an Earles place.

Not quite so literal a borrower was Thomas Howell; but his Arbor of Amitie (1568), Newe Sonets, and pretie Pamphlets (ca. 1568), and H. His Devises (1581) bear witness on almost every page to lessons learned from the miscellany poets. Gascoigne likewise reveals his indebtedness, not infrequently paraphrasing and enlarging poems he read there. Other imitators were Timothy Kendall, George Whetstone, and Thomas Churchyard. Kendall, who reproduces whole poems verbatim from the miscellany, and yet whose Flowers of Epigrammes (1577) pretends to be made up of original translations, must flatly be called dishonest. Churchyard, as has been said, idolized Surrey, declaring in A light Bondell of liuly discourses called Churchyardes Charge (1580)¹ that

More heavenly were those gifts he had, then yearthly was his forme;
His corps to worthie for the grave, his fleshe no meate for worme.
An Erle of birthe, a god of sprite, a Tullie for his tong,
Me thinke of right the worlde should shake when half his praise were rong.
Oh! cursed are those crooked crafts, that his owne countrey wrought,
To chop of[f] sutch a chosen hed as our tyme nere forthe brought.
His knowledg crept beyond the starrs, and raught to Joves hie trone
The bowels of the yearth he sawe in his deepe breast unknowne:
His witt lookt through eche mans device, his judgemēt grounded was:
Almoste he had foresight to knowe, ere things should come to passe,
When thei should fall what should betied: oh, what a losse of weight,
Was it to lose so ripe a hedde, that reached sutch a height!
In evry art he feelyng had, with penne past Petrarke sure,
A fashion framde whiche could his foes to freendship oft alure.

¹ Collier's reprint, pp. 10-11.

INTRODUCTION

Similarly a poet in the Gorgeous Gallery (1578)¹ had remarked that Surrey scalde, the height of Ioue his Throne,

Vnto whose head a pillow softe, became Mount Helycon.

And there was also Humfrey Gifford, whose Posie of Gilloflowers (1580) borrows lavishly in titles, subjects, and phrases. His didactic pronouncements on friendship, the life of courtiers, the changeableness of fortune, as well as his love-poems, not only show little originality but disclose constant imitation; and an identical comment can be made in regard to Mathew Grove's The most famous and Tragicall Historie of Pelops and Hippodamia (1587).²

Imitation seems too mild a word for Brian Melbancke, in whose euphuistic novel Philotimus (1583) whole passages are lifted verbatim from the miscellany and printed as prose to help carry on the narrative. Melbancke was a graceless scamp: his borrowings from Tottel's Miscellany, which have heretofore escaped notice and which are enumerated in the Notes,³ are paralleled by his equally shameless pilfering from the Paradise, from Turbervile, Seneca (in the 1581 translation), Spenser, and others. But fully as barefaced as any of these were the borrowings of Henry Petowe.⁴ As the books in which they occur are excessively rare, perhaps it may be well to print some of the most pertinent passages.

In The Second Part of Hero and Leander. Conteyning their further Fortunes (1598), a quarto of twenty-three pages, Petowe attempts to complete Christopher Marlowe's unfinished poem, remarking that "I being inriched by a Gentleman a friend of mine, with the true Italian discourse, of those Louers further Fortunes, haue presumed to finish the Historie, though not so well as diuers riper wits doubtles would haue done." But this statement is frank camouflage, and "this my first labor," as Petowe calls it, draws much of its material from the

¹ Ed. Rollins, p. 63.

² Cf. pp. 79 ff. (Grosart's edition) with No. 281; pp. 86 ff. with No. 179; p. 104 with No. 304; pp. 120 f. with No. 154.

³ See also my article on Melbancke in Studies in Philology, extra series, 1 (May, 1929), 40-57.

⁴ Some of them are enumerated in The British Bibliographer, 1 (1810), 214-217; Nott's Surrey (1815), p. cclxxxi n.; Dyce's Marlowe (1858), pp. xli-xlii, 398-401.

HENRY PETOWE'S BORROWINGS

miscellany. On signatures B₄^v-C₁, for example, "Then gan Leander to his Hero say," plagiarizing from No. 12:

{ (Let me goe where the Sunne doth parch the greene,
 { In temperate heate, where he is felt and seene:
 { Or where his beames doe not dissolue the ice,
 { In presence prest, of people mad or wise.
 Set mee in high, or else in low degree,
 In clearest skie, or where clowdes thickest bee,
 In longest night, or in the shortest day,
 In lustie youth, or when my haire be gray:
 Goe I to heauen, to earth, or else to hell,
 Thrall or at large, aliue where so I dwell,
 On hill or dale, or on the foaming flood,
 { Sicke or in health, in euill fame or good:
 { Thine will I be, and onely with this thought, { Content thy selfe: although my chance be naught.)

Hero follows suit, remarking on occasion (C₁^v), in the phrases of No. 102:

(The pillar perisht is, whereto I lent,
 To my vnhap, for lust away hath sent,
 Of all my Ioy, the verie barke and rinde,
 The strongest stay of my vnquiet minde. . . .
 What can I more, but haue a woefull hart,
 My minde in woe, my body full of smart,
 And I my selfe, my selfe alwayes to hate,
 Till dreadfull death doe ease my dolefull state.

Likewise Hero's suitor, Duke Archilaus, angry at her, "breath'd forth the venome of his minde" on signature C₂, combining Nos. 217 and 215 in the process:

{ (Oh timerous taunters that delights in toyes,
 { Iangling iesters, depriuers of sweete ioyes,
 { Tumbling cock-boats tottering too and fro,
 Grown'd of the graft, whence all my grieve doth grow:
 Sullen Serpents enuiron'd with despight,
 That ill for good at all times doth requite.
 As Cypresse tree that rent is by the roote,
 As well sown seede, for drought that cannot sprout.
 As braunch or slip bitter from whence it growes,
 As gaping ground that raineles cannot close:

INTRODUCTION

As fish on lande to whome no water flowes,
{ As flowers doe fade when Phæbus rarest showes,
{ As Salamandra repulsed from the fier, { Wanting my wish, I die for my desire.)

Poetic justice appears in the line that immediately follows the foregoing speech:

Speaking those words death seiz'd him for his owne.

Two further illustrations of Petowe's method will suffice. On signature D3 Leander remarks to Hero, in the words of No. 178:

To walke on ground where danger is vnseene,
Doth make men doubt, where they haue neuer been.
As blind men feare what footing they shall finde:
So doth the wise mistrust the straungers minde.

No. 261 provides a suitable response (signatures D3-D3^v):

Hero repli'd: (to rue on all false teares,
And forged tales, wherein craft oft appeares,
To trust each fained face, and forcing charme, Betrayes the simple soule that thinks no harme.)
(Not euery teare doth argue inward paine,
Not euery sigh warrants, men doe not faine,
Not euery smoke doth proue a present fier,
Not all that glisters, goulden soules desire,
Not euery word is drawn out of the deepe,
For oft men smile, when they doe seeme to weepe:
Oft malice makes the minde to powre forth brine,
And enuie leakes the conduits of the eyne.
Craft oft doth cause men make a seeming showe,
Of heaueie woes where grieve did neuer growe.
Then blame not those that wiselie can beware,
To shun dissimulations dreadfull snare.
Blame not the stopped eares gainst Syrens songe, Blame not the minde not mou'd with falshood tonge.)

The "second flight" of Petowe's Muse resulted — as he confesses "To the quick-sighted Readers" — in Philochasander and Elanira the faire Lady of Britaine (1599). He prays:

Oh doe not hurt her [that is, my Muse], though she rudely springs,
For want of skill, but rather pleasure take.

HENRY PETOWE'S BORROWINGS

To see an vnflidg'd fowle make shift to flie,
Whose vngrowne plumes all meanes for ayd deny.

This apology is hardly complimentary to the Tottel's Miscellany authors, from whom once again Petowe lavishly borrows. Without comment I shall reprint various passages from his rare poem, indicating by bracketed references to the poem-numbers the source in the miscellany.

I. [A4^v]

[1]

Seauen tymes twice tould the bright Hyperian
Hath circled the fierie Zodiacke, Seauen times twice seauen, since darting loue began within those twice seuen dais my poore soules wrack,¹
Of an old hurt, yet feele the woud but green, [No. 1]
Wounded by Loue, yet loue hath neuer seen.

[2]

In Cyprus springes, where Beautie faire once dwelt, [No. 7]
A well so hot that who so tastes the same,
Were hee of stone, as thawed Ice should melt:
And finde his brest kindled with burning flame.
Whose feruent heate my cold lymmes so opprest,
That fell dispaire doth lend me little rest.

[3]

An other well that springes so hot is found, [No. 7]
Whose chilling venome of repugnant kinde, Drenches the burning heate of Cupids wound,
And with the spot of change infects the minde.
Whereof my deare hath tasted, to my paine,
My seruice thus is growen into disdaine.

II. [B1]

[1]

From Tuskane came my Ladies worthy race, [No. 8]
Faire Florence was sometimes her auntient seate,
The westernne Ile whose pleasant shore doth face,
Wilde Cambers cliffes did giue her liuely heate.
Fostred she was with Milke of Irish brest,
And now in famous Britaine she doth rest.

¹ These opening lines seem to be imitated from "A sonet vpon the Authors first seuen yeeres seruice," printed in Thomas Tusser's Five hundred pointes of good Husbandrie, 1580, Q3^v-Q4.

INTRODUCTION

[3]

Why did you sleepe, and did not gaze vpon her?
Why did so rare a prise escape your handes?
Why did not waking Centonels cease on her?
Whose sacred lookes all earth on earth commaunds.

Her faire of kinde, her vertues from aboue, [No. 8]
Happy is he that can obtayne her loue.

III. [B1^v]

[1]

The Sun hath twice brought forth his tēder green, [No. 1]
Twice clad the Earth in liuely lustinesse,
Once haue the windes the trees displayed clean:
And once againe begins their cruelnesse.
Since I haue hid the harme within my breast,
My Ladies coy disdaine that hinders rest.

[2]

The winters hurt recouers with the warme, [No. 1]
The parched greene restored is with shade,
What warmth alas may serue for to disarme,
The frozen heart that mine inflame hath made.
VVhat colde againe is able to restore,
My fresh greene yeares that wither more & more.

[3]

Strange kindes of death in life I trie, [No. 1]
At hand to melt farre of in flame to burne,
And like as time list to my cure applie,
So doth each place whole heapes of woes returne.
Loue seemes to haue my cure still in scorne,
VVho liuing die: and dying liue to morne.

III. [B2]

[2]

The Hart he feedeth by the gentle Hynde, [No. 181]
The Bucke doth feede hard by the prettie Dooe,
The Turle Doue we neuer see vnkinde,
To him that to her doth affection show.
I proffer kindnes, yet tis not accepted,
I loue, yet loue of loue is quite reiected.

HENRY PETOWE'S BORROWINGS

[3]

The harmeles Ewe she hath by her the Ram, [No. 181]
 The younger Cowe hath to her make the Bull,
 The Calfe with many a prettie nibling Lam:
 Vpon the downes doe feede their hunger full.
 But my Loue lou'd prizeth so hie her faire,
 That for her want I cannot but despaire.

V. [B2^v]

[1]

Fvll faire and white she is, and White by name, [No. 186]
 Whose white doth striue the Lillies white to staine,
 Who may contemne the blast of blacke defame,
 Who in darke night can bring day bright againe.
 Day is not day, vnles her shine giue light,
 And when she frownes, day turnes to gloomy night.

[2]

The ruddie Rose impresseth with clere hewe, [No. 186]
 In lippes and cheekes, right orient to behould,
 Her sparkling eies dart foorth to worldly view:
 Such glimering splendant rayes, more bright thē gold.
 Her lookes the still behoulders eyes amazes, Dimming their sights, that on her Bewtie gazes.

IX. [B4^v]

[1]

The tyme when this sweet faire her progresse tooke, [No. 2]
 Was whē fresh spring that bud & blome forth bring,
 With greene had clad the hills, and euery brooke
 VVith Christall glyding streames did sweetly spring,
 The Nightingall with feathers new did sing,
 Sommer was come for euery spray did spring.

[2]

The Bucke in bracke his Winter coate did cast, [No. 2]
 The Turtle to her make hath tould her tale,
 The Adder all her slough away did wast:
 The Hart had hunge his olde head on the pale.
 And thus I sawe amonge these pleasant things,
 Each care decaies and yet my sorrowe springs.

INTRODUCTION

XIII. [C2^v]

[1]

Some men will thinke as due they ought to haue, [No. 82]
For their true seruice, guerdon and reward,
But I intreate, and loue for loue I craue:
Yet others though vnworthy are prefard.
I beate the bush, and others catch the bird,
Reason exclames and sweares my hap is hard.

[2]

They eate the honny, I must hold the hiue: [No. 82]
I sowe the seede, and they must reape the corne,
I wast, they win; I drawe, and they must driue,
Theirs is the thanke, and mine the bitter scorne.
I seeke, they speede: in vaine my winde is spent,
I gape, they get, I pray and yet am shent.

[3]

I fast, they feede: they drinke, and I still thirst, [No. 82]
They laugh, I weepe: they ioy, I euer mourne:
They gaine, I loose, I onely haue the worst:
They are whole, I am sicke: they cold, I burne.
I would, they may: I craue, they haue at will,
That helpeth them, but hate my hart doth kill.

XIII. [C3]

[1]

Adew desart, alas how art thou spent? [No. 303]
Ah dropping teares, how wofully you wast,
Poore hart how many scalding sighes are lent
To pricke them forth, that make no speedy hast:
Ah payned soule, thou gap'st for mickell grace,
Of her in whome sweete pittie hath no place.

XV. [C3^v]

[1]

VVhen glorious Phæbus had the Serpent slaine, [No. 305]
The wanton God desired Cupids bow,
Which sudden strife did turne him to such paine,
That in the end he felt the depth of woe.
The shaft once shot, he neuer could remoue:
His woe began in seeking Daphnes loue.

HENRY PETOWE'S BORROWINGS

[2]

This Cupid hath a shaft of perfit kinde, [No. 305]
Wherewith true-louing makes he gently woundeth.
Whose goulden head hath power ynough to binde,
All loyall harts; such force therein aboundeth.
An other shafte he hath, that's wrought in spight
Whose Nature is to quench all sweete delight

[3]

The owne in Phæbus tooke a resting place [No. 305]
In Daphnes Brest, the cruell shaft did slumber, Phæbus sought loue, Daphne would not imbrace
His vowed loue could neuer bring her vnder.
Such is my case? to her I seeke to most
I loue, she hates, thus is my labour lost.

XVI. [C4]

[1]

As oft as I behold my loue in Maiestie, [No. 24]
Her sparkling soueraigne bewtie that me bound,
The mores my comfort, though exild I be,
But yet alas the fresher is my wound.
My soule like Tantalus in sorrow wasteth,
Who sees the goulden fruite, yet neuer tasteth.

Apart from imitations and borrowings, the influence of the miscellany is manifested also by frequent references to its contributors. Enough of these could be collected to make an "allusion-book" of some size, and such a collection would in general reveal sincere respect for Surrey and his achievement, less respect for Wyatt. One exception to this statement is to be found in the superlative praise heaped on Wyatt by the antiquary John Leland in his Naeniae in mortem Thomae Viati equitis incomparabilis (1542);¹ and again, about 1691, Anthony Wood called Wyatt "the delight of the muses and of mankind," and eulogized "his admirable skill in poetry."² But in Elizabethan times

¹ Reprinted in Miss Foxwell's Wyatt, II, 231-240, and in Nott's, II, xcix-cx. In John Pits's "De Illustribus Angliæ Scriptoribus" (the running-title of Ioannis Pitsei . . . Relationum Historicarum de Rebus Anglicis Tomus Primus, 1619), p. 922, Leland's praise of Wyatt is echoed, while Surrey (p. 923) is mentioned without praise.

² Athenae Oxonienses, I (1813), 124-125.

INTRODUCTION

a discordant note was struck only occasionally. Edward Dering's epistle "To the Christian Reader," prefixed to A Briefe and Necessary Catechisme or instructiō Very needfull to be known of al housholders (1572), roundly condemned "our Songes & Sonets, our Pallaces of Pleasure, our vnchast Fables, & Tragedies, and such like sorceries," adding, "O that there were among vs some zealous Ephesians, that Bookes of so great vanitie might be burned vp." Likewise, William Webbe evidently had a low opinion of the Songs and Sonnets, though he admired The Paradise of Dainty Devices. In A Discourse of English Poetrie (1586) he refers in laudatory terms to the contributors to the Paradise, but those to the Songs and Sonnets he ignores completely save for a non-committal reference to "the dyuers workes of the olde Earle of Surrey" and a slur at Surrey's translations from the Aeneid "without regard of true quantity of sillables."¹ On the contrary, the author of The Art of English Poesie (1589) thought the miscellany, at least so far as concerned the poems of Wyatt, Surrey, and Vaux, represented the high-water mark of English verse. No fault at all, in his opinion, could be found with the first two of these ("betweene whom," he declares, "I finde very litle difference, I repute them . . . for the two chief lanternes of light to all others that haue since employed their pennes vpon English Poesie"²); and he quotes from them constantly to illustrate the rules and graces of poetry.

Roger Ascham, although like Webbe an opponent of rhyme, generously asserted in The Schoolmaster (1570)³ that Wyatt and Surrey went "as farre to their great praise, as the copie they followed could cary them." Sir Philip Sidney's Defence of Poesy, written about 1580 though not published till fifteen years later, reminded readers that they would find "in the Earle of Surries Liricks, many things tasting of a noble birth, and worthy of a noble minde."⁴ "The Erle of Surrey, that wrat the booke of Songes and Sonettes" is praised also in Geoffrey Whitney's A Choice of Emblems (1586).⁵ Gabriel Harvey, in Pierce's Supererogation (1593),⁶ spoke flatteringly of Surrey and Norton. But a Jacobean critic, Edmund Bolton, in his Hypercritica (ca. 1618)⁷ thought the miscellany inferior to Surrey's Aeneid translations:

¹ Arber's reprint, pp. 33, 71-72. ² Arber's reprint, p. 76. ³ Arber's reprint, p. 145.

⁴ Arber's reprint, p. 62. ⁵ Page 196.

⁶ Works, ed. Grosart, II, 291.

⁷ Ed. Anthony Hall, 1722, p. 237.

ELIZABETHAN ALLUSIONS

Before [Sackville] in Age, if not also in Noble, Courtly, and Lustrous English, is that of the Songs and Sonnets of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey . . . written chiefly by him, and by Sr Tho. Wiat, not the dangerous Commotioner but his worthy Father. Nevertheless they who most commend those Poems, and exercises of honourable Wit, if they have seen that incomparable Earl of Surrey his English Translation of Virgil's Æneids, which for a book, or two, he admirably rendreth, almost Line for Line, will bear me witness that those other were Foils and Sportives.

Other writers were much more cordial. For instance, Sir John Harington merely reflected popular opinion when in the preface to Orlando Furioso (1591) he wrote that Wyatt and Surrey "are yet called the first refiners of the English tong."¹ Drayton, as has already been shown, highly praises Wyatt, Surrey, and the other miscellany poets in Englands Heroicall Epistles (1598) — generous praise from a fine poet. Robert Fletcher speaks in The Nine English Worthies (1606)² of "the learned pen, Of Princely Surrey, once a Poet sweet," as well as of "Sir Thomas Wyat, or like gentlemen." Ben Jonson in his *Discoveries*³ lists among other writers "the elder Wiat; Henry, Earle of Surrey" as "for their times admirable: and the more, because they began Eloquence with us." Finally — though the citations could be almost indefinitely increased — the greatest of all poets had studied the volume, even if he had no exaggerated opinion of its merits. It is Master Slender, not Shakespeare, who "had rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here";⁴ but it is Shakespeare himself who by putting No. 212 into the grave-digger's song in Hamlet made that poem world-famous. Two centuries later its fame was augmented when Goethe included a version of it in Faust.

A temporary decline in the popularity of Tottel's Miscellany is evidenced by the fact that, so far as is known, no edition was issued for more than a hundred years after 1587. Early in the eighteenth century, however, thanks largely to Pope's commendation of Surrey, three

¹ In one of his epigrams (ed. N. E. McClure, 1926, pp. 217-218) Harington confesses to having borrowed "some good conceits" from a classic author, and adds,

"But Surrey did the same, and worthy Wyatt,
And they had praise and reputation by it."

² Page 51.

³ Ed. G. B. Harrison, 1923, p. 37.

⁴ The Merry Wives of Windsor, I. i. 205-206.

INTRODUCTION

editions appeared.¹ They were not especially successful as business ventures, but they did keep the collection before the minds of a few readers. Then Elizabeth Cooper gave considerable space to it in her Historical and Poetical Medley: or Muses Library (1738), declaring that "in Purity of Language, and Sweetness of Sound, [Surrey] far surpass'd his Contemporaries, and all that had preceded him. — Nay, I believe no Writer that followed him for many Years, can justly vie with him in either of these Beauties."² To illustrate this praise, she reprinted ten of his poems³ and likewise included four of Wyatt's,⁴ although to Mrs. Cooper Wyatt "does not appear to have much Imagination: neither are his Verses so musical or well polish'd as Lord Surrey's."⁵ Four poems from the uncertain authors⁶ bring to an end her reprints from the miscellany.

Horace Walpole, in A Catalogue of the Royal and Noble Authors of England, Scotland, and Ireland (1758),⁷ called Surrey "an almost classic author" — a phrase strongly reprehended in The Gentleman's Magazine for January, 1759 — and characterized the miscellany as "a small volume of elegant and tender sonnets composed by Surrey; and with them some others of that age, particularly of sir Thomas Wyat the elder, a very accomplished gentleman." Another admirer was Bishop Thomas Percy, who as early as 1763 contemplated getting out an edition of his own,⁸ but postponed it no doubt because of his work on the Reliques of Ancient English Poetry (1765). In the latter publication⁹ Percy included three of Tottel's poems.¹⁰ Among other anthologies Henry Headley's Select Beauties of Ancient English Poetry (1787) deserves special mention because the editor not only calls Surrey "the first refiner of our language, and the unrivalled ornament of his age and country,"¹¹ but also emphatically declares that Wyatt "deserves

¹ See pp. 37-43, above.

² Page 56. John Hughes, The Works of Edmund Spenser, I (1715), xciv, had likewise spoken favorably of "the Earl of Surry's Lyrics."

³ Pages 57-69 (Nos. 2, 3, 8, 9, 12, 15, 17, 20, 27, 33).

⁴ Pages 70-80 (Nos. 87, 119, 125, 126).

⁵ Page 70.

⁶ Pages 81-86 (Nos. 170, 174, 193, 199).

⁷ Ed. Thomas Park, I (1806), 255, 260-261.

⁸ See pp. 45-46, above.

⁹ Ed. Wheatley, 1876, I, 179-182, II, 50-53, 75-79.

¹⁰ Nos. 181, 211, 212.

¹¹ I, lvi. Surrey's Nos. 2, 9, 12 are reprinted at II, 78, 84, 96.

THE MISCELLANY IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

equally of posterity with Surrey for the diligence with which he cultivated polite letters.”¹ This remarkable utterance can hardly be duplicated until very recent times. As a final word about eighteenth-century anthologies, George Ellis included in his Specimens of the Early English Poets (1790) thirteen poems — two by Surrey, three by Wyatt, eight by uncertain authors.² In the second edition (1801) he printed, often in abridged form, twenty-one;³ and in the third (1803) these same twenty-one increased by four more of Surrey’s, six more of Wyatt’s, another of Vaux’s, five of Grimald’s, making a total of thirty-seven.⁴

From 1793, the date of Anderson’s English poets,⁵ to the present day, the miscellany has met with continual appreciation and study. The numerous editions of it, or of the works of Wyatt and Surrey, have already been sufficiently described. Anthologies — and their name is legion — have helped to familiarize the book.⁶ Sixteen of its poems, for example, are included in W. J. Linton’s Rare Poems of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries (1883);⁷ eight in The Oxford Book of English Verse (1900);⁸ forty-seven in Edward Arber’s Surrey and Wyatt Anthology (1900);⁹ forty in Mr. Padelford’s Early Sixteenth Century Lyrics (1907);¹⁰ nineteen in Mr. Norman Ault’s Elizabethan Lyrics from the Original Texts (1925);¹¹ three in Mr. Edmonstoune Duncan’s Lyrics

¹ I, lxx-lxvi. Wyatt’s No. 125 is reprinted at II, 34-37.

² Nos. 2, 20, 57, 87, 107, 175, 181, 199, 210, 214, 257, 298, 303.

³ Including (in volume II) all but No. 57 from his first edition, plus Nos. 8, 15, 27, 30, 53, 78, 211, 236, 249.

⁴ The added poems are Nos. 1, 6, 29, 31, 79, 93, 99, 119, 121, 125, 134, 150, 154, 165, 166, 212.

⁵ See p. 43, above.

⁶ Four of the poems (Nos. 176, 196, 197, 236) are reprinted in Censura Literaria, I (1805), 249-255.

⁷ Nos. 53, 79, 82, 128, 170, 174, 175, 185, 199, 229, 244, 249, 250, 294-296.

⁸ Nos. 2, 17, 27, 52, 87, 128, 190, 199.

⁹ Including 22 by Wyatt (Nos. 50, 52, 54, 59, 64, 66, 68, 69, 77, 86, 87, 91, 93, 97, 103, 105, 115, 116, 121, 124, 125, 270), 19 by Surrey (Nos. 1, 2, 7, 8, 11, 12, 14-17, 19-21, 26, 27, 31, 33, 35, 264), 2 by Vaux (Nos. 211, 212), and 4 by uncertain authors (Nos. 181, 197, 201, 278). Attributions of the authorship of these poems are rather wildly made by Arber. He observes, by the way, that his book should have been called The Wyatt and Surrey Anthology, because Wyatt was “the nobler man and the nobler Poet of the two,” but isn’t so called since it is “customary to say Surrey and Wyatt, simply because the former was a Peer.” The fashion has changed since 1900.

¹⁰ Nos. 1-4, 7, 8, 10-13, 15, 17, 19, 24, 27, 29, 33, 49, 50, 54, 59, 62, 72, 87, 92-94, 97, 102, 115, 121, 149, 155, 181, 193, 199, 200, 263, 264, 282.

¹¹ Nos. 2, 10, 17, 20, 27, 33, 50, 52, 53, 87, 128, 171, 190, 199, 212, 235, 236, 244, 257.

INTRODUCTION

from the Old Song Books (1927).¹ Other reprints appear in the innumerable text-books like Century Readings for a Course in English Literature (1911). Honorable space is devoted to Tottel's Miscellany in histories of English literature, and hence by mere repetition its name looms large in the minds of most students.

None the less, it seems not improbable that much of this interest is historical, and that (to borrow Voltaire's pronouncement on Dante) the reputation of Tottel's Miscellany has gone on increasing because it has had few readers.

¹ Nos. 2, 87, 238.

NOTES

NOTES

References consisting of two or more arabic numerals separated by a period (as 9. 3, 98. 7, 117. 35) are to pages and lines of the text in volume I; those of arabic numerals without a period but accompanied by "p." or "page" (as p. 51, page 118) are to pages in the present volume (II). For words and phrases in the text of volume I not commented on in the Notes consult the Glossarial Index.

The sixteenth-century editions of Tottel's Miscellany are referred to by the system of letters (explained in more detail on pages 7-12, 20-36, above) that follows:

- A* 1st edition, June 5, 1557
- B* 2d edition, July 31, 1557 (British Museum copy)
- C* 2d edition, July 31, 1557 (Capell copy)
- D* 3d edition, 1559 (British Museum copy)
- D 4th edition, 1559 (Holford copy)
- E* 5th edition, 1565
- F* 6th edition, 1567
- G* 7th edition, 1574
- H* 8th edition, 1585
- I* 9th edition, 1587

*D is not considered in the Variant Readings of volume I. It should, then, be carefully observed that in the following Notes *D is included (see page 25, above) in all embracive references like C+, D+, D-G, D-I, and likewise that it has the manuscript readings cited from the Bodleian copy of I (see page 26, above), unless a specific remark is made to the contrary.

The following works are cited by catch-titles or abbreviations:

Arber, Edward. Tottel's Miscellany, English Reprints, London, 1870. [For complete details see pp. 59-61, above.]

Arte of English Poesie, The, 1589, ed. Edward Arber, English Reprints, 1869.

D. N. B. = Dictionary of National Biography.

Foxwell, A. K. The Poems of Sir Thomas Wiat, 2 vols., University of London Press, 1913. [See pp. 61-62, above.]

Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions (1578), A [by Thomas Proctor and others], ed. Hyder E. Rollins, Harvard University Press, 1926.

Handful of Pleasant Delights (1584), A, By Clement Robinson and Divers Others, ed. Hyder E. Rollins, Harvard University Press, 1924.

Koepfel, Emil. "Studien zur Geschichte des englischen Petrarchismus im sechzehnten Jahrhundert," Romanische Forschungen, v (1889), 65-97.

Lilly, Joseph. A Collection of Seventy-Nine Black-Letter Ballads and Broad-sides, Printed in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, 1867. [Lilly wrote the preface and printed the book.]

Melbancke, Brian. Philotimus. The Warre betwixt Nature and Fortune, 1583. [See Studies in Philology, extra series, 1 (May, 1929), 40-57.]

Merrill, L. R. The Life and Poems of Nicholas Grimald, Yale University Press, 1925.

N. E. D. = A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles.

Nott, G. F. The Works of Henry Howard Earl of Surrey and of Sir Thomas Wyatt, 2 vols. (vol. 1 Surrey, vol. 11 Wyatt), London, 1815-1816. [See pp. 52-53, above; and for an explanation of references to Nott's statements in "11607. i. 7" and "C. 60. O. 13" see pp. 48-49.]

Padelford, F. M. The Poems of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, University of Washington Press, 1920. [See pp. 62-64, above.]

Paradise of Dainty Devices (1576-1606), The [by Richard Edwards and others], ed. Hyder E. Rollins, Harvard University Press, 1927.

Petrarch. Le Rime, ed. Giuseppe Salvo Cozzo, Florence, 1904. [The texts, page-numbers, and poem-numbers of citations from Petrarch come from this book, except in one case specifically noted; but the old-fashioned method of numbering the "sonnets in life" and "in death" has likewise been retained for the possible convenience of students.]

Phoenix Nest, The, 1593, ed. Hugh Macdonald, Etchells and Macdonald, London, 1926.

Rollins, Hyder E. An Analytical Index to the Ballad-Entries (1557-1709) in the Registers of the Company of Stationers of London, University of North Carolina Press, 1924. [Printed also in Studies in Philology, XXI (1924), 1-324.]

Turberville, George. Epitaphes, Epigrams, Songs and Sonets, 1567 (reprinted by J. P. Collier, 1867).

It is necessary to say a word about the variant readings given in the Notes. When the texts of AB are collated with manuscript or early printed copies, punctuation is ignored, and only actual variants in diction (not in orthography, except for a few unusual or doubtful cases) are listed. The texts of AB are collated with the modern reprints in accordance with what the editors of those reprints attempted to do. Miss Foxwell, for instance, modernizes punctuation and the use of u, v, i, j, usually expands contractions, and omits the original poem-titles; Padelford substitutes punctuation, capitalization, and poem-titles of his own, and expands contractions: these deviations from AB are, accordingly, not listed in my collations. Merrill, on the other hand, attempts to reproduce the text of A exactly, except in its old use of u, v, i, j, and in the expansion of contractions; hence all his variations, even of punctuation, are enumerated.

2.18 and in moe hereafter. This phrase may indicate that Tottel knew he had not secured all of Wyatt's and Surrey's poems but hoped to get and publish others later on.

3. 2 (No. 1) Description of the restless state, &c. In every edition (No. [1] in B-I, sigs. A2-A2^v in B-H, A2^v-A3 in I). The poem is printed by Padelford (pp. 49-50) from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529: see his notes, p. 170, for variants in other manuscript copies), with the following variants:

3. 6 furth his] forthe the 7 earth] yerthe
 9 new] now
 15 mine in flame] my inflame
 16 able] hable
 18 hath] to 19 in time] somtyme
 20 In] Yet
 22 kindes] kynd
 26 All] Eche: seeth] sees: heauens] heaven
 28 It] Him
 30 tormentes] torment
 31 And] To 32 opprest] represt
 33 it] yet
 34 trauailes of mine] trauaile of my 38 by] in: appere] should pere
 39 in] with: pace^{1,2}] paas
4. 2, 3 the] that
 3 lace] laase
 7 found] fynde
 11 agazed] atgaas
 14 flee] flye
 15 venomde] venymd
 18 tene] will 21 my] me: els] elles

The poem is written in terza rima.

6-11 The sonne hath twice . . . healthfulnesse. Padelford (p. 182) suggests a comparison with Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde, v. 8-11:

The golden-tressed Phebus heighe on-lofte
 Thryës hadde alle with his bemes shene
 The snowes molte, and Zephirus as ofte
 Y-brought ayein the tendre leues grene, etc.

14-15 What warmth . . . in flame hath made. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in vita 150, lines 1-2 (Rime, 202, p. 199):

D'un bel, chiaro, polito et vivo ghiaccio move la fiamma che m' incende et strugge.

23 At hand to melt. Koeppl (Studien, p. 80) suggests the reading At hand to freeze — the antithesis that would be expected. He supports his emendation by a citation from Petrarch's sonetto in vita 169, line 12 (Rime, 224, p. 220; also in Petrarch's Trionfo d'Amore, cap. III [Rime, ed. Carrer, II, 509]), “s’arder da lunge et agghiacciar da presso,” and by one from another poem of Surrey’s at 6. 42-43. But no change is really necessary. With lines 22-23 compare also Wyatt at 68. 33, Surrey at 206. 16, and Thomas Watson, The Hekatompathia, 1582, K2^v (ed. Arber, 1870, p. 112):

straunge is my case,
In mid’st of froast to burne, and freze in flame.

3. 35 For then, as one that hath the light in hate. Cf. Petrarch, sestina in vita 1, line 2 (Rime, 22, p. 15), “se non se alquanti ch’anno in odio il sole.”

39-4. 2-4 And in my minde I measure pace, Esc. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in vita 123, lines 1-4 (Rime, 175, p. 179):

Quando mi vene inanzi il tempo e ’l loco,
ov’ i’ perdei me stesso, e ’l caro nodo, ond’ Amor di sua man m’ avinse in modo che l’amar mi fe’ dolce e ’l pianger gioco.

4. 7-11 For if I found sometime, Esc. Perhaps suggested by Petrarch, sonetto in vita 137, lines 7-14 (Rime, 189, pp. 189-190), the source of No. 50: see p. 169, below.

8 Those sterres, Esc. With this conceit of the lover’s eying the stars for guidance, as does the sailor, compare 175. 16-17 and Petrarch, canzone in vita 8, stanza 4 (Rime, 73, p. 82):

Come a forza di venti stanco nocchier di notte alza la testa
a’ duo lumi ch’à sempre il nostro polo;
così ne la tempesta
ch’ i’ sostengo d’ amor, gli occhi lucenti
sono il mio segno e ’l mio conforto solo.

Petrarch no doubt borrowed the idea from Horace’s Carmina, II. 16.

14-16 And yf I flee I carie, Esc. Koepfel (Studien, p. 80) connects this with Petrarch’s sonetto in vita 155, lines 9-14 (Rime, 209, p. 209),

Et qual cervo ferito di saetta
col ferro avelenato dentr’ al fianco fugge, et più duolsi quanto più s’affretta, etc.;

and with Virgil’s Aeneid, IV. 66-69,

est mollis flamma medullas
interea, et tacitum vivit sub pectore vulnus.
Uritur infelix Dido totaque vagatur urbe furens, qualis coniecta cerva sagitta.

18 tene. The terza rima demands will, the reading of the MS.

23 (No. 2) Description of Spring, Esc. In every edition (No. [2] in

B-I, sigs. A2^v in B-H, A3 in I). Padelford (p. 45) reprints the poem from A, misprinting flinges (line 32) as flings. Nott (Surrey, p. 280) calls No. 2 "perhaps the most beautiful specimen of descriptive poetry in our language" — surely a great exaggeration.

This "sonnet" — which has only two rhymes (in the peculiar scheme of abab abab abab aa), and which is about as much like a rondel as a sonnet, is adapted from Petrarch, sonetto in morte 42 (Rime, 310, p. 292):

Zephиро torna, e 'l bel tempo rimena,
e i fiori et l'erbe, sua dolce famiglia,
et garrir Progne et pianger Philomena, et primavera candida et vermiglia.
Ridono i prati e 'l ciel si rasserena;
Giove s'allegra di mirar sua figlia;
l'aria et l'acqua et la terra è d'amor piena:
ogni animal d'amar si riconsiglia.
Ma per me, lasso, tornano i più gravi sospiri, che del cor profondo tragge quella ch' al ciel se ne portò le chiavi;
et cantar augelletti et fiorir piagge,
e 'n belle donne honeste atti soavi
sono un deserto et fere aspre et selvagge.

No. 2 is imitated rather closely in Richard Edwards's "Maister Edwardes his I may not," a poem in the Paradise, 1585, pp. 131-132.

4. 31 The hart hath hong his olde hed, &c. That is, has shed his antlers.

34 The adder all her sloughe awaye she slinges. In his translation of the Aeneid, 1557, sig. C^v, Surrey wrote of the adder, "when she her slough had flong."

35 The swift swallow pursueth the flyes smale. Cf. Chaucer, The Parlement of Foules, line 353, "The swallow, mordrer of the flyës smale."

5. 2 (No. 3) Description of the restlesse state of a louer. In every edition (No. [3] in B-I, sigs. A3 in B-H, A3^v in I). Padelford (p. 53) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

5. 5 me . . . to] did make me
9 By ill gydyng, had let my waye
10 Mine eyen] Whose eyes
11 Had lost me manye a noble praye
13 with] by
14 The] Their 15 The fervent rage of hidden flame
16 doe] did
17 hath sowen] had sowne
18 The brewt therof my frewt opprest
19 Ere] Or: buds] bloomes: blowen] blowne
20 when] where: eyen] eyes
25 glowing] flaming

5. 27 wherin] wherwith
 30 els] elles
 31 specked] sparkled
 33 worshipt] worships
 34 norished] nourysheth

No. 3 was perhaps registered at Stationers' Hall in 1564-65 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 369) as "the complaynte of the Restles lover &c."

5. 36 (No. 4) Description of the fickle, &c. In every edition (No. [4] in B-I, sigs. A3-A4 in B-H, A3^v-A4^v in I). Padelford (pp. 59-60) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

6. 3 doe] dooth
 5 whom] which
 6 makes the one] cawseth hertes
 7 other] tothers
 8 Whote] Hot
 11 a . . . hel] the darke, diep well
 13 willes . . . beseke] wooll that still my mortall foo I do beseche 15 lost ere] spilt or 16 So] Lo: this meanes] these rules: may] can 18 content] convert: self] will 20 harmes] harme: dissembling] dissembled
 22 face] faas
 23 chekes] cheke
 25 wote] know
 26 by roate] be roote
 27 furth] forth
 29 doth] can 31 in] hys
 32 list] lyke: grace] face
 33 pleasures] pleasure: delight the] delightes his: doe] doth 37 would] colde
 40 with others] withouten
 43 I¹⁻³] to
 7. 2 a yelding] the yeldon
 3 meash] mashe
 4 Or . . . season] Which seldome tasted swete, to seasoned
 5 glimse] glyns
 7 wil] may: may] will 8 The] That: the] those 9 The . . . the] That . . . that

Padelford (pp. 186-187) says the poem "is largely indebted" to Petrarch's Trionfo d'Amore, III. 151-190, IV. 139-153. He points out borrowings from other Petrarchan sources as well; and Nott (Surrey, p. 297) found still others in the second canto of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso.

6. 6-7 golden burning dart, And . . . leaden colde. On the golden and leaden arrows of Cupid see No. 305 (253. 22 n.), Ovid's Metamorphoses, I. 466-471, and the notes in Nott's Surrey, p. 299, and in the Paradise, pp. 259-260.

6. 41 And how the Lion chastised is, &c. Compare the passage in Chaucer's Squire's Tale, F. 490-491,

And for to maken other be war by me,
As by the whelp chasted is the leoun.

Skeat (Chaucer, v, 383-384) explained the foregoing lines as a proverb, since they occur in George Herbert's Jacula Prudentum (Works, ed. Willmott, 1854, p. 328) in the form, "Beat the Dog before the Lion." He also refers to a like expression in Randle Cotgrave's dictionary of 1611 (s. v. battre), and cites Othello, II. iii. 275-276, "even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion." Nevertheless, the chief collections of English proverbs ignore the lion and the dog, and Skeat can hardly be said to have penetrated Chaucer's meaning. It can readily be explained by a glance at Edward Topsell's The Historie of Foure-Footed Beastes, 1607, p. 480, in which on the authority of Albertus Magnus (who died in 1280) we are told "that the best way to tame lyons is to bring vp with them a little dogge, and oftentimes to beate the same dogge in their presence, by which discipline, the lion is made more tractable to the will of his keeper." The matter is discussed in Notes and Queries, 8th series, vi (1894), 76-77 (see also p. 377, and v [1894], 407), where a French MS. of the thirteenth century is cited as containing the words, "Pour douter (par crainte) bat-on le chien devant le lyon"; and in The Athenaeum, February 10, 1900, pp. 187-188, where a German reference of 1517 is reproduced—"Das vi das der Lew fürcht ist ein hündlin, Wenn man es vor im schlecht, so schmuckt er sich und erschrickt, und gedencket nit an sein stercke."

42-43 In standyng nere my fire, &c. See 3. 23 n.

7. 10 (No. 5) Complaint of a louer, that defied loue, &c. In every edition (No. [5] in B-I, sigs. A4-A4^v in B-H, A4^v-A5 in I). Padelford (pp. 61-62) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

7. 21 swete] sweete
39 litle] little: receaue] receue
8. 8 quod] quoth
17 relefe] relese

A Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 126-126^v) contains a sequel (apparently incomplete) to this poem, running as follows:

Dum spero pereō: — Dum spiro spero: —

When wynter with his shivering blastes/ the Sommer gan assaile with force of myght and rygour greate/ his pleasant tyme to quayle and when the lustie greene had left/ each holt and hill so hie and everye pleasaunt place appearde full pale and wan to eye the savours sweete and dewye droppe/ that wonted was to be in everye field the flowers fayre/ no suche thing can I see but Boreas with his blustering blast/ eache leafe had layd full loe that wonted was in Sommer tyme/ full highe on tree to groe and every birdd hath bound hym self/ no more to strayne his voyce untill the pleasant spring shall come/ wheare in he may rejoyce first gan hym hye the horye frost/ to feoble flowres fearce whose chilling colde bothe roote and rynde/ of hearb and trie do pearce eache fowle wext faynt and everye beast/ muste browce wheare he may best of busshe or bryere to lyck the leaves/ and thinck hym at a feast

 the lyttle Emyte slowthfull was/ within the mowle hill hydd to shrowde it from the wynters blast/ as nature doth her bydde
 I meane that weate and wanishe moone/ that then Novembre was when that eache wight the howse can holde/ and pleasant walkes let passe eache daye so drowsye was and I/ in dumpes had suche delight thatt then dispayre his tyme gan spye/ thincking to worke his spight and thus he sayde thow wretchid man/ whye art thou yet alyve knowing that fortune is thie foe/ more then I can discryve for synce thie birth thou knowest best/ what favour thou hast found att fortunes handes in thyne affaires/ wheare at she ever frownd and therto hath she made an othe/ even still so to persever never to be thye ffrend at all/ but as thie foe for ever no pen can print the peniurie/ ne tongue may yet discryve the wofull chaunce as yet to come/ of some that bene alyve yet in the starrs who so can reede/ is wrytten and ygrave the wretched lyf that thou shalt lead/ til thie retourne to grave and eke the plannettes seven hath sworne/ eache one to be thie foe before thou first receavid breath/ yfeared was thie woe now sence thie wretchid destenie/ thou doste well understand breviat thie dayes and I dispaire/ shall helpp the heare at hand whearwith in sowne neare sunck adowne/ had not hope hyed in haste cryng what man art thou that wilt/ thie self awaye thus cast and thus me thought he spake me still/ in wordes as ye shall heare
 I hope hath holpen thowsandes ten/ deludid by dispayre ys this thie greif for love quod he/ or want of worldlye welth losse of thie ffrend, losse of thye tyme/ or ells for lack of health what yf thie Ladie thou hast lost/ through her disceaptfull way another thou mast fynd as true/ as was Penelope Or if as Cresus thou dost covett/ with ritchesse to rule all remembre well how horde hath hate/ and clyming ofte doth fall or if thie frend throughe ficklenesse/ hath broke his faithfull band knytt then the knott more surer next/ whear as thou takest in hand ys theise three now the cruell cause/ of this thie mortall payne or losse of tyme the whiche thou knowest/ will nott begott agayne what though that fortune froward was/ to the in youthfull race thye tyme half spent ynoughe remaynes/ if natures lawe take place where in so wyselye thou mayst worke/ as doth the lyttle Antt or as the busye bee thou seeste/ whiche never feeleth wantt so that thou have me hope for aye/ still grafted in thie hart so shalt thou sone thie dolefull dayes/ to pleasant lyf convert Throughe hope did Iason take in hand/ an enterpryse moste bolde three wonders wrought and after wan/ the noble fleese of goolde Thesius slew the mynitawre/ and David with his slynge
 the great Golyas overcame/ through hope they wrought this thing.

7. 33 the new betrothed birdes ycoupled. This choice of mates was supposed to take place (as Chaucer's Parlement of Foules reminds us) on St. Valentine's day.

8. 9 Vnwillingly. The reading unwittingly in B+ fits the context better.

24 (No. 6) Complaint of a louer rebuked. In every edition (No. [6] in B-I, sigs. A4^v in B-G, A4^v-A5 in H, A5 in I). Padelford (p. 46) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

8. 26 liueth . . . in] doth raine and liue within 27 That] And
 30 She, that me taught to loue] But she that tawght me love
 32 cloke] looke
 35 whereas . . . plaines] where he doth lurke and playne
 37 faultlesse] fawtles: paynes] payine
 39 his¹] the: takes his] taketh

No. 6 is translated from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 91 (Rime, 140, pp. 154-155):

Amor, che nel penser mio vive et regna,
 e 'l suo seggio maggior nel mio cor tene,
 talor armato ne la fronte vene:
 ivi si loca et ivi pon sua insegna.
 Quella ch' amare et sofferir n'ensegna,
 e vol che 'l gran desio, l'accesa spene,
 ragion, vergogna et reverenza affrene,
 di nostro ardir fra sé stessa si sdegna.
 Onde Amor paventoso fugge al core,
 lasciando ogni sua impresa, et piange et trema:
 ivi s'asconde et non appar più fore.
 Che poss' io far, temendo il mio Signore, se non star seco infin a l'ora extrema?
 ché bel fin fa chi ben amando more.

No. 37, by Wyatt, is likewise a translation of this sonnet. Padelford (p. 180) remarks that Surrey's translation "is more lively and dramatic than the original. By careful compression Surrey is able to add the thought that Love's arms are those 'wherein with me he fought,' thus securing later the fine contrast between the ease with which Love subdued the lover and his ignominious flight from the presence of the lady."

39 Swete is his death, &c. For other phrasings of Petrarch's final line see Ronsard's Amours (Œuvres, ed. Marty-Laveaux, 1, 86), "Belle fin fait qui meurt en bien aimant"; and Desportes's Diane, 1. 18 (Œuvres, ed. Michiels, p. 20), "Douce est la mort qui vient en bien aimant." Cf. the Paradise, 121. 19, as well as The Phoenix Nest, 1593, p. 71, "No better end, than that which comes by Loue."

9. 2 (No. 7) Complaint of the louer disdained. In every edition (No. [7] in B-I, sigs. B in BC, A5 in D-H, A5-A5^v in I). Padelford (pp. 46-47) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

9. 6 fired] secret
 11 An other] One, eke: yse] snow
 16 growen] growne

The unique readings of B (listed in the Variant Readings) should be observed.

Nott (in 11607. i. 7, p. 21, as well as in his Surrey, pp. 279–280) remarks that the two springs of Cyprus may have been suggested by the two fountains which play so important a part in Boiardo's Orlando Innamorato, i. iii, and Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, i. 78, XLII. 35–38, 62–65. To quote from Orlando Furioso, i. 78 (ed. Pietro Papini, 1916, p. 13):

E questo hanno causato due fontane
 Che di diverso effetto hanno liquore,
 Ambe in Ardenna, e non sono lontane:
 D'amoroso disio l'una empie il core;
 Chi bee de l'altra, senza amor rimane,
 E volge tutto in ghiaccio il primo ardore.
 Rinaldo gustò d'una, e amor lo strugge:
 Angelica de l'altra, e l'odia e fugge.

For further parallels see the discussion in Pio Rajna's Le Fonti dell' Orlando Furioso, 1876, 1900.

9. 17 (No. 8) Description and praise of his loue Geraldine. In every edition (No. [8] in B-I, sigs. B in BC, A₅ in D-H, A₅^v in I). Padelford (p. 68) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

9. 21 shore] showre
 22 Cambers] Chambares
 23 Fostered] Ffostred
 26 With] With a: tasteth costlly] tastes gostly 31 Her] Om.
 32 can] may

The unique readings of B (listed in the Variant Readings) should be observed.

No. 8 is the only poem of Surrey's (but see the notes to No. 14) that can definitely be connected with the "Fair Geraldine," who is discussed on pp. 71–75, above. In Englands Heroicall Epistles (1598) Drayton paraphrases much of it; in his notes (N₃–N₄) he quotes 9. 19–22, 27, 29–30, remarking, "Which sonnet being altogether a description of his [Surrey's] loue, I doe alledge in diuers places of this glosse, as proofes of what I write." In "The Description of Ireland" which he contributed to Holinshed's Chronicles (1808 reprint, vi, 46) Richard Stanyhurst reprints No. 8 and identifies its heroine with Lady Geraldine.

20 Florence was sometyme her auncient seate. The Fitzgeralds traced their descent from the Gheraldi family of Florence. Her is probably the old pronoun-form of their.

9. 24 her dame, of princes blood. Geraldine's mother, Lady Elizabeth Grey, was the granddaughter of that Elizabeth Woodville who was Edward IV's queen and Henry VIII's cousin.

27 Honsdon did first present her to mine yien. The Princess Mary was at Hunsdon in March, 1537, and at Hampton Court (line 29) early in July. Probably Surrey saw the nine-year-old Elizabeth Fitzgerald on these occasions.

30 Windsor, alas, dothe chase me from her sight. Because Surrey was confined at Windsor in July, 1537, for striking a courtier within the royal grounds.

31-32 Her beauty . . . obtaine her loue. Imitated by the closing lines of a poem in the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 56,

For Beauties sake, sent downe from Ioue aboue, Thrise happy is hee, that can attayne her loue.

A Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 113) has another copy of the Gallery poem, written in honor of "N. N." There the final couplet reads:

for bewties sake sent downe from heaven above
thryse happie he, that can attayne her Love.

33 (No. 9) The frailtie and hurtfulnes of beautie. In every edition (No. [9] in B-I, sigs. B-B^v in BC, A5-A5^v in D-H, A5^v in I). Padelford (p. 47) reprints the poem from A, misprinting dothe (line 8) as doth, and moste (line 10) as most. There is another copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 139^v), which is signed "L Vawse." Nott (p. 288) refuses to accept Surrey's authorship; Padelford (p. 181) says that if the poem be "by Surrey, it is not Surrey at his best." Perhaps it is safe to credit the authorship to Lord Vaux.

It seems to me likely that No. 9 was suggested by lines in Seneca's Hippolytus beginning (761-763),

Anceps forma bonum mortalibus, exigui donum breve temporis,
ut velox celeri pede laberis,

and ending (773-774),

res est forma fugax; quis sapiens bono confidat fragili?

The author of The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 136, prints an imitation of No. 9, declaring that he wrote it "to daunt the insolence of a beautifull woman."

35-10. 2 Brittle beautie . . . apt to faile. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in morte 63, lines 1-2 (Rime, 350, p. 328):

Questo nostro caduco et fragil bene, ch'è vento et ombra et à nome beltate.

10. 3, 8 Tickell treasure, Iewel of ieopardie. Cf. Brian Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, E3: "treasure is tickle, and a iuell of ieopardy."

14 (No. 10) A complaint by night, &c. In every edition (No. [10] in B-I, sigs. B^v in BC, A5^v in D-H, A6 in I). Padelford (p. 45) reprints the poem from A, misprinting doutfull (line 24) as doubtful.

No. 10 is adapted from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 113 (Rime, 164, p. 172):

Or che 'l ciel et la terra e 'l vento tace, et le fere e gli augelli il sonno affrena, notte il carro stellato in giro mena et nel suo letto il mar senz' onda giace;
veggio, penso, ardo, piango; et chi mi sface sempre m' è inanzi per mia dolce pena:
guerra è 'l mio stato, d' ira et di duol piena;
et sol di lei pensando ò qualche pace.
Così sol d' una chiara fonte viva move 'l dolce et l' amaro ond' io mi pasco;
una man sola mi risana et punge.
Et perché 'l mio martir non giunga a riva, mille volte il dí moro et mille nasco;
tanto da la salute mia son lunge!

Petrarch's sonnet was translated into Latin by Thomas Watson and included in his Hekatompathia, 1582, as sonnet 66, beginning, "Dum cœlum, dum terra tacet, ventusque silescit."

30 (No. 11) How eche thing saue the louer, &c. In every edition (No. [11] in B-I, sigs. B^v-B2 in BC, A5^v-A6 in D-H, A6 in I). Padelford (p. 68) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

- 10. 33 Windsor] Windesor
- 35 The] Ech
- 36 blossomd] blossomed
- 11. 3 discouer . . . my] discouered. Than did to
- 4 ioly] ioily
- 6 the] myne
- 7 breakes] brake
- 8 In] And
- 9 vapord] vapored
- 10 whiche] to
- 11 halfebent] have bent

33-34 When Windsor walles, &c. Drayton (Englands Heroicall Epistles, 1598, N4) quotes these lines as showing that Surrey at Windsor "inioyed the presence of his faire and vertuous mistris . . . by reason of Queene Katherines vsuall abroad there, (on whom this Lady Geraldine was attending)."

11. 6-7 the heauy charge of care Heapt in my brest, &c. Notice Surrey's repetition of this phraseology at 19. 9-10.

11. 9 My vapord eyes. Surrey uses vapored, meaning misty with tears, again at 27. 35. Cf. also John Studley's Medea, act v (in Seneca His Tenne Tragedies, 1581, fol. 138), "with vapourde weeping Eye"; and The Phoenix Nest, 1593, p. 80, "With vapored sighes, I dim the aire." Nott (Surrey, p. 358) notes several other instances.

12 (No. 12) Vow to loue faithfully, &c. In every edition (No. [12] in B-I, sigs. B2 in BC, A6 in D-H, A6-A6^v in I). Padelford (p. 47) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529). His text differs so greatly from the text of A that I give it below:

Set we [me] wheras the sonne dothe perche the grene,
Or whear his beames may not dissolue the ise,
In temprat heat, wheare he is felt and sene;
With prowde people, in presence sad and wyse;
Set me in base, or yet in highe degree;
In the long night, or in the shortyst day;
In clere weather, or whear mysts thickest be;
In lofte yowthe, or when my heares be grey;
Set me in earthe in heauen, or yet in hell;
In hill, in dale, or in the fowming floode;
Thrawle, or at large, aliue whersoo I dwell;
Sike, or in healthe; in yll fame, or in good;
Yours will I be, and with that onely thought Comfort my self when that my hape is nowght.

The we in the first line is a printer's error, and Padelford has me in his index, p. 238.

No. 12 is translated from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 95 (Rime, 145, p. 159):

Pommi ove 'l sole occide i fiori et l'erba,
o dove vince lui il ghiaccio et la neve;
pommi ov'è il carro suo temprato et leve,
et ov'è chi cel rende o chi cel serba:
pommi in humil fortuna od in superba,
al dolce aere sereno, al fosco et greve;
pommi a la notte, al dí lungo ed al breve,
a la matura etate od a l'acerba:
pommi in cielo od in terra od in abisso,
in alto poggio, in valle ima et palustre,
libero spirto od a' suoi membri affisso:
pommi con fama oscura o con illustre:
sarò qual fui, vivrò com'io son visso, continuando il mio sospir trilustre.

Surrey, appropriately enough, does not translate literally sospir trilustre. Petrarch, in his turn, is indebted to Horace's Carmina, 1. 22:

pone me pigris ubi nulla campis arbor aestiva recreatur aura, quod latus mundi nebulae malusque Iuppiter urget;

pone sub curru nimium propinqui solis in terra domibus negata:
dulce ridentem Lalagen amabo, dulce loquentem.

There is a similar passage in Propertius, Elegies, II. xv. 29-36. Numerous imitations of Petrarch's sonnet occur in French and Spanish as well as in English. Of the last it will suffice to mention the rendition in The Phoenix Nest, 1593, p. 82, which begins, "Set me where Phœbus heate, the flowers slaieyth." The author of The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 231, quotes No. 12, inadvertently assigning it to Wyatt, and concluding, "All which might haue bene said in these two verses.

*Set me wheresoeuer ye will,
I am and wilbe yours still."*

11. 29 (No. 13) Complaint that his ladie, &c. In every edition (No. [13] in B-I, sigs. B2-B2^v in BC, A6-A6^v in D-H, A6^v in I). The unique readings of B (listed in the Variant Readings) should be observed. Padelford's text (p. 46) comes from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), and runs thus:

I neuer saw youe, madam, laye aparte
Your cornet black, in colde nor yet in heate,
Sythe first ye knew of my desire so greate,
Which other fances chaced cleane from my harte.
Whiles to my self I did the thought reserve
That so vnware did wounde my wofull brest,
Pytie I saw within your hart dyd rest;
But since ye knew I did youe love and serve,
Your golden treese was clad alway in blacke,
Your smilyng lokes were hid thus euermore,
All that withdrawne that I did crave so sore.
So doth this cornet governe me, a lacke!
In sommere, sonne; in winter, breath of frost;
Of your faire eies whereby the light is lost.

No. 13 is a translation from Petrarch, ballata in vita 1 (Rime, II, p. 8):

Lassare il velo o per sole o per ombra,
Donna, non vi vid' io,
poi che in me conosceste il gran desio
ch'ogni altra voglia dentr' al cor mi sgombra.
Mentr'io portava i be' pensier celati ch'anno la mente desiando morta, vidivi di pietate ornare il volto;
ma poi ch' Amor di me vi fece accorta,
fuor i biondi capelli allor velati,
et l'amoroso sguardo in sé raccolto.
Quel ch' i' piú desiava in voi, m' è tolto;
sí mi governa il velo,
che per mia morte, et al caldo et al gielo,
de' be' vostr' occhi il dolce lume adombra.

12. 13 (No. 14) Request to his loue, &c. In every edition (No. [14] in B-I, sigs. B2^v in BC, A6^v in D-H, A6^v-A7 in I). Padelford (p. 48) reprints the poem from A, misprinting gyftes (line 24) as gyfts. The opening lines are a commonplace, telling how heaven had in the lady made a being too perfect to remain long on earth. That idea occurs in Petrarch, sonetti in vita 108, 190 (Rime, 159, 248, pp. 169, 238), and elsewhere.

23 Now certesse Ladie. In B only the reading is Now certesse Garret. Strangely enough, however, Nott (and most subsequent editors have followed him) declared that Garret appears in the second and third quartos (that is, presumably, BCD); while Padelford (p. 181) asserts that "the second and fourth editions" (which, judging from his bibliography on p. 220, are BCE) "read Garret instead of Ladie." To repeat, Garret occurs only in B; it was a common rendering of the name Fitzgerald. Hence Nott, riding his hobby (see pp. 73-74, above), connected the poem with Elizabeth Fitzgerald, the Fair Geraldine of Surrey's supposititious romance and the childish heroine of No. 8. Apparently, however, B had no authority whatever for substituting this name for Ladie.

29 (No. 15) Prisoned in windsor, he recounteth, &c. In every edition (No. [15] in B-I, sigs. B2^v-B3^v in BC, A6^v-A7^v in D-H, A7-A7^v in I). Padelford (pp. 69-70) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

- 13. 3 into] unto
- 5 seates] sales
- 13 grauell] graveld
- 15 one] the one: another whelme] overwhelme
- 17 meade] meades
- 19 trayned with] trayled by
- 23 ofte] soft
- 25 holtes] holte
- 26 auailed] avald
- 28 of] a
- 29 wide vales] voyd walles
- 30 reuiueth in] revive within
- 36 night] nightes
- 37 the ^a] my
- 43 doest] didest

In his notes to Surrey's epistle to Geraldine, in Englands Heroicall Epistles, 1598, N₄, Drayton quotes (from memory, as the verbal changes would indicate) 12. 34-35, 13. 2-6, 17, 21. Of No. 15 Courthope (A History of English Poetry, II [1897], 85) enthusiastically remarks: "I know of few verses in the whole range of human poetry in which the voice of nature utters the accents of grief with more simplicity and truth; it seems to me to be the most pathetic personal elegy in English poetry."

34 a kinges sonne. Henry Fitzroy, Duke of Richmond, the illegitimate son of Henry VIII by Elizabeth Blount, and the husband of Surrey's sister, Mary Howard.

13. 4 easie sighes, suche as folke drawe in loue. Borrowed from Chaucer, Troilus and Criseyde, III. 1361-1364:

Nought swiche sorful sykes as men make
For wo, or elles whan that folk ben syke,
But esy sykes, swiche as been to lyke,
That shewed his affeccioun with-inne.

The same idea is expressed in James I of Scotland's Kingis Quhair, stanza xcvi.

41 renuer of my woes. Probably borrowed from Wyatt's expression at 44. 7.

42 where is my noble fere. The Duke of Richmond died of consumption on July 22, 1536, aged seventeen. Hence doest in line 43 would be better in the past tense, as it is in the MS.

14. 7-8 And with remembrance of the greater greefe, &c. A similar sentiment, as Koeppl (Studien, pp. 85-86) notes, is found in Dante's Inferno, v. 121-123 (Divina Commedia, Milan, 1907, p. 49):

Nessun maggior dolore
Che ricordarsi del tempo felice
Nella miseria.

9 (No. 16) The louer comforteth himself, &c. In every edition (No. [16] in B-I, sigs. B₃^v-B₄ in BC, A₇^v-A₈ in D+). Padelford (p. 51) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

- 14. 19 Grekes] Greekes
- 22 bloode] blood
- 24 yeres] years: Padelford tacks this line to the end of the preceding stanza
- 36 Therfore] Therefore
- 15. 3 Ioyful] Joyful

The author of The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, pp. 86, 136, 144, liked the entire poem because "the Cesure fals iust in the middle" of the line, because the verses are "made of monosillables and bissillables enterlaced," and because the iambic movement is "passing sweete and harmonicall." The poem was registered as a ballad called "When raging love" in 1557-58, 1560-61, 1561-62, and what was apparently a "moralization" of it was registered in 1568-69 (Rollins, Analytical Index, nos. 2918-2921). To the tune of Raging love one of the ballads in the Handful, 1584 (pp. 50-51), was written. An imitation of Surrey's poem — composed by Nicholas Balthorp and registered for publication in 1557-58 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 1619) — begins, "When raging death with extreme paine"; and there is a parody — registered in 1561-62 — by W. F. (William Fullwood?) called "A new Ballad against Unthrifths" (Lilly's Ballads, pp. 153-156), which begins,

When raging louts, with feble braines,
Moste wilfully wyl spend awaye.

On the anagram (W-I-A-T-T) of Wyatt formed by the initial letters of the five stanzas of No. 16 see the notes to 230. 22, and compare the notes to No. 200.

14. 14-16 When that my teares, as floudes of rayne, &c. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in vita 13, lines 1-2 (Rime, 17, p. 12):

Piovommi amare lagrime dal viso con un vento angoscioso di sospiri.

15. 4 (No. 17) Complaint of the absence of her louer, &c. In every edition (No. [17] in B-I, sigs. B₄-B₄^v in BC, A₈-A₈^v in D+). Padelford (pp. 58-59) reprints the poem from A, misprinting find (15. 27) as finde, teares (15. 30) as tears, and doutfull (16. 5) as doubtfull. In Nugae Antiquae (1769, pp. 187-188; 1779, 1792, III, 244-245) a copy appears under the unauthorized heading, "By John Harington, 1543, for a Ladie moche in Love" (cf. pp. 90-92, above). A musical setting is given in MS. Additional 30513 (cf. Henry Davey, History of English Music, 1895, p. 151).

Padelford (p. 186) remarks: "This poem may have been written . . . for the Countess of Surrey, to voice her impatience at the separation from her husband, during his absence on military duty in France. . . . It is the one poem of Surrey's in the Duke of Devonshire Ms. and is in the hand-writing of Mary Shelton, the sweetheart of Sir Thomas Clere, Surrey's companion, who accompanied him to France. . . . Perhaps the poem was written for Mary Shelton herself, in recognition of her love for Clere, and was inserted in the Ms. after being sent her from France." Koeppel (Studien, pp. 82-83) shows that the poem is an adaptation of Serafino's fifth epistle (Opere, 1516, fols. 62^v-64, beginning, "Quella ingannata, afflitta, & miseranda Donna, non donna più, ma horrendo monstro"), which in turn was adapted from Phyllis's complaint in Ovid's Heroides, II.

14 In ship, freight with remembrance. Brian Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, H2^v, borrows lines 14-15, 18-19, as follows: "thus did hee seeme to bee conueyde: in shipe fraught with remembraunce of pleasure past, with scaldinge sighes for want of gale, and stedfast hope that was his sayle."

18-19 With scalding sighes, for lack of gale, &c. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in vita 137, lines 7-8 (Rime, 189, p. 189):

la vela rompe un vento humido, eterno
di sospir, di speranze et di desio.

15. 31-34 I stand . . . a mariner loue hath made me. Cf. Serafino, Epistles, v. 37-40 (Opere, 1516, fol. 63):

Ah quante uolte quando el ciel se imbruna
 À meza nocte uscio del freddo lecto
 À sentir le hore, à remirar la luna?
 Facta son marinar per questo effecto.

39 Alas, now drencheth my swete fo. Cf. Serafino, Epistles, v. 79-80 (Opere, 1516, fol. 63^v):

E se affondato è alcun dal tempo rio
 Chel sappia, dico, ohime, questo è summerso.

Swete fo is a conventional phrase among the sonneteers. Cf. 144. 34, 158. 8, 186. 20, and my notes in the Paradise, p. 242.

16. 10 (No. 18) Complaint of a dying louer, &c. In every edition (No. [18] in B-I, sigs. B4^v-C^v in BC, A8^v-B^v in D+). Padelford (pp. 62-64) reprints this poem from A, with the following errors:

- 16. 23 iust] just
- 24 without] misprinted withoue
- 17. 4 armes] arms
- 7 Wherwith] Wherewith
- 11 poore] pore
- 18 stretch] stretched
- 23 Wherto] Whereto
- 28 losse] loss
- 37 Wherwith] Wherewith
- 18. 8 restord] restored
- 13 treew] trew
- 15 Angels] angles

He remarks (p. 188) that the poem "is a fusion of one type of the early French pastourelle, in which a shepherd complains to another of his hard-hearted mistress, and of one type of the early French chanson à personnages, in which the poet chances upon a man who is lamenting an unrequited love. The opening verses, which give the setting, are reminiscent of the chanson, although winter has been substituted for the conventional May morning."

No. 18 was registered for publication in 1557-58 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 1249) as "A ballett, in wynters Juste Retorne." Thomas Howell wrote an imitation, "In vttringe his plaint, he declareth the vncertainty of fained frendship. To the tune of winters iust returne," which was included in his Newe Sonets, and pretie Pamphlets, ca. 1568 (Poems, ed. Grosart, p. 152). The first two lines are quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 204. Nott thinks that Spenser, in the Daphnaida, made "evident and frequent allusion" to the poem.

17. 12 A shepardes charge, &c. Repeated in Alexander Neville's Oedipus, iv. iii (Seneca His Tenne Tragedies, 1581, fol. 90), "Sometime a charge of sheepe I had, vnworthy though I weer."

17. 17 sore febled all with faint. Turbervile borrows this unusual phrase in his Epitaphes, etc., 1567, p. 157.

24 The sonne should runne his course awry, &c. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in vita 37, lines 7-9 (Rime, 57, p. 62):

et corcherassi il sol là oltre ond' esce
d'un medesimo fonte Eufrate et Tigre:
prima ch' i' trovi in ciò pace né triegua.

28 a greater losse, than Priam had of Troy. Nott's suggested emendation, to Priamus' son of Troy (that is, Troilus: cf. 18. 12), has points in its favor.

41 he yelded vp the ghost. Baptista Guarini, in Il Pastor Fido, III. iii (Fanshawe's translation, 1647, p. 96), makes Amarillis (or Amaryllis) remark that

"When Lovers talk of dying, it doth show
"An amorous custome rather of the tongue,
"Then a resolve of minde (continuing long)
"To do't indeed.

The present poem is noteworthy for having a lover who actually dies. Hundreds of Tudor lovers, to be sure, threatened to die, but it is to be feared that usually they were like "that old fainting man in the [Aesopic] Fable, who" (to use the words of Mercurius Elencticus, October 4-11, 1648, p. 377) "in the heat of the day threw down his burthen, and called for death. But when death came to know his will of him, said, it was for nothing, but to help him up with his burthen again."

18. 14 I couered it with bleew. Blue was the color of true lovers. At the end of each of the three stanzas of his balade "Against Women Unconstant" Chaucer admonishes the ladies, "In stede of blew, thus may ye were al grene." Lydgate (Troy Book, I. 2089-2090) says, "They can schewe on [thing], and another mene, Whos blewe is lightly died in-to grene." Just so Mathew Grove (Poems, 1587, ed. Grosart, pp. 61, 101) speaks of "the faithful blewe," and adds, "So doth the blewe aye represent, a louing heart alway."

17 (No. 19) Complaint of the absence, &c. In every edition (No. [19] in B-I, sigs. C^v-C² in BC, B^v-B² in D+). Padelford (pp. 72-73) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), with the following variants:

18. 20 ye] you: pleasures] pleasure
24, 26 ye] you
28 loue and lord] lord and love
30 That I was wontt for to embrace, contentid myndes
31 winde] wyndes
32 Where] Theare: well him] hym well: sone . . . me] safelye me hym
36 do] they

18. 37 when] then: I lye] and stand: where] yf
 38 do] they
 39 That my sweete lorde in daunger greate, alas! doth often lye
 19. 2 his faire] T., his 4 think] thinckes: welcome my lord] Now well come home
 6 atwixt] betwixt
 10 dischargen] dischardgeth: huge] great
 14 Some hydden wheare, to steale the gryfe of my unquyet mynd 16 I find] there is: good] some 17 think, by] feele, the 19 we] that we two 20 while] tyme: the] that 21 coniure] conuirt
 22 ye] you
 23 this] suche

The MS. copy has the signature "Preston". Obviously, however, the poem was written for the Countess of Surrey by her husband during his military service in France, September, 1545–March, 1546.

19. 2 with his faire little sonne. Surrey's eldest son, Thomas Howard, born in March, 1536. Observe the MS. reading in the note above.

9–10 the heauy cares . . . Breake forth. Notice the similar phraseology at 11. 6–7; and cf. Chaucer, Troilus and Criseyde, iv. 236–237,

And in his brest the heped wo bigan
 Out-breste.

14 Sum hidden place, Esc. Arber in his edition (p. 19 n.) observes, "Some lines apparently left out here"; but his suggestion is supported by neither the context nor the manuscript copy.

17 Saue. The meaning would be clearer, as Nott suggests, if Saue were to change places with but in line 16.

25 (No. 20) A praise of his loue, Esc. In every edition (No. [20] in B–I, sigs. C2–C2^v in BC, B2–B2^v in D+). Padelford (p. 56) reprints the poem from A, misprinting coulde (19. 40) as could, lawe (20. 8) as loue. No. 20 is apparently an imitation of Heywood's No. 199.

28–33 Geue place ye louers, Esc. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 203, these lines are quoted as an illustration of the idea that, "if we fall a praying, specially of our mistresses vertue, bewtie, or other good parts, we be allowed now and then to ouer-reach a little way of comparison as he that said thus in prayse of his Lady."

41–20. 2–5 The whole effect of natures plaint, Esc. The conceit expressed in these lines is practically duplicated at 28. 34, 126. 23, 155. 38. Melbancke probably had them in mind when he wrote in Philotimus, 1583, sig. H^v, "Dame Nature howles and weepes bycause the moulde that cast her shape is lost and gone, nor euer can the like be framed againe." Cf. also A light Bondell of liuely discourses called Churchyardes Charge, 1580 (Collier's reprint, p. 40), "And maie not Nature breake eche mould that once her hand hath made?"

20. 18 (No. 21) To the Ladie that scorned her louer. In every edition (No. [21] in B-I, sigs. C2^v-C3 in BC, B2^v-B3 in D+). Padelford (pp. 50-51) reprints the poem from A, but changes the in (20. 38) to the in the of B+. In it Surrey speaks of himself as "a man of warre," a "captain full of might," whence it has been conjectured that he wrote the lines in August, 1542, just before his first military service in Scotland. Perhaps it alludes to the same experience as does No. 264. The chess-figure, on which the poem is based, may owe something to Chaucer's Book of the Duchess, lines 617-686. Later Nicholas Breton contributed a poem called "The Chesse Play" to The Phoenix Nest, 1593, pp. 28-30. Compare also "A prety and pleasant Poeme of a whole Game played at Chesse," translated from Vida by G. B. in his Ludus Scacchiæ: Chesse-play (1597 [reprinted 1810], sigs. B-E3^v).

38 the in. Read then in or (with B+) in the.

21. 15 (No. 22) A warning to the louer, &c. In every edition (No. [22] in B-I, sigs. C3 in BC, B3 in D-GI, B3-B3^v in H). Padelford (p. 64) reprints the poem from A, misprinting dearely (line 18) as dearly, see (line 28) as se, freedom (line 31) as freedom.

22. 2 (No. 23) The forsaken louer, &c. In every edition (No. [23] in B-I, sigs. C3^v-C4 in BC, B3^v-B4 in D-H, B3-B3^v in I). Padelford (p. 54) reprints the poem from A.

4-11 O Lothsome place where I . . . lenger should. I am indebted to Professor Kittredge for the following paraphrase: "O place [now] loathsome [to me] where formerly I have seen and heard my dear at times when her eye hath made her thought appear in my breast [hath made me feel how she loved me], — her eye [I say] by shining [upon me] with such favor as fortune was unwilling should last any longer between us!"

20-23 But happy . . . his relieve. "But happy is the man who has escaped the suffering which unrequited love can easily inflict upon (well teche) him."

32-35 And last it may not long, &c. "The truest thing about love and certainly its greatest injustice is that whoever is prisoner to it may not live long."

23. 5 (No. 24) The louer describes his restlesse state. In every edition (No. [24] in B-I, sigs. C4 in BC, B4 in D-H, B3^v-B4 in I). Padelford (p. 52) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

23. 9 nier] ner
 12 consume] consumes
 14 MS. adds:

Like as the flee that see the flame
 And thinkes to plaie her in the fier,
 That fownd her woe, and sowght her game,
 Whose grief did growe by her desire.

23. 15 First . . . those] When first I saw theise 16 my] this 17 her] these 18 MS. adds:

Wherein is hid the crewell bytt
 Whose sharpe repulse none can resist,
 And eake the spoore that straynith eche wytt
 To roon the race against his list.

- 20 And] Om.: did] dyd me
 27 mine own] my none
 28 on] he 29 in] for: put] cast
 30 mine] his: MS. adds:

And as the spyder drawes her lyne,
 With labour lost I frame my sewt;
 The fault is hers, the losse ys myne.
 Of yll sown seed such ys the frewte.

In MS. Harleian 78, fol. 27^v, there is a poem of seven stanzas, several of which are practically identical with Surrey's. That poem is reprinted by Miss Foxwell (I, 361-362), Nott (Surrey, pp. 251-252), and Padelford (p. 184). Miss Foxwell (II, 175-176) thinks it is undoubtedly Wyatt's work, believing that Surrey simply modernized it into No. 24, adding some stanzas derived from an unknown Italian source. Padelford, on the contrary, regards it as "probably a clumsy reworking of Surrey's poem, or an attempt to reconstruct it from memory," but "apparently a mosaic of Petrarchian lines," several of which he points out. Nott believes that in a "spirit of friendly competition" Surrey and Wyatt each translated some piece from the Italian, "or, what seems more likely," each wove various passages from Petrarch into the form of a new ode. Miss Foxwell's text of Wyatt's poem runs thus:

T. WYAT. OF LOVE

Lyke as the wynde with raging blaste
 Dothe cawse eche tree to bowe and bende,
 Even so do I spende my tyme in wast
 My lyff consumyng into an ende.

 For as the flame by force doeth quenche the fyre,
 And runninge streames consume the rayne,
 Even so do I myself desyer,
 To augment my greffe and deadly payne.

 Where as I fynde that whot is whot,
 And colde is colde, by course of kynde,
 So shall I knet an endles knot.
 Such fruite in love alas I fynde.

When I foresaw those christall streames
 Whose bewtie dothe cause my mortall wounde,
 I lyttyll thought within those beames
 So swete a venim for to have founde.

I fele and see my owne decaye,
 As one that beareth the flame in his brest, Forgetfull thought to put away,
 The thyng that breadeth my unrest,

Lyke as the flye dothe seke the flame,
 And afterwarde playeth in the fyer,
 Who fyndeth her woo, and seketh her game,
 Whose greffe dothe growe of her owne desyer.

Lyke as the spider dothe drawe her lyne,
 As labor lost so is my sute
 The gayne is hers the losse is myne,
 Of evell sowne seade suche is the frute.

No. 24 is unblushingly imitated in "A proper Sonet, of an vnkinde Damsell," a poem in the Handful, 1584, pp. 68-69.

23. 11-14 As flame doth quenche, Ec. A remark that, no doubt purposely, affirms the exact opposite of its meaning: "As the raging fire quenches the flame and as rain dries up the running streams, just so does the sight of my mistress appease my grief and deadly pain" — that is, it increases my sufferings. The idea was perhaps suggested by the opening lines of Petrarch's sonnetto in vita 33 (Rime, 48, p. 50), "Se mai foco per foco non si spense," etc.

23-26 As cruell waues full oft be found, Ec. Probably written in imitation of Wyatt's lines at 62. 28-29.

31 (No. 25) The louer excuseth himself, Ec. In every edition (No. [25] in B-I, sigs. C4-D in BC, B4-B5 in D-H, B4-B4^v in I). Padelford (pp. 55-56) reprints the poem from A, misprinting by (23. 34) as to, think (24. 31) as thinke, felicite (24. 33) as felicitee.

24. 4-5 to change A falkon for a kite. "Doe not exchaunge a fawcon for a kite," echoes Turbervile, Epitaphes, etc., 1567, p. 53. Cf. the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 58, "To seeme a Hauke, and bee a kyte."

27 the ganders fo. An old hand in I (Bodleian) says, "the sowe or hogge or rather fox."

31 For think it may not be. Think is an imperative, as in line 22: "For don't think it possible that I, who am desirous to win and loth to forego your love, should," etc.

42-43 Yet as sone shall the fire, Ec. Cf. Petrarch, sestina in vita 2, lines 9-10 (Rime, 30, p. 32):

quando avrò queto il core, asciutti gli occhi, vedrem ghiacciare il foco, arder la neve.

25. 4 (No. 26) A carelesse man, Ec. In every edition (No. [26] in B-I, sigs. D in BC, B₅ in D-G, B₅-B₅^v in H, B₄^v-B₅ in I). Padelford (pp. 64-65) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

25. 20 sometime] sometime
 21 seemd] seemed
 22 go] grow
 33 Lorde] Lord

25. 38 hory heares are powdred, &c. Probably borrowed from Wyatt (ed. Foxwell, I, 10), "gray heres ben powdered in your sable."

26. 2 (No. 27) The meanes to attain happy life. In every edition (No. [31] in B-I, sigs. D₃^v-D₄ in BC, B₇^v-B₈ in D-G, B₈ in H, B₇^v in I). Padelford (p. 78) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

26. 4 Martiall] Marshall: that do] for to 8 egall] equall: no²] nor 13 Trew] Om.: simplenesse] simplicitye
 15 Where wyne may beare no soveranty
 16 faithful wife] chast wife, wyse
 19 Ne . . . ne] Neyther wisshe death, nor

A copy signed "Surre" and beginning "My frende" instead of "Martial" is in MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fol. 80; and, ending with the word "Τελος," it is written in an Elizabethan hand on the last leaf (Gg₄^v) of the Capell copy of C. Still another copy, beginning "Warner," is printed ("from a manuscript") in The Gentleman's Magazine, xcvi. ii (1827), 392, as is also a poem said to be by Sir John Harington in which, replying to some local charge that the poets in borrowing from the ancients "steall some good conceits from Martiall," he says that the critics must "Match vs at least with honorable theevs," for Surrey, Wyatt, and Heywood did exactly the same thing.

No. 27 was apparently one of the first compositions of Surrey's to be published (but see the notes to No. 31): W. F. Trench ("William Baldwin," The Modern Language Quarterly, I [1899], 261) points out that it was printed without Surrey's name at the end of book III in Baldwin's A treatise of Morrall phylosophye (1547/8), and with Surrey's name in Wayland's edition of the Treatise in 1555 (which I have not seen). Evidently Baldwin, in one way or another, had access to a manuscript copy, not improbably to one given him by the poet.

Surrey's poem was borrowed by Timothy Kendall, Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, C₂^v (Spenser Society ed., p. 52), who prints it with a few slight variants:

26. 2 The meanes, &c.] To hymselfe
 13 ioyned] ioynd
 18 Content thy self with thine estate 19 ne] nor

Kendall borrowed it because it is an adequate translation from Martial, x. 47:

Vitam quae faciant beatiorem, iucundissime Martialis, haec sunt:
res non parva labore sed relictæ;
non ingratus ager, focus perennis;
lis nunquam, toga rara, mens quieta;
vires ingenuæ, salubre corpus;
prudens simplicitas, pares amici;
convictus facilis, sine arte mensa;
nox non ebria sed soluta curis;
non tristis torus et tamen pudicus;
somnia qui faciat breves tenebras:
quod sis esse velis nihilque malis;
summum nec metuas diem nec optes.

In the Halliwell-Phillipps collection at the Chetham library, Manchester, there is a broadside (formerly in the Heber ballad-collection), printed by John Awdeley in 1571, with Martial's verses in Latin accompanied by a translation into English and another into Welsh, the latter made by the Welsh poet Simwnt Vychan, or Vachan (1530?-1606). I am grateful to Professor F. N. Robinson for calling my attention to the reprint and the discussion of this broadside, by Evan J. Jones, in The Bulletin of the Board of Celtic Studies, III (1927), 286-297. The English version of 1571 runs thus:

O Martial, thou most mery mate,
These things do make mans life most blest,
Goods not gotten by labour great,
But left by friendes, now gone to rest,
A fruitfull felde, a fyre styll drest,
For sturdy strife no time to finde,
A seldome gowne, a quiet minde.

Strength naturall, a body sound,
Wyse simplenes, friendes like to thee,
Prouisions easy to be found,
A table where no Cookeries bée,
No dronken night, but from cares frée,
No dolefull bed, yet of chast sorte,
Sleepe that may make the darknes short.

That thing that thou thy selfe art made,
And by iust lot pointed to bée,
Do thou thy selfe firmly perswade,
Still to remayne in eche degree,
And let nought be more wisht of thée,
The day of death feare not one whit,
Nor yet do thou wish after it.

For purposes of comparison I reprint also the rendering made by Sir

Richard Fanshawe in Il Pastor Fido . . . With an Addition of divers other Poems, 1648, p. 297:

The things that makes a life to please (Sweetest Martiall) they are these:
 Estate inherited, not got:
 A thankfull Field, Hearth alwayes hot:
 City seldome, Law-suits never:
 Equall Friends agreeing ever:
 Health of Body, Peace of Minde:
 Sleepes that till the Morning binde:
 Wise Simplicities, Plaine Fare:
 Not drunken Nights, yet loos'd from Care:
 A Sober, not a sullen Spouse:
Cleane strength, not such as his that Plowes:
 Wish onely what thou art, to bee;
 Death neither wish, nor feare to see.

Thomas Randolph's version (Poems and Amyntas, 1638, ed. J. J. Parry, 1917, p. 139) should also be cited. Berdan (Early Tudor Poetry, pp. 524-526) reprints translations made by Clément Marot before 1544 (Œuvres, ed. Pierre Jannet, 2d ed., 1873, III, 89-90), by R. Fletcher in 1656 (Ex otio Negotium, or Martiall his Epigrams, p. 93), and by an anonymous writer in 1695 (Epigrams of Martial, Englished [by Henry Killigrew, originally issued in 1689], p. 236); he also mentions a translation by Charles Cotton in 1689 (Poems on Several Occasions, p. 561). H. H. Hudson ("Surrey and Martial," Modern Language Notes, xxxviii [1923], 481-483) refers to other versions given in John Manningham's Diary (ed. Bruce, Camden Society, 1868) under the date of June 9, 1602 (attributed to "Th. Sm."); in The Dove and the Serpent (by Daniel Tuville?), 1614, p. 90; and (by Ben Jonson?) in J. P. Collier's Bibliographical and Critical Account of the Rarest Books, I, 223. For further details of this sort see the Bohn edition of Martial's epigrams (1897), p. 471, and Censura Literaria, IV (1807), 195-196, X (1809), 81-82.

26. 11 The houshold of continuance. "An household, or family that is not of recent establishment, and promises to be of duration" (Nott).

20 (No. 28) Praise of meane and constant estate. In every edition (No. [32] in B-I, sigs. D4 in BC, B8 in D-G, B8-B8^v in H, B7^v-B8 in I). Padelford (pp. 78-79) reprints the poem from A, misprinting withdraweth (line 35) as withdrawth.

No. 28 is a translation of Horace's Carmina, II. 10. Since the same ode is likewise translated in Nos. 194 and 295, I reprint it below for the convenience of students:

Rectius vives, Licini, neque altum semper urgendo neque, dum procellas cautus horrescis, nimium premendo litus iniquom.

Auream quisquis mediocritatem diligit, tutus caret obsoleti sordibus tecti, caret invidenda sobrius aula.

Saepius ventis agitur ingens pinus et celsae graviore casu decidunt turres feriuntque summos fulgura montis.

Sperat infestis, metuit secundis alteram sortem bene praeparatum pectus. Informis hiemes reducit Iuppiter; idem

Summovet. Non, si male nunc, et olim sic erit: quondam cithara tacentem suscitat Musam neque semper arcum tendit Apollo.

Rebus angustis animosus atque fortis appare: sapienter idem contrahes vento nimium secundo turgida vela.

26. 22 Thomas. The annotator in I (Bodleian) explains this as "Sir Tho. Wiatt" (this note is not in *D), and he has been followed by most of the editors of Surrey. More probably, however, as Padelford suggests, Thomas may refer to Surrey's son or his brother.

31 falne turrets stepe. "Lofty turrets fall." Falne, or fallen, is an old form of the third person plural indicative; hence Nott's emendation to fall is unwarranted.

27. 4 (No. 29) Praise of certain psalmes, &c. In every edition (No. [33] in B-I, sigs. D₄^v in BC, B₈^v in D-H, B₈ in I). Padelford (p. 77) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

27. 8 Asie rong] Asia range
9 dan] yf
10 song] sange
19 imprinted] yprinted
20 Ought] Mowght

No. 29 was apparently written as a commendatory poem for Wyatt's Certayne Psalmes chosen out of the Psalter of David commonlye called thee. vii. penytentiall Psalmes (printed in 1549), in the manuscript of which it is still to be seen.

9 In the rich ark dan Homers rimes he placed. This story is told in Plutarch's life of Alexander and is referred to in his Morals ("The First Oration concerning the Fortune or Virtue of Alexander the Great," § 4). Nott (Surrey, p. 335) notes that it is mentioned in the opening lines of the dedication to the 1532 edition of John Gower's Confessio Amantis. Cf. also Thomas Lodge's Reply to Gosson, 1580? (Hunterian Club ed., p. 2), "what made Alexander

I pray you esteeme of him [Homer] so much? why allotted he for his works so curious a closset?"; George Whetstone, The Honorable Reputation of a Souldier, 1585, E4^v, "Alexander the great, was so addicted to Homers Iliades, as he appointed the most magnificēt Iewell boxe of Darius to keepe the same"; Nathaniel Baxter, Sir Philip Sydneys Ourania, 1606, A2^v, "Great Macedon when he laid by his Launce, Sported himselfe with Homers golden verse"; Christopher Brooke, verses on Thomas Coryate in The Odcombian Banquet, 1611, sig. H,

If he liu'd now that in Darius casket
Plac'd the poore Iliads, hee had bought a basket
Of richer stuffe t' intombe thy volume large.

See also the references in Shakespeare's 1 Henry VI, 1. vi. 24-25, and John Webster's A Monumental Column, 1613, line 18.

27. 11 What holy graue, &c. This line and its meter are discussed at length in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, pp. 138-139.

13 the liuely faith, and pure. Nott cites a similar phrase, "the upright heart and pure," in Paradise Lost, 1. 18.

21 (No. 30) Of the death of . . . sir .T. w. In every edition (No. [34] in B-I, sigs. D4^v in BC, B8^v in D-G, B8^v-C in H, B8-B8^v in I). Padelford (p. 80) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the variants of that livelye hedd (line 24) for thy liuelyhed, and sowne (line 25) for swolne.

24 Some, that in presence, &c. Referring to Wyatt's enemies Edmund Bonner and Simon Heynes, who accused him of various crimes and thus caused his imprisonment in 1540. Lines 24 and 26 are quoted, somewhat in- exactly, in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 139, to illustrate the use of dactyls and iambics.

26 Ceasars teares vpon Pompeius hed. Suggested by a sonnet of Petrarch's that is the source of No. 45. See 36. 5 n.

34 And kisse the ground, whereas, &c. Cf. Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde, v. 1791, "And kis the steppes, wher-as thou seest pace Virgile," etc.

28. 2 (No. 31) Of the same. In every edition (No. [35] in B-I, sigs. D4^v-E in BC, B8^v-C in D-GI, C-C^v in H). Padelford (pp. 81-82) reprints the poem from A, misprinting disdayn (line 4) as disdain, loft (line 29) as lost, Liued (line 33) as Lieud, heauens (line 40) as heavens.

Surrey had a passionate admiration and respect for Wyatt, as is attested also by Nos. 29, 30, 263. The present elegy was very likely Surrey's first appearance in print. It originally formed a part of an eight-page booklet (a unique copy of which is in the Huntington library) called "¶ An excellent Epi =/ taffe of syr Thomas Wyat, With two/ other compendious dytties, wherein are/ touchyd, and set furth the state/ of mannes lyfe./" (A woodcut portrait follows this title.) The colophon runs, "¶ Imprinted at London by Iohn Her =/ forde for Roberte Toye." Although the pamphlet has no date, it was undoubtedly printed shortly after Wyatt's death in October, 1542. Because of its value as a text printed in Surrey's own lifetime, I give this "Epitaffe" exactly as it stands in the original:

- Wyat resteth here, that quicke coulde neuer rest.
 Whose heuenly gyftes, encreased by dysdayne
 And vertue sanke, the deper in his brest
 Suche profyte he, of enuy could optayne
- ¶ A Head, where wysdom mysteries dyd frame
 Whose hammers beat styll in that lyuely brayne
 As on a styth, where some worke of Fame
 Was dayly wrought, to turn to Brytayns game
- ¶ A Vysage sterne and mylde, where both dyd groo
 Vyce to contempne, in vertues to reioyce
 Amyd great stormes, whome grace assured soo
 To lyue vprighte and smyle at fortunes choyse.
- ¶ A Hand that taught, what might be saide in rime
 That refte Chaucer, the glorie of his wytte
 A marke, the whiche (vnperfited for tyme)
 Some may approche but neuer none shall hyt.
- ¶ A Tonge, that serued in foraine realmes his king
 Whose curtoise talke, to vertu dyd enflame.
 Eche noble harte a worthy guyde to brynge
 Our Englysshe youth, by trauayle vnto fame.
- ¶ An Eye, whose iudgement, no affect coulde blind
 Frenedes to allure, and foes to reconcyle Whose pearcyng looke, dyd represent a mynde.
 with vertue fraught, reposed, voyde of gyle.
- ¶ A Harte, where drede, yet neuer so imprest
 To hide the thought y^t might the trouth auaunce
 In neyther fortune, lyfte nor so repress
 To swell in welth, nor yelde vnto mischaunce
- ¶ A valiaunt Corps, where force and beautye met Happy, alas, to happy but for foos.
 Lyued, and ran the race that nature set
 Of manhodes shape, where she the mold did loos
- ¶ But to the heauens, that symple soule is fled.
 Which lefte with such, as couet Christe to knowe
 Witnes of faith that neuer shalbe deade
 Sent for our welth, but not receiued so Thus for our gylt, this iewell haue we lost
 The earth his bones, the heuen possesse his goost

AMEN.

Peter Betham probably had the foregoing copy of No. 31 in mind when he wrote, in the dedication to The preceptes of Warre, 1544 (Censura Literaria, vii [1808], 70): "Wyate was a worthye floure of our tounge, as appereth by the mournefulle ballet made of hys death in Englysshe, whyche is mooste wittye, fyne, and eloquent."

28. 3 W. resteth. It is curious that only D and *D have the reading (shown to be correct by that of the 1542 text given above) VVyat resteth, which E+ change to What resteth.

4 giftes encreased by disdayn. That is, increased by his own disdain of them: he did not boast of his gifts.

8 Whose hammers bet styll in that liuely brayn. Perhaps a reference to a line in one of Wyatt's poems (ed. Foxwell, I, 306) that is not in A+:

Suche hammers worke within my hed
That sounde nought els into my eris.

But similar expressions were used by Richard Edwards about 1560 (Life and Poems, ed. Leicester Bradner, 1927, p. 103), "When famies [evidently a misprint for fancies] hammer bettes there fonde and idle braynes"; by George Gascoigne in 1566 (Supposes, v. iv, Complete Poems, ed. Hazlitt, I, 247), "he hath so many hammers in his head, that his braynes are ready to burst"; and by Henry Robarts in 1600 (Haigh for Devonshire, H3), "Iames that had many hammers beating in his braines, was more set a worke by this vnexpected chance." Cf. also Grosart's Breton, I, n, 9.

32-33 Happy, alas, to happy, Ec. Nott shows that Surrey uses these phrases again in his translation of the Aeneid, iv. 876.

34 where she the molde did lose. The same conceit reappears in No. 20 (19. 41-20. 2-5).

36-37 Which left . . . Witnesse of faith, Ec. Evidently alluding to Wyatt's translation of the Seven Penitential Psalms (see the notes to No. 29).

40 The earth his bones, the heauens possesse his gost. A reminiscence of a familiar passage in Ecclesiastes, xii. 7. A similar idea was expressed in the inscription in memory of Sir Philip Sidney that hung in old St. Paul's Cathedral (see H. H. Milman, Annals of S. Paul's Cathedral, 1869, p. 379; The Dr. Farmer Chetham MS., ed. Grosart, II, 180; Thomas Zouch, Memoirs of . . . Sir Philip Sidney, 1808, p. 288), the last stanza of which ran:

His bodie hath England, for she it bred;
Netherlands his blood, in her defence shed;
The Heavens have his soule, the Arts have his fame,
All Souldiers the grief, the World his good name.

Hannah (The Courtly Poets, 1870, p. 215) cites "one of the epitaphs on Raleigh" with the lines,

Heaven hath his soul; the world his fame;
The grave his corpse; Stukeley his shame.

A similar passage occurs in an "Epitaph" on Sidney by Raleigh: see Hannah, p. 7, and The Phoenix Nest, 1593, p. 10.

29. 2 (No. 32) Of Sardanapalus dishonorable life, &c. In every edition (No. [37] in B-I, sigs. E^v in BC, C^v in D-G, C^v-C₂ in H, C in I). Padelford (pp. 77-78) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

- 29. 5 Thassirian] Th' Assyrians
- 7 on] a
- 8 Did yeld, vanquisht] Vaynquyshed, dyd yelde
- 9 dint] dent
- 14 Comes after line 18 in Padelford but not in the MS.
- 15 impacient] vnpacyent
- 17 appalled] appawld
- 18 Murthered] Murdred

"Sardanapalus," says Richard Robinson in The rewarde of Wickednesse, 1574, K₂^v, "the last Assirian King liued too vile a life to bee rehearsed." Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, Aa₄, remarks that "Sardanapalus king of Assiria, one of the richest Monarchies in the world, amid his pompous eleuated royalties, was miserably slaine by one Arbactus." The story is told at length, among many other places, in Sir Richard Barckley's A Discourse of the Felicitie of Man, 1598, pp. 11-13, which represents Sardanapalus as causing himself with his wives and treasures to be burned, whereupon the throne was seized by his lieutenant Arbaces.

19 (No. 33) How no age is content, &c. In every edition (No. [38] in B-I, sigs. E^v-E₂ in BC, C^v-C₂ in D-G, C₂ in H, C^v in I). Padelford (p. 79) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), with the following variants:

- 29. 27 sighed] sight: doth] did
- 30. 4 wytherd] witheryd
- 5 dented chewes] dynted jawes
- 14 sighed] sight

There is also a copy of the first twelve lines of No. 33 in MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fol. 83. The general idea of the poem was perhaps suggested by Horace's first satire, "Qui fit Maecenas, ut nemo, quam sibi sortem," etc.

A shortened and otherwise considerably changed version of No. 33 appears in Brittons Bowre of Delights, 1591, G₂-G₂^v (1597, F₂^v), at the instance, doubtless, not of Breton but of the publisher Richard Jones. It runs thus:

A pleasant sweet song.

L Aid in my restlesse bed,
In dreame of my desire:
I sawe within my troubled head,
A heape of thoughts appeare.

And each of them so strange,
 In sight before mine eyes:
 That now I sigh and then I smile,
 As cause thereby doth rise.

I see how that the little boy,
 In thought how oft that he:
 Doth wish of God to scape the rod,
 a tall yong man to be,

I saw the yong man traueelling,
 From sport to paines opprest:
 How he would be a rich olde man,
 To liue and lie at rest.

The olde man too, who seeth,
 His age to drawe on sore:
 Would be a little boy againe,
 To liue so long the more.

Whereat I sigh and smile,
 How Nature craues her fee:
 From boy to man, from man to boy,
 Would chop and change degree.

29. 21-23 if they had skill to vnderstand it. From Virgil's Georgics, II. 458-459, "O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint, agricolas!"

24 Layd in my quiet bed. Humfrey Gifford's "A Dreame" (in A Posie of Gilloflowers, 1580, Poems, ed. Grosart, Miscellanies of the Fuller Worthies' Library, I, 349-352) begins by imitating this line: "Layd in my quiet bed to rest."

27 as cause of thought doth ryse. The past tense did, as in B+ and the MS., is preferable.

28-35 I saw the lytle boy in thought, &c. This passage, which was no doubt suggested by Horace, is practically duplicated by a poem in the Paradise, p. 62.

30 his bones with paines opprest. That is, tired with manual labor, not with infirmity.

30. 12 Hang vp therefore the bit, &c. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, E4^v, borrows this line, combining it with 157. 9: "to see youth hang vp $\frac{e}{y}$ bitt of wanton tyme, not like $\frac{y}{y}$ foolish larke, deceiued with swetnes of $\frac{e}{y}$ call."

18 (No. 34) Bonum est mihi, &c. In every edition (No. [39] in B-I, sigs. E2-E2^v in BC, C2-C2^v in D-H, C^v-C2 in I). Padelford (p. 76) reprints the poem from A, misprinting growne (line 24) as grown, pardie (line 29) as perdie, nyght (line 32) as nigh. The title in A ("It is good for me that thou hast afflicted me") is almost a literal translation of Psalms cxix. 71, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted." In the Vulgate (where the reference is Psalms cxviii. 71) the corresponding verse runs, "Bonum mihi quia humiliasti me."

No. 34 is written on the order of a sonnet: in its seventeen lines there are five rhymes ending with a couplet. Nott (Surrey, pp. 359-361) believes that a line rhyming with 25 is missing after 26, and hence he supplies "Who lives in privacy, is only blest." Even then the syntax and meaning of the whole passage remain obscure. Nott likewise points out that Surrey's son, Henry Howard, Earl of Northampton, asserted this to be the last poem Surrey wrote; but he is inclined to refer its composition to an earlier period of imprisonment than that of December, 1546-January, 1547, which immediately preceded the poet's execution. There is, however, no urgent reason for disputing Northampton's statement.

30. 37 (No. 35) Exhortacion to learne by others trouble. In every edition (No. [40] in B-I, sigs. E2^v in BC, C2^v in D-H, C2 in I). Padelford (p. 77) reprints the poem from A, misprinting plages (31. 5) as plagues.

31. 2 My Ratclif. Nicolas (Poetical Works of Surrey and Wyatt, I [1831], 68 n.) explains, "Perhaps Sir Humphrey Ratcliffe, one of the gentlemen pensioners." Padelford (p. 193) says, "addressed presumably to Thomas Radcliffe, third Earl of Sussex (b. 1526 [?]), who took part with Surrey in the military operations against France in 1544."

3 Receue thy scourge by others chastisement. Nott compares with Tibullus, III. vi. 43-44, vos ego nunc moneo: felix, quicumque dolore alterius disces posse cavere tuos.

Compare also the proverb, "Fœlix quem faciunt aliena pericula cautum," which is discussed in my notes to the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 193.

6 Salomon sayd, the wronged shall recure. Nott appears to quote, though with curious deviations, Ecclesiasticus xxvii. 21 (not, as he says, xxvii. 25), "As for a wound, it may be bound up; and after reviling there may be reconciliation: but he that bewrayeth secrets is without hope." The author of Ecclesiasticus was not Solomon but an imitator of Solomon, Jesus, the son of Sirach.

7 Wiat said. See 70. 15 and 80. 19.

8 (No. 36) The fansie of a weried louer. In every edition (No. [41] in B-I, sigs. E2^v in BC, C2^v in D-G, C2^v-C3 in H, C2 in I). Padelford (p. 48) reprints the poem from A, misprinting Seemed (line 12) for Semed. The reference in line 21 to "base Bullayn" establishes the date of composition of this sonnet as between September, 1545, and March, 1546 — the period during which Surrey, as lieutenant-general on the Continent, commanded Boulogne. Bapst (Deux gentilshommes-poètes, pp. 332-333) considers the sonnet Surrey's lament for his enforced separation from his wife. Nott, as might be expected, tries to connect it with the Fair Geraldine.

19 my guyde is probably Reason.

22-23 as restlesse to remayn, &c. That is, rather than remain any longer he will willingly bear the pain that (in line 15) he sought to escape.

32. 2 (No. 37) The louer for shamefastnesse, &c. In every edition (No. [42] in B-I, sigs. E3 in BC, C3 in D-H, C2^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 14) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

32. 5 I] doeth
 6 my] myn: doth] doeth
 8 there] therein: displaying] spreding
 9 learns] lerneth: to ²] Om.
 12 takes] taketh
 13 loue to] all unto

The poem is another translation of the Petrarchan sonnet on which No. 6 is based.

5 The longe loue, that in my thought I harber. The movement of this line is rough, though Tottel's editor tried hard to smooth it. In E+ the attempt was continued by changing the line to read The one long loue, &c. That change made long unmistakably a monosyllable and accented harber on the first syllable, but it left the eighth line unaffected.

19 (No. 38) The louer waxeth wiser, &c. In every edition (No. [43] in B-I, sigs. E3 in BC, C3 in D-G, C3-C3^v in H, C2^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 16) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

32. 22 Yet was I neuer] Was I never yet: agreued] greved
 23 doth] doeth
 27 haue fixed] yfixed
 28 my sprite] the sperit
 29 boones] bonys
 31 Content . . . withouten] May content you, withoute
 33 you] ye
 34 wrath] disdain: you ^{1, 2}] ye 35 haue] hath

The source of No. 38 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 53 (Rime, 82, p. 91):

Io non fu' d' amar voi lassato unquanco,
 Madonna, né sarò mentre ch' io viva;
 ma d' odiar me medesimo giunto a riva et del continuo lagrimar so stanco;
 et voglio anzi un sepolcro bello et biancho, che 'l vostro nome a mio danno si scriva in alcun marmo, ove di spirto priva
 sia la mia carne, che po star seco ancho.
 Però, s' un cor pien d' amorosa fede può contentarve, senza farne stracio, piacciavi omai di questo aver mercede.
 Se 'n altro modo cerca d' esser scacio vostro sdegno, erra; et non fia quel che crede;
 di che Amor et me stesso assai ringracio.

33. 2 (No. 39) The abused louer, &c. In every edition (No. [44] in B-I, sigs. E₃^v in BC, C₃^v in D-H, C₂^v-C₃ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 21) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

33. 5 There was never file: half so well filed 6 any] every
 8 other] othrs: that] Om.
 9 loe] Om.
 10 pardoned] pardond
 11 of my] Om.
 12 led me] did me lede: me misguided] guyded
 13 of] of full
 17 playnd] plained
 18 is] Om.

19 (No. 40) The louer describeth, &c. In every edition (No. [45] in B-I, sigs. E₃^v in BC, C₃^v in D-H, C₃ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 32) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

33. 23 there] ne
 24 perst my] prest myn
 27 Sunne] The sonne
 30 stricken] ystricken
 31 Blind] Blynded: and ¹] Om
 32 nor] ne
 33 fall] falt
 34 streight] Om.
 35 noyse] nay

The poem is very freely adapted from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 200 (Rime, 258, pp. 245-246):

Vive faville uscian de' duo bei lumi ver me sí dolcemente folgorando, et parte d'un cor saggio sospirando
 d' alta eloquentia sí soavi fiumi, che pur il rimembrar par mi consumi qualor a quel dí torno, ripensando come venieno i miei spirti mancando al variar de' suoi duri costumi.
 L' alma nudrita sempre in doglia e 'n pene (quanto è 'l poder d' una prescritta usanza!)
 contra 'l doppio piacer sí 'nferma fue, ch' al gusto sol del disusato bene tremando or di paura or di speranza, d' abandonarme fu spesso entra due.

No. 40 is imitated in a poem beginning, "The liuelie sparkes of those two eyes," in the Handful, 1584, pp. 55-56.

22-24 The liuely sparkes . . . perst my hart. Cf. 63. 37-38 n. Miss Foxwell (II, 47) cites another parallel in Dante, La Vita Nuova, xix. 68-71:

Degli occhi suoi, come ch' ella gli mova,
Escono spirti d' amore infiammati,
Che fieron gli occhi a qual che allor gli guati,
E passan sì che 'l cor ciascun ritrova.

33. 35 Of deadly noyse. For noyse read nay with the MS.

34. 2 (No. 41) The waueryng loue wyllleth, &c. In every edition (No. [46] in B-I, sigs. E4 in BC, C4 in D-G, C3^v-C4 in H, C3-C3^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 33) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

34. 7 Makes] Maketh
8 bids] bid
9 my] myn
11 lockyng] lacking
12 So] She: she] as fast: in the MS. line 12 comes after line 8
14 ruth] pitie
15 comfortes] comforteth
16 And, therewithall bolded, I seke the way how 17 forth] Om.: I bide] that I suffice

By printing line 12 out of place Tottel gave this sonnet the peculiar rhyme-scheme abba bbaa cddc ee. In the MS. the second quatrain rhymes correctly abba.

The source of No. 41 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 117 (Rime, 169, pp. 175-176):

Pien d' un vago penser che me desvia da tutti gli altri et fammi al mondo ir solo, ad or ad ora a me stesso m'involo,
pur lei cercando che fuggir devria;
et veggìola passar sì dolce et ria,
che l' alma trema per levarsi a volo, tal d'armati sospir conduce stuolo
questa bella d' Amor nemica et mia!
Ben, s' i' non erro, di pietate un raggio scorgo fra 'l nubiloso altero ciglio, che 'n parte rasserena il cor doglioso:
allor raccolgo l' alma; et poi ch' i' aggio di scovirle il mio mal preso consiglio, tanto gli ò a dir che 'ncominciar non oso.

19 (No. 42) The loue hauing dreamed, &c. In every edition (No. [47] in B-I, sigs. E4 in BC, C4 in D-H, C3^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 38) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

34. 28 broughtest] broughtes: these] this: seas] mew
29 to] Om.: tencease] to renew 30 delight timbrace] succor to embrace
32 the other] thothr

- 34 But thus return] Retorning
 35 could] it could 36 do] they

The source of No. 42 is Marcello Filosseno's strambotto (Sylve, 1507, 12),

Pareami in questa nocte esser contento che tecco iunxi al disiato effecto deh fossio sempre in tal dormir attento poi che il ciel non mi porge altro dilecto ma il gran piacer mutosse in gran tormento quando che solo me trouai nel lecto ne duolmi gia chel sonno mha ingannato ma duolmi sol che sonno sogno e stato.

35. 2 (No. 43) The louer vnhappy biddeth, Æc. In every edition (No. [48] in B-I, sigs. E₄^v in BC, C₄^v in D-G, C₄-C₄^v in H, C₃^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 39) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

35. 6 Ye] You: swete abundance] habundaunce 7 of] and
 8 do way] do away
 10 of] in 11 my missehappes vnhappy] the happs most unhappy
 14 Stephan] Sephanes
 15 of] of the 17 wittes] liff
 19 Ioye] Reioyse

No. 43 is paraphrased and greatly expanded by Turbervile (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 195-198) in a poem called "The Lover hoping in May to have had redresse of his woes . . . bewailes his cruell hap."

8-9 Aryse for shame, Æc. Cf. Chaucer, Troilus and Criseyde, II. 111-112,

Do wey your book, rys up, and lat us daunce,
 And lat us don to May som observaunce;

also The Knight's Tale, A. 1042, 1045,

For May wol have no slogardye a-night. . .
 And seith, "Arys, and do thyn observaunce."

11-12 missehappes vnhappy, That me betide in May. Wyatt was imprisoned in England in May, 1534, and May, 1536, as well as (probably in May) in Italy in 1527.

13 As one whom loue list little to aduance. Cf. Chaucer, Troilus and Criseyde, I. 518, "Of hem that Love list febly for to avaunce."

14 Stephan, evidently a person who had cast Wyatt's horoscope. The MS. calls him Sephanes.

35. 20 (No. 44) The louer confesseth him in loue with Phillis. In every edition (No. [49] in B-I, sigs. E4^v in BC, C4^v in D-H, C4 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 40) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

35. 26 or 1] to: slack] slake: pace to] passe
 27 Be] By 33 and] my
 34 doth] doeth

For an imitation of No. 44 by Turbervile see his Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 68-69.

The opening lines and the general idea of the sonnet were suggested by Petrarch, sonetto in vita 169, lines 1-4 (Rime, 224, p. 220):

S' una fede amorosa, un cor non finto,
 un languir dolce, un desiar cortese;
 s' oneste voglie in gentil foco accese,
 un lungo error in cieco laberinto.

22-25, 27 If waker care, &c. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 187, these lines are quoted as an example of the device "Irmus, or the Long loose," where "all the whole sence of the dittie is suspended till ye come to the last three wordes, then do I loue againe, which finisheth the song with a full and perfit sence." Cf. 44. 7-13 n.

29, 31 Brunet. Possibly meant for Anne Boleyn.

30 Phillis. This lady cannot be identified. Miss Foxwell (11, 52-53) arbitrarily and illogically makes her out to be Mary Howard, Duchess of Richmond, sister of the poet Surrey.

36. 2 (No. 45) Of others fained sorrow, &c. In every edition (No. [50] in B-I, sigs. F in BC, C5 in D-G, C4^v-C5 in H, C4 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 13) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

36. 7 hartes] Om.
 8 outward] owteward
 9 Eke Hannibal] And Hannyball, eke: outshyt] shitt
 13 me] it oft
 16 that] Om.: laugh] laught: at any] any tyme or 17 because] for bicause: none other] nother

No. 45 is translated from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 70 (Rime, 102, pp. 105-106):

Cesare, poi che 'l traditor d' Egitto li fece il don de l' onorata testa, celando l' allegrezza manifesta,
 pianse per gli occhi fuor, sí come è scritto;
 et Hanibal, quando a l'imperio affitto
 vide farsi fortuna sí molesta, rise fra gente lagrimosa et mesta,
 per isfogare il suo acerbo despitto;

et così aven che l' animo ciascuna sua passion sotto 'l contrario manto ricopre co la vista or chiara or bruna.
 Però s' alcuna volta io rido o canto, facciol perch' i' non ò se non quest' una via da celare il mio angoscioso pianto.

An entirely different translation in a Harington MS. (Additional 36529, fol. 45^v) runs thus:

Cesare what time the wise and valiant hed
 By [From] traitors hand for present hym was broght
 Cloking the Joy the whole world saw [might see,] it wrought Outwardlie wept what euer inward bred Haniball eke whan he saw fortune fled
 And thempire skorged as no man wold haue thought Amides the troupe of wiping eyes he laught
 To slake the rage his kendled furi fed
 So chancith it that eache mind doth assay
 To hyde his harme w̄ cloke of diuerse hew
 As passions pearce w̄ looke now grime now gay Therfore [Wherefore] if I chance sing or smile a new
 It is [think it] for that I can none other way
 Couer the plaintes that still my life pursew.

The bracketed words in the foregoing sonnet represent subsequent changes in the text. For a later translation see Davison's A Poetical Rhapsody, 1602 (ed. A. H. Bullen, I, 90-91).

36. 5 the traytour of Egypt. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, D^v-D², remarks: "Pompey was cut shorter by ŷ head thē he was, whereof Petolomie making merchandise sould it to Cesar." Stephen Batman, The trauayled Pylgrime, 1569, D⁴^v, writes of "Pompey . . . which lost his head by Ptolomeus feate," and in a marginal note states that Plutarch "sayth, that one Titius slew Pompey, but Polichronicon, that yong Ptolomie did cut of his head, and sent it to Iulius Cesar thinking to haue done him great pleasure, but he was therwith verie sorie." In his life of Pompey, Plutarch asserts that "when one of the Egyptians was sent to present him [Caesar] with Pompey's head, he turned away from him with abhorrence as from a murderer; and on receiving his seal . . . he burst into tears." Plutarch's life of Caesar informs us that when that conqueror "came to Alexandria, where Pompey was already murdered, he would not look upon Theodotus, who presented him with his head, but taking only his signet, shed tears." This episode (which, of course, is treated at length in the ninth book of Lucan's Pharsalia) became a commonplace in English poetry. See the Paradise, p. 245, where various illustrations are cited. To them might be added a passage from Lodowick Lloyd's The Consent of Time, 1590, p. 389: "It is written that when Alexander saw Darius dead, hee wept and couered his bodie with his owne cloake: so wept Iulius Cæsar when he saw the head of Pompey." Cf. also 27. 26 n.

36. 19 (No. 46) Of change in minde. In every edition (No. [51] in B-I, sigs. F in BC, C5 in D-H, C4-C4^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 17) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

36. 20 telth] telleth
 22 purpose] propose 23 ech] every
 27 diuersnesse doth] dyvernes doeth
 28 this . . . blamen] that blame this dyvernes
 30 you ¹, ²] ye: that] the same
 31 doth] doeth

34 (No. 47) How the louer perisheth, &c. In every edition (No. [52] in B-I, sigs. F-F^v in BC, C5-C5^v in D-H, C4^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 22) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

37. 3 Against] Agayn
 4 doth] doeth
 5 Neuer appeare] Do never pere
 6 to] that: so] Om.
 7 they] they do
 8 But find] And fynde the 9 may I] I may 11 Yet] And yet
 12 So . . . remembrance] Remembraunce so foloweth me
 13 That] So that: my] Om.
 14 desteny] destyne: doth] doeth
 15 And yet] Yet do

The source of No. 47 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 15 (Rime, 19, pp. 13-14):

Son animali al mondo de sí altera
 vista, che 'ncontra 'l sol pur si difende:
 altri, però che 'l gran lume gli offende,
 non escon fuor se non verso la sera:
 et altri, col desio folle che spera gioir forse nel foco perché splende, provan l' altra virtù, quella ch' encende.
 Lasso, el mio loco è 'n questa ultima schera!
 Ch' i' non son forte ad aspectar la luce di questa Donna, et non so fare schermi di luoghi tenebrosi o d' ore tarde.
 Però con gli occhi lagrimosi e 'nfermi mio destino a vederla mi conduce:
 et so ben ch' i' vo dietro a quel che m' arde.

An entirely different translation of this sonnet in a Harington MS. (Additional 36529, fol. 45^v) runs thus:

Some kind of creaturs haue, so persing sight
 They can behold, the glistring [shining] sonne so hie
 And some again, cannot abide the bright
 Nor come abrode, but when the night drawes nie

One other sort, because [by cawse] of shining [flaming] light
 Hopes of great sport $\frac{w}{h}$ in the [through vaine lust hopes of sport in] fire to flie
 And tast's by play, in earnest burning right
 Alas and I, ame of this latter Rate
 Those lightning [two faire] starrs, to vew I want much myght
 And [Yet] for deffence, I know ther is no flight
 Nor place so darke, can helpe nor ower so late Wherefore I yeld, $\frac{w}{h}$ honor or $\frac{w}{h}$ blame
 To folow wheare, I shalbe led by fate
 All thoughe I know, I go as flie to flame.

The bracketed words represent later changes in the text. Still another translation was made by the author of The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 249, who observes that the lines have been "very well Englished by Sir Thomas Wiat after his fashion, and by my selfe thus:

"There be some fowles of sight so prowde and starke,
 As can behold the sunne, and neuer shrink,
 Some so feeble, as they are faine to vvinke,
 Or neuer come abroad till it be darke:
 Others there be so simple, as they thinke,
 Because it shines, to sport them in the fire,
 And feeble vnware, the vvrong of their desire,
 Fluttring amidst the flame that doth them burne,
 Of this last ranke (alas) am I aright,
 For in my ladies lookes to stand or turne
 I haue no povver, ne find place to retire,
 Where any darke may shade me from her sight
 But to her beames so bright whilst I aspire,
 I perish by the bane of my delight."

The sonnet is printed throughout in italics.

37. 16 (No. 48) Against his tong, Ec. In every edition (No. [53] in B-I, sigs. F^v in BC, C₅^v in D-H, C₄^v-C₅ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 23) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

37. 18 still kept thee] have the still kept 19 thee] have I the 20 to] right
 23 thou standst] then standest thou: afraied] aferd
 24 one word be sayd] thou speke towerd
 25 It is as in dreame, unperfaict and lame 26 agaynst] again
 27 I] fayn I
 29 ye] you
 31 doth] Om.: declare] declareth

For an imitation of Wyatt's poem see Turbervile's Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 181-182.

No. 48 is translated from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 34 (Rime, 49, p. 51):

Perch' io t' abbia guardato di menzogna
 a mio podere et honorato assai, ingrata lingua, già però non m' ài
 redduto honor, ma facto ira et vergogna.
 Ché quanto piú 'l tuo aiuto mi bisogna per dimandar mercede, allor ti stai sempre piú fredda; et se parole fai, son imperfecte et quasi d' uom che sogna.
 Lagrime triste, et voi tutte le notti
 m' accompagnate ov' io vorrei star solo;
 poi fuggite dinanzi a la mia pace.
 Et voi, sí pronti a darmi angoscia et duolo,
 sospiri, allor traete lenti et rotti.
 Sola la vista mia del cor non tace.

37. 32 (No. 49) Description of the contrarious passions, &c. In every edition (No. [54] in B-I, sigs. F^v-F² in BC, C₅^v-C₆ in D-G, C₅^v in H, C₅ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 24) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

38. 2 aloft] above the wynde
 3 worlde] worold
 4 lockes nor loseth] loseth nor locketh
 5 holdes] holdeth
 6 lettes] letteth
 8 eye] Iyen: se] se; and 9 wish] desire: yet] and yet: for] Om.
 12 Lo, thus] Likewise: both] boeth

No. 49 is translated from Petrarch, sonetto in vita 90 (Rime, 134, p. 147):

Pace non trovo et non ò da far guerra;
 et temo et spero, et ardo et son un ghiaccio;
 et volo sopra 'l cielo, et giaccio in terra;
 et nulla stringo, et tutto 'l mondo abbraccio.
 Tal m' à in pregon, che non m' apre né serra;
 né per suo mi riten né scioglie il laccio;
 et non m'ancide Amore et non mi sferra;
 né mi vuol vivo né mi trae d' impaccio.
 Veggio senza occhi et non ò lingua et grido;
 et bramo di perir et cheggio aita;
 et ò in odio me stesso et amo altrui.
 Pascomi di dolor, piangendo rido;
 egualmente mi spiace morte et vita.
 In questo stato son, Donna, per vui.

Petrarch's sonnet is also imitated by No. 301, and is translated by Thomas Watson in The Hekatompathia, 1582, sonnet 40 (ed. Arber, p. 76). See also Richard Hill's poem in the Paradise, p. 80.

35-36 I Find no peace, and all my warre is done, &c. Borrowed by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, S₃^v: "Ah deare Aurelia, my power is too weake to make any warre, and yet I can find no peace, I am not scorcht with any fire, and yet no cold adawes my heate." In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 136, the two lines are quoted as examples of iambic verses constructed entirely of monosyllables.

38. 4 That lockes nor loseth, holdeth me in pryson. "Love, who neither locks nor unlocks (looseth), holds me in prison" (see Petrarch's fifth line, above).

14 (No. 50) The louer compareth, &c. In every edition (No. [55] in B-I, sigs. F2 in BC, C6 in D-H, C5 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 26) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

38. 18 Through] Thorrough: doth] doeth
 19 my fo] myn enemy
 23 doth] doeth
 24 sighes] sightes
 25 teares] teris
 26 Haue] Hath
 27 and] and eke
 28 leade] led
 29 Drownde] Drowned: be my] me

The source of No. 50 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 137 (Rime, 189, pp. 189-190):

Passa la nave mia colma d' oblio per aspro mare, a mezza notte, il verno, enfra Scilla et Caribdi; et al governo siede 'l Signore, anzi 'l nimico mio.
 À ciascun remo un penser pronto et rio,
 che la tempesta e 'l fin par ch' abbi a scherno:
 la vela rompe un vento humido, eterno
 di sospir, di speranze et di desio.
 Pioggia di lagrimar, nebbia di sdegni bagna et rallenta le già stanche sarte, che son d' error con ignorantia attorto.
 Celansi i duo mei dolci usati segni;
 morta fra l' onde è la ragion et l' arte:
 tal ch' i' 'ncomincio a desperar del porto.

21 And euery houre. A mistranslation of à ciascun remo, "at every oar." The MS. has owre.

31 (No. 51) Of douteous loue. In every edition (No. [56] in B-I, sigs. F2-F2^v in BC, C6-C6^v in D-G, C6 in H, C5^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 27) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

38. 32 those] these 33 abides . . . moistes] is that myn oft moisteth
 35 To] For to: within] in: worldly] woroldly
 39. 2 bitter findes the swete] fynde the swete bitter
 3 there] Om.
 4 then] Om.

39. 5 spurs] spurreth: brydleth] bridilleth: eke] Om.
 6 Thus is it in suche extremitie brought
 7 In frosen though nowe, and nowe it stondeth in flame
 8 Twixt . . . betwixt] Twyst misery and welth twyst
 9 With seldome] But few 10 In] With 11 lo] Om.

The source of No. 51 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 121 (Rime, 173, p. 178):

Mirando 'l sol de' begli occhi sereno, ov' è chi spesso i miei depinge et bagna, dal cor l'anima stanca sì scompagna per gir nel paradiso suo terreno.
 Poi trovandol di dolce et d'amar pieno, quant' al mondo sì tesse opra d' aragna vede; onde seco et con Amor si lagna ch' à sí caldi gli spron, sí duro 'l freno.
 Per questi extremi duo contrari et misti,
 or con voglie gelate or con accese, stassi cosí fra misera et felice.
 M' à pochi lieti et molti penser tristi;
 e 'l piú si pente de l'ardite imprese:
 tal frutto nasce di cotal radice.

38. 33 Where he . . . moistes and washeth. Referring to the lady's eyes, where dwells Cupid — he who moistens and bathes (literally, colors, or obscures, and moistens) the lover's own eyes with tears.

39. 11 Of such a roote lo cometh frute frutelesse. Petrarch says, "From such a root comes up such a fruit-tree." Wyatt unnecessarily adds that the tree bears no fruit. Cf. 47. 32.

12 (No. 52) The louer sheweth, &c. In every edition (No. [57] in B-I, sigs. F2^v in BC, C6^v in D-G, C6-C6^v in H, C5^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 86-87) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

39. 16 within] in
 17 Once . . . seen] I have sene
 18 once] Om.
 19 haue] Om.: them selues] theimself
 21 in] with a
 23 especiall] in speciall
 25 did . . . shoulders] from her shoulders did 27 And . . . so] Therewith all 29 for] Om.: awakyng] waking 30 turnde now through] torned, thorough 31 bitter] straunge
 34 vnkyndly so] so kyndely
 35 I wold fain knowe what she hath deserved

36 (No. 53) To a ladie to answeare directly, &c. In every edition (No. [58] in B-I, sigs. F2^v-F3 in BC, C6^v-C7 in D-G, C6^v in H, C6 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 83) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

40. 3, 4 you] ye
 6 For] And: you] ye
 7 burns] burneth
 8 pity or ruth] any pitie
 12 You] Ye

An answer to Wyatt's poem (beginning, "Of few wourdes sir you seme to be") is printed from the same MS. by Nott (Wyatt, p. 77) and Miss Foxwell (I, 83). The latter believes the source of No. 53 to be a douzaine by Mellin de Saint-Gelais (Euvres Poétiques, 1719, p. 231) beginning, "S'amour vous a donné mon cœur en gage." The resemblance between the two poems is slight, even (where it is closest) in the final lines of each:

S'il ne vous plaist, amis comme devant,
 Un autre aurez, & moy ne pouvant estre,
 Servant de vous, de moy je seray maistre.

40. 14 (No. 54) To his loue whom he had kissed, &c. In every edition (No. [59] in B-I, sigs. F3 in BC, C7 in D-G, C6^v-C7 in H, C6 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 46) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

40. 18 therin] then
 19 Or haue I] Have I then 20 not] Om.
 21 Reuenge . . . rediest] Then revenge you: and the next
 22 my life it shall haue] shall have my lyffe

This epigram is a paraphrase of Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 179^v):

Incolpa donna amor se troppo io uolsi
 Aggiungendo alla tua la bocca mia.
 Se pur punir miuoi di quel chio tolsi
 Fà che concesso replicar mi sia.
 Che tal dolceza in quelli labri accolsi,
 Chel spirto mio fù per fugini uia.
 Sò che al secondo tocco uscirà fora
 Bastar ti dé, che per tal fallo io mora.

25 (No. 55) Of the Ielous man that loued, &c. In every edition (No. [60] in B-I, sigs. F3-F3^v in BC, C7-C7^v in D-G, C7 in H, C6 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 47) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

40. 29 wandring] wandering
 41. 3 the] that: had] Om.

Koeppel (Studien, pp. 77-78) compares the opening lines of this epigram with Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, I. 11 (ed. Pietro Papini, 1916, p. 3):

Timida pastorella mai si presta
Non volse piede inanzi a serpe crudo,
Come Angelica tosto il freno torse.

The same figure (which seems to be a commonplace) appears also in Orlando Furioso, xxxix. 32 (p. 533), as well as in the Iliad, III. 33-36, and in the Aeneid, II. 378-381. Surrey, translating the passage in Virgil (1557, B3^v-B4) borrows Wyatt's language:

Like him that, wandring in the bushes thick,
Tredes on the adder with his rechlesse foote,
Rered for wrath swelling her speckled neck
Dismayd, geues back al sodenly for fere.

41. 4 (No. 56) To his loue from whom, &c. In every edition (No. [61] in B-I, sigs. F3^v in BC, C7^v in D-G, C7 in H, C6-C6^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 47) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

41. 6 nedes] nedeth: threatnyng] threning
10 finde] meit
11 both] boeth
12 reft my] toke from me an
13 then] now: one] thon: the other] thothr

The source of this epigram is Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fols. 170-170^v), as Nott (Wyatt, p. 555) indicates:

A che minacci, à che tanta ira e orgoglio,
Per questo non farai chel furto renda.
Non senza causa la tua man dispoglio
Rapir quel daltri non fú mai mia menda.
Famme citar dauanti amor chio uoglio,
Che la ragion de luno & laltro intenda.
Lei il cor mi tolse, & io gli hó tolto un guanto
Vorró saper da te se un cor ual tanto.

In his Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 179-180, Turbervile paraphrased and expanded No. 56, naming his poem "To a Gentlewoman from whome he tooke a Ring."

14 (No. 57) Of the fained frend. In every edition (No. [62] in B-I, sigs. F3^v in BC, C7^v in D-G, C7 in H, C6^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 48) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

41. 16 the] thy 18 Thought he (see 41. 18 n.)] Though they 20 oft times he kindleth] oft knydeleth [?]
21 him self he] Om.

41. 18 Thought he. Read Though thee (with B+), where thee can mean either to thee or, with the MS., they. This phrase is misprinted Thought he in A only.

22 (No. 58) The louer taught, &c. In every edition (No. [63] in B-I, sigs. F3^v-F4 in BC, C7^v-C8 in D-G, C7-C7^v in H, C6^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 78) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

41. 28 The wyndy wordes, the Ies quaynt game
 29 make] maketh
 32 seke taccord] seketh to accorde
 33 thus] Om.
 42. 4 naught doth] yet nothing I 7 Should . . . vnto] And should I trust to 8 haue] hath
 9 yet haue] hath
 11 do I] I do

42. 13 (No. 59) The louer complayneth, &c. In every edition (No. [64] in B-I, sigs. F4 in BC, C8 in D-G, C7^v-C8 in H, C7 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 79-80) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

42. 16 Both] Boeth
 18 oft forced ye] ye oft forced 19 lo] Om.: my] myn
 20 Emong whome pitie I fynde doeth remayn
 24 moisture] moystor
 26 I endure] to suffre
 27 hugy] howyy
 29 alas doth] helas doeth
 32 thus framed] this joyned
 33 beauty] beaultie
 34 No grace to me from the there may procede
 35 reward] rewarded

No. 59 is based on Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 125):

Laer che sente el mesto e gran clamore
 Diuulga in ogni parte la mia doglia
 Tal che per compassione del mio dolore
 Par che ne treme in arbore ogni foglia,
 Ogni fiero animal posa el furore
 Che daiutarmi ognun par chabbia uoglia
 Et con mugito stran uoglion le carmi
 Et uorrian sol parlar per consolarmi.

20 Amonge whom, such. In B+ such is changed to ruth, corresponding to pitie in the MS.

36 (No. 60) The louer reioyseth against fortune, &c. In every edition (No. [65] in B-I, sigs. F4-F4^v in BC, C8-C8^v in D-G, C8 in H, C7-C7^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 81-82) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

43. 2 not] not well
 5 makst the] causeth: dolourous] dolours
 9 hast set me] me set 10 by] thy 11 mindes] mynd: mayst] may: so] Om.
 12 For . . . it] And honeste, and it 14 me trapt] trapped
 15 hapt] happed
 16 hindryng . . . thou] hindering thou diddest
 19 then didst thou] thou diddist
 20 didst] diddist
 21 wouldst] wouldest: wrapt] lapped
 22 hapt] happed

43. 4-6 Thou fortune with thy diuers play, &c. It seems likely, as Nott (Wyatt, p. 547) suggests, that Wyatt had in mind Horace's Carmina, III. 29,

Fortuna saevo laeta negotio et ludum insolentem ludere pertinax transmutat incertos honores, nunc mihi nunc alii benigna.

23 (No. 61) A renouncing of hardly escaped loue. In every edition (No. [66] in B-I, sigs. F4^v-G in BC, C8^v-D in D-G, C8-C8^v in H, C7^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 77) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

43. 25 hart] rayn
 27 and wofully] yet shall suretie
 28 Conduyt my thought of Joyes nede 29 such] Om.
 33 escapt] escaped
 34 he] that: and] Om.
 37 my] myn
 38 a part] apart
 44. 2 astart] estert
 3 among] emong

44. 4 (No. 62) The louer to his bed, &c. In every edition (No. [67] in B-I, sigs. G in BC, D in D-G, C8^v in H, C7^v-C8 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 66) prints the poem from MS. Additional 17492, with the following variants:

44. 7 renewer] reuyver
 10 myne] and my 11 remembrer of] remembryng
 14 frosty snowes] frost, the snow
 15 heat of sunne] yet no heate
 16 so great] mete
 17 cure] care
 18 Renewyng] Reuyvyng
 19 effectes] affectes: in me they] they do me
 20 Besprent] By sprent: teares] terys

- 21 But all for nought] Yet helpythe yt not 23 I do] most I
 25 Yet that I gave I cannot call agayn
 26 from] fro
 27 teares] terys

Miss Foxwell overlooked the appearance of this poem in Tottel's Miscellany, but she prints (1, 65) from MS. Egerton 2711 a second version of the first eight lines.

No. 62 was suggested by Petrarch, sonetto in vita 178 (Rime, 234, p. 227), beginning,

O cameretta, che già fosti un porto a le gravi tempeste mie diurne, fonte se' or di lagrime nocturne che 'l dì celate per vergogna porto.

Turbervile (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 62-64) paraphrased and amplified it in "The Lover to his carefull bed, declaring his restlesse state."

44. 7-13 The restfull place, &c. Cf. 13. 41 n. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 187, these lines are inexactly quoted as an example of the device "Irmus, or the Long loose" (cf. 35. 22-25, 27 n.). "Ye see here," the author concludes, "how ye can gather no perfection of sence in all this dittie till ye come to the last verse in these wordes my bed I thee forsake."

28 (No. 63) Comparison of loue, &c. In every edition (No. [68] in B-I, sigs. G in BC, D in D-G, C8^v-D in H, C8 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 56) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

44. 32 Of] Off: gathers] gaders
 33 Till] Iyll [?]: downflowed to] off flowd the 36 Rage is his raine] His rayne is rage
 37 eschue] estew

Parallels to No. 63 are noted by Miss Foxwell in Orlando Furioso, xxxvii. 110 (ed. Pietro Papini, 1916, p. 512), and (much closer) by Koeppel (Studien, p. 77) in Ariosto's Capitoli Amorosì, ca. 1537, v. 7-15 (Rime e Satire, Florence, 1822, pp. 272-273). These passages are respectively:

Come torrente che superbo faccia
 Lunga pioggia tal volta o nievi sciolte,
 Va ruinoso, e giù da' monti caccia
 Gli arbori e i sassi e i campi e le ricolte:
 Vien tempo poi, che l'orgogliosa faccia
 Gli cade, e sì le forze gli son tolte,
 Ch' un fanciullo, una femina per tutto
 Passar lo puote, e spesso a piede asciutto.

Ma, come quando alle calde aure estive
 Si risolvono i ghiacci e nevi alpine,
 Crescon i fiumi al par delle lor rive,
 Et alcun dispregiando ogni confine

Rompe superbo gli argini, et inonda
 Le biade, i paschi e le città vicine:
 Così quando soverchia, e sovrabbonda
 A quanto cape e può capire il petto, Convien che l' allegrezza si diffonda.

Berdan (Early Tudor Poetry, p. 457 n.) refers to still another parallel in one of Ariosto's elegies.

44. 30 these hie hilles. The Pyrenees.

36 Rage is his raine. "Rage is his restraint; i. e. there is no restraint on his raging" (Nott).

37 The first eschue is remedy alone. "The only remedy is to avoid love in the beginning."

45. 2 (No. 64) wiates complaint vpon Loue, &c. In every edition (No. [69] in B-I, sigs. G^v-G³ in BC, D^v-D³ in D-G, D-D³ in H, C8-D2 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 67-76) prints the first three stanzas of this poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), the remainder from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

45. 2-4 Love's Arraignment
 6 causde] caused: accited] acited
 7 our] Om.
 9 Charged] Changed
 23 prest] pressed
 26 So] O
 27 my . . . ytasted] have my blynde lyfe taisted
 28 semblance] swetenes
 29 fair and] the: made me be] have made me
 30 araced] ataced
 31 From] From all: from] Om.
 32 He toke me from rest and set me in error
 33 God . . . regard] He hath made me regarde God muche 38 Whettyng alwayes] Alwayes whetting: frayle] Om.
 39 On] On the 40 Oh] Om.: had] now had
 46. 2 Or] Or els any: to] Om.
 3 shalbe changed] shall chaunge
 5 robbeth he my fredom] robbed my libertie
 7 hath] have: in] me in 8 me hasted] chased me
 9, 10, 11 Through] Thorough
 10 through bitter passions] straite pressions
 11 and ¹] Om.
 12 with] Om.
 14 All in] In all
 17 my] Om.
 18 me] Om.: not] me not
 19 goddess] goodenes
 20 they] Om.: cruell] cruell extreme 21 fedes] fedeth

- 22 hower] owre
 23 to] for to 24 in] Om.
 25 guile, and] decepte, and by: thralld] Om.
 26 since . . . neuer] and syns there never bell
 27 Where I ame, that I here not, my playntes to renewe 28 My plaintes] And he: say] say is 29 olde . . . haue] have an old stock
 30 is] is alwaye
 31 doth] doeth
 32 thence] Om.
 34 noy both] annoye boeth: parauenture other] peradventure othr
 35 the one . . . tother] thone and thothr
 36 aduersair] adversary: such] Om.
 38 troth] trueth
 39 may] shall 40 his] Om.
 41 makes] maketh
 43 shames] shameth
 47. 2 gain] game
 4 therby alone] onely thereby
 5 now] Om.: so] greatly
 6 quickned I] I quickened
 7 as] els, as: els he mought] he might 8 how grete Atride] that Atrides
 11 Thaffricane] the Affricane
 12 nurture] vertue
 15 vnworthy] no dele worthy 16 the] right the 17 sonne yet neuer was] the mone was never 18 of] Om.
 20 such] suche a 21 so hye might] myght have 25 causde] caused
 27 learned, he] he lerned
 28 repenteth, now] he repenteth
 29 same] Om.: and] and the 31 Sweter then for to in joye eny othr in all 32 loe thus] Om.
 33 shall] hath: the . . . further] thunkynd doeth forther
 34 A . . . I] I norisshe a serpent 35 now of nature] of his nature now 37 haue I] I have 38 him] Om.: wyse] of wyse
 39 once] him
 40 gnawen] ynawen
 42 Whome now he accuseth he wounted to fere
 43 euer] soever
 48. 2 holdes] holdeth: whit] wit
 3 yet . . . there] there was never: fantome] fantorme
 6 rule] ruell: ease] pleasur
 7 his gayn] remayn

48. 8 yet] Om.
 9 he might vpflie] for to flye
 10 to higher] farther 13 the] his 15 sayd, ere] sayed, or 16 both] boeth
 18 shreke] shrighr
 19 once] me
 20 ayen] streight
 21 "Not I" quoth he; "but price, that is well worth"
 22 eche other] boeth eche
 23 still] Om.
 24 eche . . . haue] have nowe eche othr
 25 now] Om.: thyne onely] onely thy 26 at the whisted] After thissaid
 28 doth] doeth: a] Om.

The source of No. 64 is Petrarch, canzone in morte 7 (Rime, 360, p. 337), the first stanza of which (since the whole poem is too long to quote) is given below as a specimen:

Quel antiquo mio dolce empio Signore fatto citar dinanzi a la reina che la parte divina
 tien di nostra natura e 'n cima sede;
 ivi, com' oro che nel foco affina,
 mi rappresento carco di dolore,
 di paura et d' orrore,
 quasi huom che teme morte et ragion chiede:
 e 'ncomincio: "Madonna, il manco piede giovenetto pos' io nel costui regno:
 ond' altro ch' ira et sdegno non ebbi mai; et tanti et sí diversi tormenti ivi soffersi, ch' alfine vinta fu quell' infinita mia patientia, e 'n odio ebbi la vita.

A partial translation of Petrarch's canzone in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 17) seems worth quoting for purposes of comparison with No. 64:

I scited once t' appeare/ before the noble Quene that ought to gudge eache mortall life/ that in this world is seene That pleasant crewell foe/ that robbeth hartes of ease and now doth frowne/ and then doth fawne/ and can both greve and please and theare as golde in fyre/ full fynde to eache intent Charged wth feare and terrour eke/ I did myself present
 As one that doubted death/ and yet did justice crave and thus began to unfolde my cawse in hope some helpe to have Madame in tender youth/ I entrid furst this raigne where other sweete I never felt/ then greefe and great disdaine and eake so sondrie kyndes/ of tormentes did endure as lyfe I loth'd, and death desyred/ my cursed case to cure and thus my wofull daies/ unto this howre have past

 In smokie sighes, and scalding teares/ my wried life to waste
 O Lord what graces great/ I fledd and eke refused to serve this crewell craftie Syer/ that doubtles trust abused.

What witt can use suche wordes/ to argue and debate what tongue express the full effect/ of myne unhappie state what hand with pen can painte/ t'unsypher this disceate what hart so hard that wold not yelde/ that once had seene his baite what great and greivous wronges/ what threatens of yll successe what single sweete mingled with masse/ of doble bitternes with what unpleasant panges/ with what an horde of paynes hath he acquaynted my greene yeares/ by his falce pleasant traines

Whoe by resistles powre/ hath forste me sue his dawnce that if I be not moche abvsde/ had fownd moche better chaunce and when I moste resolv'd/ to lead moste quyet lyfe he spoil'd me of discordles state/ and thrust me in truceles strife he hath bewitch'd me so/ that God the lesse I serv'd and due respect unto myself/ the further from me swarv'd
 He hath the love of one/ so painted in my thought that other thing I can none mynde/ nor care for as I ought and all this comes from hym/ both counsaile and the cawse that whett my yonge desyre so moche/ to th' honour of his lawse.

45. 5 Myne olde dere enmy, Æc. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 139, this line is cited as "Myne old deēre ēnē my," etc., in illustration of a dactylic foot.

6 Afore that Quene. "Before Queen Reason," as the title of the poem shows. Reason is addressed at 45. 12, 46. 37, 48. 25. Cf. "Loues accusation at the iudgement seat of Reason, wherein the Authors whole successe in his Loue is couertlie described," a poem in J. C.'s Alcilia, 1595 (ed. Grosart, pp. 33-41), which begins,

In Reasons Court, my selfe being Plantiffe there,
Loue was by processe summon'd to appeare, and which is an imitation either of Wyatt or of Petrarch.

33 God made he me regard lesse, Æc. "He (Cupid) made me love God less than I ought to."

46. 19 The heauenly goddes. For goddes the MS. has goodenes, which corresponds more closely to Petrarch's words, "pietà celeste," "heavenly pity."

47. 2 in pleasant gain. The rhyme-scheme is ruined by gain: read game with the MS.

10 Whom Homer honored, Æc. "That great Achilles whom Homer honored." The last three words are not in Petrarch. Additions by Wyatt appear also in lines 8-9, and the translation is free throughout.

12 by much nurture glorious. Clearly nurture is an error for vertue (as in Petrarch and the MS.). B+ amend to honour, and hence change honor in line 13 to actes (misprinted artes in I).

47. 16 the best of many a Milion. Petrarch says "of a thousand." Wyatt omits Petrarch's comparison of the lady to Lucrece, and inserts an elaborate paraphrase of his own in lines 22-28, ending with the vigorous English phrase, the ignorant foole. Lines 34-35 are likewise original.

32 Of right good sede yll frute, &c. Cf. Wyatt's remark at 39. 11.

48. 5 he striueth with the bit. An English commonplace, added by Wyatt to this paraphrasing passage.

21 Not I but price. Wyatt has in mind Petrarch's words, "Io no, ma chi per sé la volse," "Not I, but He who wished her for Himself"; price, the reward the lady received in heaven, caused her death.

27 to haue hard your question. The "question" is similar to the "questions" in Boccaccio's Filocolo.

29 (No. 65) The louers sorowfull state, &c. In every edition (No. [70] in B-I, sigs. G3-G3^v in BC, D3-D3^v in D-H, D2 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 101-102) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 49. 6 so] that
- 9 Doth] Doeth
- 11 saw neuer] never sawe
- 15 taste] tasted
- 20 Souch] suche: doth] doeth
- 22 Souch] Om.
- 24 Souch] such

31 Souche. The oldest hand in I (Bodleian) writes in the margin, "& it semeth hir name was Souch, or Chaunce." The editor of the miscellany evidently considered Souch, or Souche, a proper noun, and hence at 49. 20, 22, 24 he put it in parentheses, a sixteenth-century equivalent for quotation-marks (cf. 232. 30 n.). A Mistress Souche (Zouche, Zowche) was one of the "noble ladies" at the court of Queen Jane Seymour (see Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic, of the Reign of Henry VIII, xii, ii, 340, 374), but the MS. shows that Wyatt was not referring to her. Compare also "Gascoignes prayse of Zouche late the Lady Greye of Wilton" in A Hundreth Sundrie Flowres, 1573 (ed. B. M. Ward, p. 86).

49. 26 (No. 66) The louer complaineth, &c. In every edition (No. [71] in B-I, sigs. G3^v-G4 in BC, D3^v-D4 in D-H, D2^v-D3 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 103-105) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 49. 39 stil] all
- 50. 12 to] unto
- 18 her, of] your owne
- 23 is] Om.
- 24 doth] doeth
- 26 since so much it doth] forbicause it doeth
- 28 troth] trowth: Nought shall] shall not
- 29 wretched] very

49. 28 Where shall I haue, &c. Nott thinks that the opening lines of this poem may have been suggested by Giusto de' Conti, La Bella Mano, 1715 ed., p. 50:

Chi darà a gli occhi miei sì larga vena
 Di lagrime, ch' io possa il mio dolore
 Sfogar piangendo sì, che poi m' attempre?
 E per quietare il tormentoso core Chi darà al petto sì possente lena,
 Che, siccome convien, sospiri sempre?

50. 13 lyke to like: the prouerb sayeth. Cf. Alexander Barclay, translating Sebastian Brant's The Ship of Fools, 1509 (ed. T. H. Jamieson, II [1874], 35), "For it is a prouerbe, and an olde sayd sawe That in euery place lyke to lyke wyll drawe"; John Lyly, Euphues. The Anatomy of Wit, 1578 (Complete Works, ed. Bond, I, 197), "Is it not a by woord, like will to like?"; and The Mirror for Magistrates, 1587 (ed. Haslewood, I, 304; cf. 379), "Like will to like (for so the Prouerbe sayes)." Barnabe Rich, The Honestie of This Age, 1614, p. 33 (Percy Society, 1844, p. 48), refers to "the prouerbe, Simile Simili gaudet, like will to like, quoth the Deuill to the Collier"; and in this expanded (English) form the proverb usually occurs in sixteenth-century and later works.

34 (No. 67) Of his loue that pricked her finger, &c. In every edition (No. [72] in B-I, sigs. G₄-G₄^v in BC, D₄-D₄^v in D-G, D₄ in H, D₃ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 45) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

50. 37 sowed] sowde
 51. 2 She wisht] Wisshed: that] as

Possibly in imitation of No. 67 was written the poem (ca. 1653) printed from a manuscript in Arthur Clifford's Tixall Poetry, 1813, pp. 19-20:

Ah, now I find the cause why still you did
 So smile to prick the lawne, or cut the thrid:—
 You were my fate; the needle was your dart,
 The thrid my life, the camberick my hart.

Somewhat similar in theme, as Miss Foxwell notes, is Maurice Sève's (or Scève's) dizaine 332 (Délie, 1544, ed. Eugène Parturier, 1916, p. 227):

Ouvrant ma Dame au labeur trop ardente,
 Son Dé luy cheut, mais Amour le luy dresse:
 Et le voyant sans raison evidente
 Ainsi troué, vers Delie s'adresse.
 C'est, luy dit elle, affin que ne m'opresse
 L'aiguille aigue, & que point ne m'offence.
 Donc, respond il, je croy que sa deffence
 Fait que par moy ton cœur n'est point vaincu.
 Mais bien du mien, dy je, la ferme essence Encontre toy luy sert tousjours d'escu.

51. 7 (No. 68) Of the same. In every edition (No. [73] in B-I, sigs. G₄^v in BC, D₄^v in D-G, D₄ in H, D₃ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 45) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

51. 8 What . . . hard] Who hath herd of
12 my] myn

She suggests, likewise, that the idea of the epigram (with which compare No. 67) came from lines in John Skelton's Phyllyp Sparowe (Poetical Works, ed. Dyce, 1 [1843], 57-58); but the suggestion lacks weight. Skelton writes:

I toke my sampler ones,
Of purpose, for the nones,
To sowe with stytchis of sylke . . .
But whan I was sowing his beke,
Methought, my sparow did speke,
And opened his prety byll,
Saynge, Mayd, ye are in wyll
Agayne me for to kyll,
Ye prycke me in the head!
With that my nedle waxed red,
Methought, of Phyllyps blode.

16 (No. 69) Request to Cupide, &c. In every edition (No. [74] in B-I, sigs. G₄^v in BC, D₄^v in D-G, D₄-D₄^v in H, D₃-D₃^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 1) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

51. 20 greuous] great
21 solemne] holy: takes] taketh
23 thee] Om.
25 all] Om.
26 iust] Om.
27 how . . . triumpheth] Om.
28 but if thee pitie] if pitie the 30 great] Om.
31 doth] doeth
32 here] Om.: MS. adds the refrain Behold love

As in the case of Nos. 70 and 103, the editor of A converted Wyatt's rondeau into a "sonnet" with the weird rhyme-scheme of aabb aaab aaab ba.

No. 69 is a free translation of Petrarch, madrigale in vita 4 (Rime, 121, p. 125):

Or vedi, Amor, che giovenetta donna
tuo regno sprezza et del mio mal non cura, et tra duo ta' nemici è sí sicura.
Tu se' armato, et ella in treccie e 'n gonna si siede et scalza in mezzo i fiori et l' erba, ver me spietata e 'ncontra te superba.
I' son pregion; ma, se pietà anchor serba
l' arco tuo saldo et qualchuna saetta, fa' di te et di me, Signor, vendetta.

51. 33 (No. 70) Complaint for true loue unrequited. In every edition (No. [75] in B-I, sigs. G₄^v-H in BC, D₄^v-D₅ in D-G, D₄^v in H, D₃^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 3) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

52. 2 troth] trouth
 3 attayn] be tayne
 4 How] Om.: iust] juste and true
 5 Since] Sythens
 6 both] boeth: crafty] Om.
 7 spedes] spedeth: lye and] Om.
 8 hye] Om.
 9 cloked] Om.
 10 troth] trouth: or parfit stedfastnesse] Om.
 11 Deceaud] Deceived: false and] Om.
 12 meanes] meaneth: faithfull] Om.: doth] doeth
 13 help or] Om.
 14 sterne] Om.
 15 Where . . . vain] Whose crueltie nothing can refrayn: MS. adds the refrain What vailleth trouth?

As in the case of Nos. 69 and 103, the editor of A changed Wyatt's rondeau to a "sonnet" with the strange rhyme-scheme aabb aaab baab ba, padding out all the lines to five feet and thus making almost a new poem.

52. 16 (No. 71) The louer that fled loue, &c. In every edition (No. [76] in B-I, sigs. H in BC, D₅ in D-G, D₄^v-D₅ in H, D₃^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 49) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

52. 18 so] Om.
 20 the . . . folow] I folow the coles 21 with willing] against my 22 both] boeth: furth] Om.
 24 laughes he now] now he laugh
 25 Meashed] Mashed: onely torne] all to-torne

The poem is supposed to have been written in reference to Henry VIII's visit to Francis I at Calais in October, 1532 (cf. line 21). Possibly it refers also to Anne Boleyn, with whom Wyatt had once been on terms of intimacy.

25 Meashed in the breers, that erst was onely torne. Miss Foxwell (11, 65) points out that "Tottel completely reverses Wiat's idea" by reading onely torne. The MS. reading shows Wyatt to mean that now he is merely caught by the "briars that formerly had torn him severely."

26 (No. 72) The louer hopeth of better chance. In every edition (No. [77] in B-I, sigs. H in BC, D₅ in D-H, D₃^v-D₄ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 50) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

52. 28 had] hath
 29 returnes] retornth: hid] Om.: vnder] under the 31 alowd] allowede
 32 in] into

52. 33 that] the: both] boeth
 34 The willowe eke] And eke the willowe
 35 Doth ^{1, 2}] Doeth

This poem is a translation of Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 120):

Sio son caduto interra inon son morto,
 Ritorna el Sol benche talhor si cele,
 Spero mi dará el ciel qualche conforto,
 Poi che fortuna hará sfocato el fele,
 Chi hó uisto naue ritornarsi in porto,
 Dapoi che rotte há in mar tutte soe uele
 El salce anchora el uento abassa & piega
 Poi se ridriza, & glialtri legni lega.

52. 30-33 And when Fortune, &c. These lines are quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 236, as an illustration of "Etiologia, or the Reason rend or the Tell cause," with the explanation that they 'first point, then confirm, by similitudes.' Cf. 53. 16-19 n., 121. 15-16 n. Perhaps the poem in general and line 31 in particular refer to Wyatt's imprisonment in the Fleet prison in May, 1534.

53. 2 (No. 73) The louer compareth his hart, &c. In every edition (No. [78] in B-I, sigs. H^v in BC, D₅^v in D-G, D₅ in H, D₄ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 51) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

53. 5 most] Om.
 8 Crackes] Cracketh: doe] doeth
 9 So doth] right so doeth
 10 ay] Om.
 12 inward] now hard: doth] doeth

Turbervile (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, p. 74) paraphrases No. 73 in a poem of eighteen lines, beginning:

Lyke as the gunne that hath to great a charge,
 And pellet to the powder ramde so sore,
 As neyther of both hath powre to go at large.

The source of Wyatt's poem is Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 145^v):

Se una bombarda è dal gran foco mossa
 Spirando, ciò che troua aterra presto.
 Ma segli aduien chella spirar non possa
 Se stessa rompe & poco offende el resto.
 Così io dentro ardo, el foco è giunto à lossa
 Sel taccio imor, sel dico altrui molesto.
 Sospeso uiuo, amor mi dá tal sorte,
 Che altro non è che una confusa morte.

5 The furious goonne, &c. Quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 139, as an illustration of the use of one dactylic foot in a line.

53. 13 (No. 74) The louer suspected of change, Ec. In every edition (No. [79] in B-I, sigs. H^v in BC, D₅^v in D-G, D₅-D₅^v in H, D₄ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 367) reprints the poem from A, misprinting breake (line 21) as break. Perhaps No. 74 was a sonnet with two lines omitted after line 25.

16-19 Accused though I be, Ec. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, pp. 236-237, these lines are quoted as illustrating "Etiologia," on which see 52. 30-33 n.

28 (No. 75) The louer abused, Ec. In every edition (No. [80] in B-I, sigs. H^v-H₂ in BC, D₅^v-D₆ in D-G, D₅^v in H, D₄-D₄^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 36) prints the poem from MS. Additional 17492, with the following variants:

53. 30 to 1] toke
 31 Therin] Wherin: you] she
 54. 2 A new line inserted: see note below
 3 wo yet] care: to] for to 5 To geue] Gyving
 6 your] her
 9 you] the: time is] dayes bee

54. 2 Since with good will, Ec. After this line supply the MS. reading, To followe her wich causith all my payne, which was no doubt inadvertently dropped by the printer.

13 (No. 76) The louer professeth himself constant. In every edition (No. [81] in B-I, sigs. H₂ in BC, D₆ in D-G, D₅^v in H, D₄^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 59) reprints the poem from A. The old annotator in I (Bodleian) objects to the title, "or rather, A Lady embracinge a gentlemans loue."

23 That list to blow retere, Ec. Borrowed in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, E₃^v, "I will not blowe retereate to euey trayne."

24 (No. 77) The louer sendeth his complaintes, Ec. In every edition (No. [82] in B-I, sigs. H₂-H₂^v in BC, D₆-D₆^v in D-G, D₅^v-D₆ in H, D₄^v-D₅ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 368-369) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

55. 7 Whom] Whan
 12 doth] doeth
 15 rygour] rigour
 17 Wherfore] Wherefore

Nott suggests that when Wyatt wrote No. 77 he "probably had in contemplation" Petrarch's sonnet "Ite, caldi sospiri," which he followed more closely in No. 103. For the commonplace figure at 55. 9-12 Nott likewise gives a plausible parallel from Serafino.

35-55. 2-4 For though hard rockes among, Ec. On this commonplace (which is repeated at 78. 15-16) see my notes in the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 174.

55. 25 (No. 78) The louers case can not be hidden, Ec. In every edition (No. [83] in B-I, sigs. H₂^v-H₃ in BC, D₆^v-D₇ in D-G, D₆-D₆^v in H, D₅-D5^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 370-371) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

55. 32 fayn] fain
 39 syde] side
 56. 3 no] to 16 are] ar

56. 14-15 Your sighes . . . And all to wry your wo. "You give a far-fetched explanation of your sighs, and you altogether misinterpret (give a false explanation of) your woe" (G. L. K.).

30 (No. 79) The louer praieth, &c. In every edition (No. [84] in B-I, sigs. H3-H3^v in BC, D7-D7^v in D-G, D6^v-D7 in H, D5^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 359-360) reprints the poem from The Court of Venus, ca. 1542 (or perhaps ca. 1557?), with the following variants:

56. 36 ye not] nothing: honestly] honesty: refrain added Dysdayne me not
 57. 3 This] The: refrain added Refuse me not 6 sins] seyng
 7 Refrain added Mystrust me not 9 Line missing
 10 Destroy . . . that] Nor hate me not til [Evidently parts of lines 9 and 10 of A were run together in the MS.]
 11 But . . . know] For syth you knew: refrain added Forsake me not 12 that am] being 13 am] I am
 14 knowne] knowen
 15 not, ne] never: refrain added Disdayne me not

33-34 Disdaine me not, &c. In Philotimus, 1583, C2^v, Melbancke borrows these lines, combining them with an imitation of 62.28-29: "Disdaine me not without desert, nor leaue me not so sodeinly, so do the stony rocks repulse the waues that rush them violently."

38 Nor think me not to be vniust. In his Rare Poems (1883), p. 229, W. J. Linton suggests that Nor think is a misprint for Forethink, and that the line means, "Do not be unjust in thinking ill of me before cause shown!" The emendation is ingenious but unnecessary.

57. 16 (No. 80) The louer lamenteth his estate, &c. In every edition (No. [85] in B-I, sigs. H3^v-H4 in BC, D7^v-D8 in D-G, D7-D7^v in H, D6 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 374-375) reprints the poem from A.

23-26 Regard at length, I you require, &c. Koeppl (Studien, p. 73) finds the source of these lines in Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 159^v, beginning, "Non piú tardar hormai di contentarme"):

Di questa fiamma uogli liberarme,
 Chio uiua in pena piú non è ragione.
 Non piú tardar di contentarme in questo
 Due uolte fá el seruizio chil fá presto.

58. 9 (No. 81) The louer waileth, &c. In every edition (No. [86] in B-I, sigs. H₄-H₄^v in BC, D₈-D₈^v in D-G, D₇^v-D₈ in H, D₆-D₆^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 376-377) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

58. 33 to] too
59. 2 therfore] therefore
3 perill] peril
10 my selfe] myself

59. 12 (No. 82) The louer lamenteth, &c. In every edition (No. [255] in B-I, sigs. Dd-Dd^v in BC, O-O^v in D-G, O₂ in H, N₃^v-N₄ in I). In all editions except A this poem is attributed to an "uncertain author," as a result of which Miss Foxwell (like Nott), finding no manuscript authority, rightly excludes it from her edition. Turbervile imitates the poem in his Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 162-165. The annotator in I (Bodleian) wrote in the margin of No. 82, "Taken out of Tullye."

22 My wastefull will is tried by trust. "My desire — which comes to naught — is proved to be thus unavailing when I trust to enjoy it" (G. L. K.).

29, 31 They eat the hony, &c. Cf. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, D₂: "Neither would I haue thee a drone to eate the swete that others sweat for, that y^e eate y^e hony, and they hould the hyue, they drawe y^e driue." The first part of his borrowing may come from the Paradise, 1576, p. 86. Cf. also Turbervile, Tragical Tales [ca. 1574], 1587 (1837 reprint, p. 19):

I burne the bee, I holde the hyue,
the sommer toyle is myne:
And all bicause when winter commes,
the honie may be thine.

60. 5 (No. 83) To his loue, &c. In every edition (No. [87] in B-I, sigs. H₄^v in BC, D₈^v in D-G, D₈-D₈^v in H, D₆^v-D₇ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 172-173) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

60. 8 The answer] Thanswere 14 haue nothing] nothing have 17 makes] makethe: two lines added:

Another, why, shall lyberty be bond!
Ffre hert may not be bond but by desert

18 Yet] Nor
23 bitter] frendly
24 That seithe your frende in saving of his payne 26 it] that 27 doth] Om.

28 (No. 84) To his ladie cruel, &c. In every edition (No. [88] in B-I, sigs. H₄^v-I in BC, D₈^v-E in D-G, D₈^v in H, D₇ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 42) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

60. 30 kinde] kind
 34 then] Om.
 61. 2 eke] Om.
 5 Therfore] Therefore

No. 84 is written in a somewhat unusual sonnet-form of three quatrains with alternate rhymes of ab followed by a couplet with the rhyme cc. No other sonnet by Wyatt has this form, which is a kind of link between the Petrarchan and the so-called Shakespearean sonnet; but Surrey used it for Nos. 9 and 10. See also Wyatt's three-rhyme sonnet, No. 43.

60. 33 The fierce lyon will hurt no yelden thinges. A commonplace, which Surrey uses at 208. 25, 33. As a further illustration, Mathew Grove in 1587 (Poems, ed. Grosart, p. 87) wrote of the lion, who neuer doth delight, with force

 To teare the sely beast y^e yeldeth to his might,
 But then as victor to returne away.

61. 10 (No. 85) The louer complaineth, ℣c. In every edition (No. [89] in B-I, sigs. I in BC, E in D-G, D8^v in H, D7-D7^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 51) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

61. 13 The enmy] Thenmy
 16 offerd] offered
 18 arrowes] arrowe

Koeppel (Anglia, XIII [1891], 78) thought the source of No. 85 was Mellin de Saint-Gelais's dizaine (Œuvres, 1719, pp. 130-131):

Pre's [sic] du sercueil d'une morte gisante
 Mort & Amour vindrent devant mes yeux,
 Amour me dit, la Mort t'est plus duisante:
 Car en mourant tu auras beaucoup mieux.
 Alors la Mort, qui regnoit en maints lieux,
 Pour me naurer, son fort arc enfonça:
 Mais de malheur sa flesche m'offença
 Au propre lieu où Amour mit la sienne,
 Et sans entrer seulement avança
 Le traict d'Amour en la playe ancienne.

It seems more likely that both Wyatt and Saint-Gelais followed some Italian original not yet discovered. Compare the note on No. 97 (68. 4).

13 The enemy of life, decayer of all kinde. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 139, this line is quoted as "Th'enēm̃e to life destroi er of all kinde" in illustration of a dactylic foot.

21 (No. 86) The louer reioiceth, ℣c. In every edition (No. [90] in B-I, sigs. I-I^v in BC, E-E^v in D-G, D8^v-E in H, D7^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 115-116) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

61. 27 but] nought but: ladies] dere
 30 to] Om.
 32 ouerturnde] overtorned
 62. 3 wondersly] wonderly
 14 soueraigne] sufferance

62.^f 16 (No. 87) The louter complayneth, &c. In every edition (No. [91] in B-I, sigs. I^v-I² in BC, E^v-E² in D-G, E-E^v in H, D7^v-D8 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 117-118) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

62. 21 And] For
 34 through] thorough
 63. 5 May chance] Perchaunce: witherd] wethered
 6 In] The: nightes] nyght
 13 beauty] beaultie
 18 both] boeth

No. 87 is a very pretty song, although the identical rhymes of the second stanza are in careless violation of the usual rhyme-scheme. In Nott's opinion "it is one of the most elegant amatory Odes in our language. It is as beautifully arranged in all its parts as any of the odes of Horace." The lute, he points out, was the instrument to which almost all the early love-songs were sung. In Nugae Antiquae (1775, II, 252-253; cf. also the editions of 1779, 1792, III, 286-287; 1804, II, 400-401) it is printed under the heading, "By the Earl of Rocheford. In Manuscript, dated 1564." But the evidence of that book is worthless. From it Horace Walpole turned the poem, "with few alterations, into the style of the present age," sending his version to Bishop Percy in 1792 (see J. B. Nichols, Illustrations of the Literary History of the Eighteenth Century, VIII [1858], 291-293).

In John Hall's The Courte of Vertue, 1565, M2^v-M4, No. 87 is moralized as "A song of the lute in the prayse of God, and disprays of Idolatrie" (see Nott's Wyatt, pp. 532-534), which begins:

My lute awake and prayse the lord,
 My heart and handes therto accord:
 Agreing as we haue begon,
 To syng out of gods holy worde.
 And so procede tyll we haue done.

The final stanza runs thus:

Lorde graunt vs to thy worde to cleaue,
 That no man other doe deceaue:
 And in that zeale that I begunne,
 Lauding our lorde God here I leaue,
 Be styll my lute my song is done.

Hall gives the music for his song on sig. N5^v.

62. 23-24 As to be heard where eare is none, Æc. Cf. Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, sig. Y^v: "As to bee hearde where eares are none, or Lead to be grauen in Marble stone, so harde it is to heare counsell of you, which may accorde with any good."

24 As lead to graue, Æc. "It would be more easy for lead, which is the softest of metals, to engrave characters on hard marble, than it is for me to make impression on her obdurate heart" (Nott, p. 545).

28-29 The rockes do not so cruelly, Æc. Cf. 56. 33-34 n.

63. 5-7 May chance thee lie witherd and olde, Æc. Probably suggested by Horace's Carmina, I. xxv:

Invicem moechos anus arrogantis flebis in solo levis angiportu, Thracio bacchante magis sub inter-lunia vento.

20 (No. 88) How by a kisse, Æc. In every edition (No. [92] in B-I, sigs. I2 in BC, E2 in D-G, E-E2 in H, D8-D8^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 52) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

63. 22 feat] seet
23 wondrous] wonderous

22-25 the Bee . . . To finde hony . . . the spider . . . To fetch poyson. A commonplace dear to the Elizabethans. Cf. Whetstone, in verses prefixed to Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, "In flowers fooles (like Spyders) poyson finde: The wise (as Bees) win hony from a weede"; Howell, H. His Deuises, 1581 (Poems, ed. Grosart, p. 171), "But venomde Spyders poyson take, where Bee doth honey finde"; the title-page of Davison's A Poetical Rhapsody, 1602-1621 (see A. H. Bullen's ed., I, lxi-lxiii); Martin Parker, Grandsire Graybeard, 1635, A3, "Be like the Bee, sucke out the sweet and good, The ranke refuse, let be the Spiders food."

30 (No. 89) The louer describeth his being, Æc. In every edition (No. [93] in B-I, sigs. I2-I2^v in BC, E2-E2^v in D-G, E2 in H, D8^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 288-289) prints the poem from MS. Additional 17492 (where Nott had failed to find it), with the following variants:

63. 33 Vnwarely so] So unwarely
34 vpon] apon
36 proper] Om.
38 into] unto
64. 3 both] boeth
5 fowle] byrde: fleeth] flyeth
6 vpon] on: beauty] beaulte
7 burnde] burnt
9 Inflamde] Enflamed
10 through out] therowt
11 quakyng] quakynd

- 16 doth hold] holdes: sore] so sore
 17 both] Om.
 18 do] doeth

Nott (p. 549) points out various borrowings from Petrarch in No. 89, a parallel between 63. 37-38 and Chaucer's Knight's Tale (A. 1096-1097), and an imitation in Turberville's Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 11-14.

63. 36 My hart was torne out of his proper place. The MS. and B+ agree in omitting proper, making the line have four stresses like 64. 3, 7, 11, 15, 19.

37-38 Thorow mine eye, &c. Cf. 33. 22-24; and Chaucer, The Knight's Tale, A. 1096-1097:

But I was hurt right now thurgh-out myn yē
 In-to myn herte.

64. 20 (No. 90) To his louer to loke vpon him. In every edition (No. [94] in B-I, sigs. 12^v in BC, E2^v in D-G, E2-E2^v in H, D8^v-E in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 58) prints the poem from MS. Additional 17492 (where Nott had failed to find it), with the following variants:

64. 22 loke] sight
 24 helpe] save
 25 doest] dost
 27 And] For: thy life may last] then maiste thou lyve
 28-29 Sins ton bye tothr doth lyve and fede thy herte,
 I with thye sight, thou also with my smerte.

Koeppel (Studien, pp. 72-73) finds the source of No. 90 in Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 125^v):

Viuo sol di mirarti hai dura impresa,
 Tu te nascondi, e conuerrá che io mora,
 Ma se saluar mi poi con poca spesa,
 À che pur fuggi, fuggi un che te adora,
 Che só, se al uiuer mio non dai difesa
 Io moro, & tu poi me non campi un hora,
 Che lun per laltro uiue, & pasce il core,
 Io del tuo aspetto, & tu del mio dolore.

30 (No. 91) The louer excuseth him of wordes, &c. In every edition (No. [95] in B-I, sigs. 13-13^v in BC, E3 E3^v in D G, E2^v-E3 in H, E-E^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 341-343) prints the poem from MS. Additional 17492 (where Nott had failed to find it), with the following variants:

65. 6 May] Do
 13 on] of 15 wordes] worde: you] ye
 16 And if I did] If I saide so 21 vnto] out of 22 as farre] afarre

65. 23 his] this 26 Encrease] Encrest
 32 from] fro
 33 you] ye
 35 my hart to] me to more 36 this] that: you] ye
 37, 38, 42, 43 You] Ye
 66. 3 Lea] Lya

No. 91 is a free translation of Petrarch, canzone in vita 15 (Rime, 206, pp. 202-204):

S' i' 'l dissi mai, ch' i' vegna in odio a quella del cui amor vivo et senza 'l qual morrei;
 s' i' 'l dissi, che' miei dí sian pochi et rei,
 et di vil signoria l'anima ancella;
 s' i' 'l dissi, contra me s'arme ogni stella,
 et dal mio lato sia
 paura et gelosia,
 et la nemica mia
 piú feroce ver me sempre et piú bella.

S' i' 'l dissi, Amor l' aurate sue quadrella spenda in me tutte et l' impiombate in lei;
 s' i' 'l dissi, cielo et terra, uomini et Dei mi sian contrari, et essa ogni or piú fella;
 s' i' 'l dissi, chi con sua cieca facella
 dritto a morte m' invia, pur come suol si stia,
 né mai piú dolce o pia
 ver me si mostri in atto od in favella.

S' i' 'l dissi mai, di quel ch' i' men vorrei piena trovi quest' aspra et breve via;
 s' i' 'l dissi, il fero ardor che mi desvia cresca in me quanto il fier ghiaccio in costei;
 s' i' 'l dissi, unqua non veggian li occhi mei sol chiaro o sua sorella, né donna né donzella,
 ma terribil procella
 qual Pharaone in perseguir li Hebrei.

S' i' 'l dissi, coi sospir, quant' io mai fei, sia pietà per me morta et cortesia;
 s' i' 'l dissi, il dir s' innaspri, che s' udia
 sí dolce allor che vinto mi rendei;
 s' i' 'l dissi, io spiaccia a quella ch' i' torrei, sol chiuso in fosca cella, dal dí che la mamella
 lasciai fin che si svella da me l' alma, adorar: forse el farei.

Ma s'io nol dissi, chi sí dolce apria meo cor a speme ne l'età novella, regg' anchor questa stanca navicella
 col governo di sua pietà natia, né diventi altra, ma pur qual solia
 quando piú non potei,
 che me stesso perdei,
 né piú perder devrei.
 Mal fa chi tanta fé sí tosto oblia.

I' nol dissi già mai, né dir poria per oro o per cittadi o per castella;
 vinca 'l ver dunque et si rimanga in sella,
 et vinta a terra caggia la bugia.
 Tu sai in me il tutto, Amor: s' ella ne spia, dinne quel che dir dei.
 I' beato direi
 tre volte et quattro et sei chi, devendo languir, si morí pria.

Per Rachel ò servito et non per Lia;
 né con altra saprei
 viver; et sosterrei,
 quando 'l ciel ne rappella,
 girmen con ella in sul carro de Helia.

Nott cites an imitation of Petrarch by Serafino (Opere, 1516, fol. 157^v), beginning,

Donna se io dixi mai contra tuo honore
 Te mostri à me crudel sempre a piú bella.

64. 33-65. 2-17 Perdy I sayd it not . . . heauen above. These lines are quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, pp. 221-222, to illustrate "Ecphronisis. or the Outcry," with the explanation that "Petrarche in a sonet which Sir Thomas Wyatt Englished excellently well," cast them "in this figure by way of imprecation and obtestation."

65. 20-21 such warre . . . Troye. Wyatt's substitution for Petrarch's Pharaoh and the Hebrews.

66. 6 (No. 92) Of such as had forsaken him. In every edition (No. [96] in B-I, sigs. I3^v in BC, E3^v in D-G, E3 in H, E^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 62) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), — where Nott had overlooked it, — with the following variants:

66. 7 Lux] Luckes: thy] your 9 mought you fall] might ye befall
 10 liked] lykt
 14 and very] so be but

The poem was probably written after the execution in July, 1540, of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, and before Wyatt was imprisoned in 1541. It expresses truthfully Wyatt's precarious situation.

66. 15 (No. 93) A description of such a one, &c. In every edition (No. [97] in B-I, sigs. 13^v in BC, E3^v in D-G, E3 in H, E^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 61) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), — where Nott had overlooked it, — with the following variants:

- 66. 17 wonderous] wonders
- 19 Of liuely loke] With gladsome cheare: repell] expell
- 20 right good grace] sober lookes
- 21 word] wordes
- 23 these perchance] thus might chaunce: tryde] tyde
- 24 with] the

In this poem Wyatt writes his only description, itself vague, of a woman. An imitation, signed "Jo[hn] Har[ington]," occurs in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 72^v):

A boy that should content me wondrous well should keep thease rules set down for his behoofe
 In fearing God all boys he should excell and lead a Lyfe unworthy just reproofe an upright gate a forhed smothe and playn a countenance good wth feet even set on ground a steady ey still hands and settled brayn an open ear to good enstructions bound a courteous tounge that talkth trew & playne
 An humble harte of guyle voyd evermore a constant mynde that will refuse no payn to purchase skyl the fruyt of virtuous lore and lern to know and know to doe the best and suche a boy should worthely passe y^e rest.

25 (No. 94) How vnpossible it is to finde, &c. In every edition (No. [98] in B-I, sigs. 13^v–14 in BC, E3^v–E4 in D-G, E3–E3^v in H, E^v–E2 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 28) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 66. 27 my] myn
- 28 ay my] myn
- 29 That leue it or wayt, it doeth me like pain
- 30 so] Om.
- 31 black shal it be] shalbe black
- 32 and] Om. vpon] in
- 33 backe returne] retorn back
- 34 his] Om.
- 67. 2 I] that I
- 4 against] again
- 5 if] if that
- 7 That] And

The rhymes sound rough to a modern ear, and the changes introduced by the editor of A render them but little more euphonious. Thus by inserting ay in line 28 he made the pronunciation uncertaine (necessary for rhyme) almost impossible. In the second edition (BC) further unauthorized and unsatisfactory changes appear.

The source of No. 94 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 37 (Rime, 57, p. 62):

Mie venture al venir son tarde et pigre,
la speme incerta, e 'l desir monta et cresce,
onde e 'l lassare et l' aspectar m' incresce;
et poi al partir son piú levi che tigre.
Lasso, le nevi fien tepide et nigre,
e 'l mar senz 'onda, et per l' alpe ogni pesce,
et corcherassi il sol là oltre ond' esce
d' un medesimo fonte Eufrate et Tigre:
prima ch' i' trovi in ciò pace né triegua,
o Amore o Madonna altr' uso impari;
che m' ànno congiurato a torto in contra:
et s' i' ò alcun dolce, è dopo tanti amari,
che per disdegno il gusto si dilegua.
Altri mai di lor gratie non m' in contra.

66. 29 That loue or wait it. The Italian 'l lassare and the MS. show that loue is a printer's error for leue (leave).

31-34 Alas the snow black shal it be, &c. Imitated by Turbervile, Tragical Tales [ca. 1574], 1587 (1837 reprint, p. 397):

Blacke shall you see the snow on mountains hie,
The fish shall feed vpon the barren sand,
The sea shal shrink, and leaue the Dolphins dry,
No plant shall prooue vpon the sencelesse land,
The Tems shal turne, the Sunne shal lose his light,
Ere I to thee become a faithlesse wight.

Cf. also the oath in Samuel Page's The Love of Amos and Laura, 1613 (appended to the 1628 edition of J. C.'s Alcilia, N₃^v):

And this I vow, Water shall turne to fire,
Huge massie mountaines to the clouds aspire;
The Sun shall leaue his course, the Moon her brightnes,
Night turne to day, and day shall lose his lightnes;
Fishes shall fly, birds swim, and Hare shall hunt
The Hound, which to pursue the Hare was wont:
Ayre, Earth, Fire, Water, all things which you view,
Shall change their natures, ere I turne from you.

But the idea, which is voiced by Virgil, Ovid, Seneca, Chaucer, and others, is a commonplace. In line 33 Wyatt substitutes the Thames for the Euphrates and Tigris of Petrarch.

67. 8 (No. 95) Of Loue, Fortune, and the louers minde. In every edition (No. [99] in B-I, sigs. I₄ in BC, E₄ in D-G, E₃^v in H, F₂ in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 29) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

67. 10 Fortune . . . do] and fortune and my mynde
 11 Eke that] Of that that: and] with: once] Om.
 12 Torment . . . that] Do torment me so that I 13 I hate and] Om.
 14 my] myn: while] Om.
 19 But daily yet the ill doeth chaunge into the wours
 20 While] And: halfe] the half: now] Om.
 21 brittle] brickell
 22 my ⁱ] myn

Both Miss Foxwell and Nott stigmatize this as one of Wyatt's poorest compositions. They are unable to forgive his putting four that's into line 11 (in A one that is omitted), and Nott is especially disturbed by the licentious rhymes.

The source of No. 95 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 85 (Rime, 124, p. 127):

Amor, fortuna et la mia mente schiva di quel che vede, e nel passato volta,
 m' affligon sí ch' io porto alcuna volta
 invidia a quei che son su l' altra riva.
 Amor mi strugge 'l cor, fortuna il priva
 d' ogni conforto: onde la mente stolta
 s' adira et piange; et cosí in pena molta sempre conven che combattendo viva.
 Né spero i dolci dí tornino indietro,
 ma pur di male in peggio quel ch' avanza;
 et di mio corso ò già passato 'l mezzo.
 Lasso, non di diamante, ma d' un vetro veggio di man cadermi ogni speranza, et tutt' i miei pensier romper nel mezzo.

67. 11 that . . . that that. Wyatt was fond of this word. As is pointed out in the foregoing collations, it occurs four times in the MS. version of this line. Cf. also 67. 32, where the MS. has two that's together, and note the meaning of so that in 67. 34.

13 I hate and envy them. Unintelligible with the omission of Petrarch's "che son su l' altra riva" — "those who are on the other shore," that is, dead.

24 (No. 96) The louer prayeth, &c. In every edition (No. [100] in B-I, sigs. I4-I4^v in BC, E4-E4^v in D-G, E3^v-E4 in H, E2-E2^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 30) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

67. 27 With those your Iyes, for to get peace and truyse
 28 Geuen] Profferd: my] myn
 29 In] Emong
 30 you] ye
 31 doth] doeth
 32 that ⁱ] Om.: that you] that that ye 34 you] I then: that] nor 36 calde] called

The source of No. 96 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 17 (Rime, 21, p. 15):

Mille fiate, o dolce mia guerrera, per aver co' begli occhi vostri pace,
v' aggio proferto il cor; ma voi non piace
mirar sí basso colla mente altera.
Et se di lui fors' altra donna spera,
vive in speranza debile et fallace:
mio, perché sdegno ciò ch' a voi dispiace,
esser non può già mai così com' era.
Or s' io lo scaccio, et e' non trova in voi ne l' exilio infelice alcun soccorso, né sa star sol, né gire ov' altri il chiama,
poria smarrire il suo natural corso:
che grave colpa fia d' ambeduo noi, et tanto piú de voi, quanto piú v' ama.

As Nott observes, Wyatt substitutes for the last line of this sonnet the last line of Petrarch's 169th sonetto in vita, "vostro, Donna, 'l peccato, et mio fia 'l danno," which he translates again at 68. 35.

67. 37 wander from his naturall kinde. That is, die.

68. 4 (No. 97) The louers life, &c. In every edition (No. [101] in B-I, sigs. I4^v in BC, E4^v in D-G, E4 in H, E2^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 31) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 68. 6 vnto] to
- 7 So] Om.
- 8 hye] of great height
- 10 haue] have full
- 11 doth] doeth
- 13 With] Om.: great] with great
- 14 boystous] boyseus
- 15 in] from
- 16 Wilde beastes] Cattell: fierce loue in me] and in me love
- 17 Vnmoueable] Immoveable: they] they are full
- 18 singing] that restles
- 19 passing through] that passe thorough

The source of No. 97 was long thought (cf. also 61. 10 n.) to be Mellin de Saint-Gelais's sonnet beginning, Voyant ces monts de veuë ainsi lointaine.

It is now known that both Saint-Gelais and Wyatt independently translated sonetto 3 in Sannazaro's Rime, part iii (1531 ed., fol. 49^v), a fact established by Arthur Tilley in The Modern Language Quarterly, v (1902), 149, and by L. E. Kastner in The Modern Language Review, III (1908), 273-274. The sonetto runs thus:

Simile a questi smisurati monti
E l' aspra uita mia colma di doglie
Alti son questi, & alte le mie uoglie
Di lagrime ambedui, questi di fonti

Lor han, di scogli, li superbi fronti
 In me duri pensier, l' amma [anima] coglie
 Lor son di pochi frutti, e molte foglie
 Io pochi effetti a gran speranza aggiunti
 Soffian sempre fra lor rabbiosi uenti
 In me graui sospiri, esito fanno
 In me se pasce Amor: in lor armenti
 Immobile son io, lor fermi stanno
 Lor, han d' uccelli, liquidi accenti
 Et io la mente, di superchio affanno.

According to Pierre Villey in La Revue d'Histoire Littéraire de la France, xxvii (1920), 538-547, the earliest French sonnet dates from 1536, a date that precludes French influence on the sonnets of Wyatt.

68. 6-9 Lyke unto these vnmesurable mountaines, &c. Quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 142, as an illustration of "Catalecticke and Acatalecticke" verse, "where in your first second and fourth verse, ye may find a sillable superfluous, and though in the first ye will seeme to helpe it, by drawing these three sillables, (īm mē sū) into a dactil, in the rest it can not be so excused, wherefore we must thinke he [Wyatt] did it of purpose, by the odde sillable to giue greater grace to his meetre."

20 (No. 98) Charging of his loue as vnpiteous, &c. In every edition (No. [102] in B-I, sigs. I4^v-K in BC, E4^v-E5 in D-G, E4-E4^v in H, E2^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 18) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

68. 22 amorous] amours: or if] Om.
 24 kindled] kyndelled
 26 distayned] depaynted
 27 if] els in 28 fear . . . so] nowe fere, nowe shame
 29 If] If a: alas] Om.
 31 or sighyng] and sighting
 34 stroy] destroye

Nott points out imitations of this poem in Turbervile's Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 68-69, and in Samuel Daniel's fifteenth sonnet to Delia (1592).

The source of No. 98 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 169 (Rime, 224, p. 220):

S' una fede amorosa, un cor non finto,
 un languir dolce, un desiar cortese;
 s' oneste voglie in gentil foco accese,
 un lungo error in cieco laberinto;
 se ne la fronte ogni penser depinto,
 od in voci interrotte a pena intese,
 or da paura or da vergogna offese;
 s' un pallor di viola et d' amor tinto;
 s' aver altrui piú caro che sé stesso;
 se sospirare et lagrimar mai sempre,

pascendosì di duol, d' ira et d' affanno;
 s' arder da lunge et agghiacciar da presso son le cagion ch' amando i' mi distempre:
 vostro, Donna, 'l peccato, et mio fia 'l danno.

An entirely different translation is preserved in a Harington MS. (Additional 36529, fol. 46), which runs thus:

If stable mynd and hart that cannot faine
 if sportles plaints that moues unfained desire if constant will that neuer ment retier if restles foote in maze that treads in vaine
 if face whear in eache thoght is painted plaine if broken voice that wantes words to require if now for shame and then for feare in paine if frawdles searche that fyndeth frutles gaine if to esteme you than my selfe more deere if endles sewte that wageles craueth hier if gref for foode and panges that pearce to neere if boorn farr of and freese amids the fire be cawse that I thus helpes tourne and tosse yo^{rs} is the fawlt and myne the giltles losse.

68. 22 If amorous fayth, &c. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 139, this line is quoted to illustrate the use of a dactylic foot.

27 my sparkelyng voyce. One should expect my speaking voice (with E+). Wyatt does not adequately translate Petrarch's sixth line.

33 burnyng a farre of, and fresyng nere. Cf. 3. 23 n.

69. 2 (No. 99) A renouncing of loue. In every edition (No. [103] in B-I, sigs. K in BC, E₅ in D-G, E₄^v in H, E₃ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 19) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

69. 9 Hath taught me to sett in tryfels no store
 10 But] And: forth thence] fourth 15 my] all my
 16 lyst] lusteth

3 Farewell, Loue, &c. Quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 144, as an example of "a verse wholly trochaick."

11 go trouble yonger hartes. Wyatt was about twenty-five in 1528, when (if Miss Foxwell's confusing statements at 11, 33 can be accepted) he left England for Calais.

17 (No. 100) The louer forsaketh his vnkinde loue. In every edition (No. [104] in B-I, sigs. K-K^v in BC, E₅-E₅^v in D-G, E₄^v-E₅ in H, E₃ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 20) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

69. 20 lo it to thee was] it was to the 21 that I should] to 22 receiue reward] be rewarded

69. 24 And] But: repayd after] payed under 25 there] Om.: nother] othr
 28 by] be: for] Om.
 29 pleaseth] please: defaut] a default
 30 departing] parting
 31 doth beleue] beleuith
 32 Partly torn out

The source of No. 100 is Serafino's strambotti (Opere, 1516, fols. 151-151^v) only the first of which is followed at all closely:

El cor ti diedi non che el tormentassi
 Ma che fosse da te ben conseruato,
 Seruo ti fui non che me abandonassi
 Ma che fosse da te remeritato,
 Contento fui che schiauo me acchatassi
 Ma non di tal moneta esser pagato,
 Hor poi che regna in te poca pietate
 Non ti spiaccia sio torno in libertate.

La donna di natura mai si satia
 Di dar effecto à ogni suo desyderio,
 E sempre ti stá sopra con audatia
 Del tuo martyr pigliando refrigerio,
 Quanto piú humil li uai tanto piú stratia
 Perfin che thá sepulto in cymiterio,
 Perche chi pone lo suo amor in femina
 Zappa nel acqua & nella harena semina.

69. 31-32 For, he, that doth beleue, &c. This "gem" is copied in MS. Rawlinson Poet. 108, fol. 7, along with 106. 20 ff. Line 32, "Ploweth in the water," etc. (a close translation of Serafino's "Zappa nel acqua," etc.), is a proverbial expression, numerous examples of which are cited in the Gorgeous Gallery, pp. 180-181.

33 (No. 101) The louer describeth, &c. In every edition (No. [105] in B-I, sigs. K^v in BC, E5^v in D-G, E5 in H, E3-E3^v in I). Although this poem occurs in the Egerton MS. from which Miss Foxwell takes many of her other texts, she prints it (I, 43) from A instead, introducing the following errors:

70. 8 colour] color
 9 and somthing] And something
 10 lust] luste: to 2] do 12 assinde] assynd
 17 wherfore] wherefore
 19 there] ther
 20 wheras] wher as 25 my] the
 28 god] God

This double sonnet — which has only slight variations from the so-called English, or Shakespearean, type (abba cddc effe gg) — was, like No. 116, probably written in prison during 1541.

70. 7 Do fele some force. Nott (Wyatt, pp. 543-544) suggests that force either is used in the extraordinary sense of "secret spring or cause which supplies them with water," or else is an error for source. The latter suggestion seems the more plausible.

15 no toole away the skar can race. Cf. 31. 7, 78. 11, 80. 19, and The Firste Parte of Churchyardes Chipptes, 1575 (Collier's reprint, p. 117), "And though some time the surgeon salve did finde To heale the wound (the skarre remaind behinde." See also John Oldham's Satyrs upon the Jesuits, 1679 (Satyre III, "Loyala's Will," 1682 ed., p. 70), "A Wound, though cur'd, yet leaves behind a Scar."

30 (No. 102) The louer lamentes the death, &c. In every edition (No. [106] in B-I, sigs. K^v-K² in BC, E₅^v-E₆ in D-G, E₅-E₅^v in H, E₃^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 41) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), with the following variants:

70. 39 Daily] Dearlye
71. 3 carefull] wofull

The source of No. 102 is Petrarch, sonetto in morte 2 (Rime, 269, p. 261):

Rotta è l' alta colonna e 'l verde lauro che facean ombra al mio stanco pensiero;
perduto ò quel che ritrovar non spero
dal borrea a l' austro o dal mar indo al mauro.
Tolto m' ài, morte, il mio doppio thesauro che mi fea viver lieto et gire altero;
et ristorar nol po terra né impero,
né gemma oriental, né forza d' auro.
Ma se consentimento è di destino, che posso io più se no aver l' alma trista,
humidi gli occhi sempre e 'l viso chino?
O! nostra vita ch' è sí bella in vista,
com' perde agevolmente in un matino quel che 'n molti anni a gran pena s' acquista!

Wyatt substituted an original final tercet for Petrarch's last three lines. A closer translation of the entire sonnet is to be found in a Harington MS. (Additional 36529, fol. 47):

The precius piller perisht is and rent
That contranste lief and cherd the werid mind
Like of my losse no age shall euer find Thoghe the wolrds [sic] eyes a seking all wais went Deathe hathe be refte, the worlds cheef glory heere
Who made the mind w lief the more content
And now alas no gold no land Empeere

Nor gift so great can that restore is spent
 But if the cawse proseed from th' uper place
 What can I more then morn that ame constrained
 W wofull tears to waill that wofull case
 O britell lief w face so faire I stained
 How easly lost th' art in a moment space
 That many yeares w muche a doo a tained.

70. 32 The piller perisht is wherto I lent. Nearly all commentators see in this line — borrowed though it is from Petrarch — a reference to the execution of Cromwell, Earl of Essex, the lord great chamberlain, on July 28, 1540.

71. 7 (No. 103) The louer sendeth sighes, &c. In every edition (No. [107] in B-I, sigs. K2 in BC, E6 in D-G, E5^v in H, E4 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 9) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

71. 11 that] Om.
 12 be] may be: yet] Om.
 13 end my wofull] be ende of my 17 fulfil that I desire] Om.
 21 complaint] plaint
 22 from] oute of: disceiuably doth] doeth straynably: MS. adds:
 Goo, burning sighes

As in the case of Nos. 69 and 70, the editor of A changed Wyatt's rondeau to a "sonnet" with (apparently) two rhymes.

The source of No. 103 is Petrarch, sonetto in vita 102 (Rime, 153, pp. 164-165):

Ite, caldi sospiri, al freddo core;
 rompete il ghiaccio che pietà contende;
 et se prego mortale al ciel s' intende,
 morte o mercé sia fine al mio dolore.
 Ite, dolci penser, parlando fore di quello ove 'l bel guardo non se stende:
 se pur sua asprezza o mia stella n' offende,
 sarei fuor di speranza et fuor d' errore.
 Dir se po ben per voi, non forse a pieno,
 che 'l nostro stato è inquieto et fosco,
 sí come 'l suo pacifico et sereno.
 Gite securi omai, ch' Amor ven vosco:
 et ria fortuna po ben venir meno,
 s' ai segni del mio sol l'aere conosco.

Wyatt translates (71. 9-13) lines 1-4 of Petrarch's sonnet but thereafter ignores it.

9-10 Go burning sighes, &c. Turberville, in his Tragical Tales [ca. 1574], 1587 (1837 reprint, p. 297), has a poem beginning, "Go burning sighes, and pierce the frozen skie." Melbancke, in Philotimus, 1583, Y2, likewise borrows from Wyatt (combining 132. 8 in his passage): "Goe burning sighes vnto their frozen hartes, goe breake the yse with pitties painefull dartes; and when they are within thy reach, giue them the cup of bitter sweete, to pledg their mortall foe."

71. 23 (No. 104) Complaint of the absence, &c. In every edition (No. [108] in B-I, sigs. K2-K3^v in BC, E6-E7^v in D-G, E5^v-E7 in H, E4-E5 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 180-188) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

71. 30 stayed] staide
 31 sored] sory
 32 wight] spryte
 33 depriued] depryffd: desired] desyerd 34 more] most
 72. 2 mayst once] ons maist
 4 Thus in this] This is the: as yet it] that yet
 5 But] And
 6 se . . . do] perceyve thowrs how thei
 8 the East] thest: shewes] doth show
 11 East²] thest
 13 weight] whaite: bodies] body
 14 vpon] apon
 15 desired] desird
 17 me . . . I] my whaite that it
 22 enioyed] enioyd
 23 when] wher
 24 And] But 25 and¹] in
 27 I never saw the thing that myght my faythfull hert delyght 29 the³] and 30 shene] shining: for] Om.
 31 darked] darke
 35 sprong] sprang
 40 transplendant] transparant
 41 colours] colour
 42 the] Om.
 43 feares] fiers
 44 sheweth] shewth
 73. 2 eke] that
 3 These] Thes new: most . . . so] wherein most men
 6 for] me
 7 tassay] for to assay
 8 my] myn
 10 wyll] shall 11 toucheth] towches
 13 shall] do
 15 my] myn
 17 surmount] sormount
 19 doe] doth
 22 gaue . . . erst] did me gyve the courtese gyfft that such 24 this] that
 25 chere] clere

73. 27 forst] dryven
 35 ragged] craggdy
 37 And] But
 40 And . . . dye] Wherby I fere, and yet I trust
 41 dwelles] lyves
 42 There] Where: sometime, may] may sometyne
 74. 2 to] thou
 3 grief] dred: serue] sterue
 6 And if] If that: waighthe] whayte: the^a] this

No. 104 is translated from Petrarch, canzone in vita 3 (Rime, 37, pp. 38-42), as is pointed out in the notes below.

71. 25-72. 2-5 So feble is the threde . . . by trust, am trayned. From Petrarch's first stanza,

Sí è debile il filo a cui s' attene la gravosa mia vita,
 che s' altri non l' aita,
 ella fia tosto di suo corso a riva:
 però che dopo l' empia dipartita che dal dolce mio bene feci, sol una spene
 è stato in fin a qui cagion ch' io viva;
 dicendo: Perché priva
 sia de l' amata vista,
 mantienti, anima trista.
 Che sai s' a miglior tempo ancho ritorni?
 et a piú lieti giorni?
 o se 'l perduto ben mai si racquista?
 Questa speranza mi sostenne un tempo:
 or vien mancando, et troppo in lei m' attempo.

72. 6-19 The tyme doth flete . . . litle doth remain. From Petrarch's second stanza,

Il tempo passa, et l' ore son sí pronte
 a fornire il viaggio, ch' assai spacio non aggio
 pur a pensar com' io corro a la morte.
 A pena spunta in oriente un raggio di sol, ch' a l' altro monte de l' adverso orizzonte
 giunto il vedrai per vie lunghe et distorte.
 Le vite son sí corte,
 sí gravi i corpi et frali
 degli uomini mortali, che quando io mi ritrovo dal bel viso
 cotanto esser diviso,
 col desio non possendo mover l' ali,
 poco m' avanza del conforto usato;
 né so quant' io mi viva in questo stato.

72. 20-33 Eche place . . . my wealth doth bate. From Petrarch's third stanza,

Ogni loco m' atrista, ov' io non veggio
 quei begli occhi soavi
 che portaron le chiavi
 de' miei dolci pensier, mentre a Dio piacque.
 Et perché 'l duro exilio piú m' aggravi,
 s' io dormo o vado o seggio,
 altro già mai non chiegio,
 et ciò ch' i' vidi dopo lor mi spiacque.
 Quante montagne et acque,
 quanto mar, quanti fiumi
 m' ascondon que' duo lumi, che quasi un bel sereno a mezzo 'l die
 fer le tenebre mie,
 a ciò che 'l rimembrar piú mi consumi,
 et quanto era mia vita allor gioiosa,
 m' insemi la presente aspra et noiosa!

34-73. 2 If such record . . . seke redresse. From Petrarch's fourth stanza,

Lasso, se ragionando si rinfresca quel ardente desio
 che nacque il giorno ch'io lassai di me la miglior parte a dietro, et s' Amor se ne va per lungo oblio, chi mi conduce a l' esca
 onde 'l mio dolor cresca?
 Et perché pria, tacendo, non m' impetro?
 Certo, cristallo o vetro non mostrò mai di fore
 nascosto altro colore, che l' alma sconsolata assai non mostri
 piú chiari i pensier nostri, et la fera dolcezza ch' è nel core,
 per gli occhi, che di sempre pianger vaghi cercan dí et nocte pur chi gle n' appaghi.

73. 2-16 and eke . . . fele the smart. From Petrarch's fifth stanza,

Novo piacer che negli umani ingegni spesse volte si trova d'amar qual cosa nova,
 piú folta schiera di sospiri accoglia!
 Et io son un di quei che 'l pianger giova;
 et par ben ch' io m' ingegni che di lagrime pregni
 sien gli occhi miei, sí come 'l cor di doglia.
 Et perché a ciò m' invoglia
 ragionar de' begli occhi (né cosa è che mi tocchi o sentir mi si faccia cosí a dentro),

corro spesso et rientro
 colà donde piú largo il duol trabocchi, et sien col cor punite ambe le luci ch' a la strada d' Amor mi furon duci.

73. 12 nought but the case, or skin. Nott points out that this phrase is not in canzone 3 but occurs elsewhere in Petrarch, and traces it ultimately to Dante, Paradiso, I. 19-21:

Entra nel petto mio, e spira tue;
 Sì come quando Marsia traesti
 Della vagina delle membra sue.

17-28 The crisped golde . . . trust renews. From Petrarch's sixth stanza,

Le treccie d' or, che devrien fare il sole
 d' invidia molta ir pieno,
 e 'l bel guardo sereno,
 ove i raggi d' Amor sí caldi sono che mi fanno anzi tempo venir meno,
 et l' accorte parole,
 rade nel mondo o sole,
 che mi fer già di sé cortese dono,
 mi son tolte; et perdono
 piú lieve ogni altra offesa, che l' essermi contesa
 quella benigna angelica salute, che 'l mio cor a vertute
 destar solea con una voglia accesa:
 tal ch' io non penso udir cosa già mai che mi conforte ad altro ch'a trar guai.

18 streames of pleasant starres. Glances of her eyes.

21-23 The wyse and pleasant talk, &c. Nott explains thus: "That charm of conversation so seldom to be met with, perhaps never in any one but herself, which she was wont courteously to indulge me with, is now taken from me."

29-42 And yet . . . may take repose. From Petrarch's seventh stanza,

Et per pianger anchor con piú diletto, le man bianche sottili
 et le braccia gentili,
 et gli atti suoi soavemente alteri,
 e i dolci sdegni alteramente humili,
 e 'l bel giovenil petto,
 torre d' alto intellecto,
 mi celan questi luoghi alpestri e ferì;
 et non so s' io mi sperì
 vederla anzi ch' io mora;
 però ch' ad ora ad ora
 s' erge la speme et poi non sa star ferma;
 ma ricadendo afferma

di mai non veder lei che 'l ciel honora, ov' alberga honestate et cortesia, et dov' io prego che 'l mio albergo sia.

73. 30-31 y firmly do embrace Me from my self. From Horace's Carmina, iv. 13 (as Nott points out), "Quae me surpuerat mihi."

32 The swete disdaines, &c. Nott asserts that this phrase is added from Petrarch, sonetto in morte 86 (Rime, 351, p. 329), "Dolci durezza et placide repulse."

43-74. 2-6 My song . . . to her flee. Somewhat changed from Petrarch's final stanza,

Canzon, s' al dolce loco la Donna nostra vedi, credo ben che tu credi ch' ella ti porgerà la bella mano
 ond' io son sì lontano.
 Non la tocchar; ma reverente ai piedi le di' ch' io sarò là tosto ch' io possa, o spirto ignudo od uom di carne et d' ossa.

74. 7 (No. 105) The louer blameth his loue, &c. In every edition (No. [109] in B-I, sigs. K3^v in BC, E7^v in D-G, E7-E7^v in H, E5-E5^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 385) reprints the poem from A, misprinting madame (line 10) as Madame, gredy (line 15) as greedy.

22 (No. 106) The louer curseth the tyme, &c. In every edition (No. [110] in B-I, sigs. K3^v-K4 in BC, E7^v-E8 in D-G, E7^v in H, E5^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 378) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

74. 29 heare] hear
 75. 4 memorie] memory
 6 finde] find: geat] get
 7 foote] fote

Another version appears under the title of "He repenteth his folly," with the signature W. H. (William Hunnis), in the first (1576), but no later, edition of the Paradise, pp. 65-66. That version omits 74. 30-75. 2, but inserts a new stanza after 75. 14:

Thē should not I suche cause haue fouūd, to wish this mōstrus sight to se,
 Ne thou alas that madest the wounde, should not deny me remedy,
 Then should one will in bothe remain, to graūt one hart whiche now is twaine.

For verbal variants between the two texts see the Paradise, p. 230.

75. 15 (No. 107) The louer determineth, &c. In every edition (No. [111] in B-I, sigs. K4-K4^v in BC, E8-E8^v in D-G, E7^v-E8 in H, E6 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 372-373) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

75. 31 tyll] till
 33 my selfe] myself
 37 reward] rewarde

76. 4 a loft] aloft
7 my self] myself

75. 22 To serue, and suffer patiently. This refrain may come (as Miss Foxwell suggests) from Seneca's phrase in De Moribus, "Dolor patientia vincitur."

76. 15 (No. 108) The louer suspected, &c. In every edition (No. [112] in B-I, sigs. K4^v in BC, E8^v in D-G, F8-E8^v in H, E6^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 379) reprints the poem from A, misprinting deserued (line 27) as deserved, god (line 28) as God. Possibly the lines refer to the false charges pressed against Wyatt after the execution of Cromwell: the title (manufactured by the printer, not by Wyatt) is obviously misleading.

29 (No. 109) The louer complaineth, &c. In every edition (No. [113] in B-I, sigs. K4^v-L in BC, E8^v-F in D-H, E6^v-E7 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 383-384) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

76. 31 ff. Speech-tags spelled out in full
32 inflamde] inflamed 34 if] of
77. 2 thy self] thyself
7 god] God
13 hart] hert
15 drieues] drives
22 should] would
23 An hart] A hert
24 doute] doubt

This is a very pretty poem in which a sensual subject is handled with remarkable restraint and purity. Line 28 is Wyatt's comment, not the lover's.

77. 8 thy grief is mine. Read the grief with B+.

29 (No. 110) why loue is blinde. In every edition (No. [114] in B-I, sigs. L in BC, F in D-H, E7 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 57) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the variant reading (line 30) chase for chose. Somewhat unreasonably she thinks it "records a deep attachment for some unknown friend, possibly Mary, Duchess of Richmond."

38 (No. 111) To his vnkinde loue. In every edition (No. [115] in B-I, sigs. L-L^v in BC, F-F^v in D-G, F in H, E7 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 178-179) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

78. 6 flow] swell
11 cureles] curid
13, 14 doest] dost
18 beloued] belowffd

She overlooks its appearance in A-I.

78. 13-14 thou doest oppresse. Oppresse thou doest. An interesting example of the rhetorical device chiasmus. See another example at 100. 19.

16 Fierce Tigre, fell, hard rock. Cf. 54.35-55. 2-4 n.

78. 22 (No. 112) The louer blameth, &c. In every edition (No. [116] in B-I, sigs. L^v in BC, F^v in D-H, E7^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 53) prints the poem from Wyatt's autograph copy in MS. Egerton 2711 (the only variant is I sought for thou sekest [line 26] unless, as is not likely, ledst [cf. leadst, line 27] is the past tense), and also gives a somewhat clearer, if apparently unauthorized, version from MS. Additional 17492:

Cruell desire my master and my foo,
Thy self so chaingid. [sic] for shame how maist thou see.
Whom I have sought dothe chase me to and froo:
Whom thou didst rule nowe rulith the and me;
What right is to rule thy subjectes soo?
And to be ruled by mutability?
Lo wherebye the I doubted to have blame,
Even now bye dred againe I doubt the same.

She suggests that it was written in imitation of Maurice Sève's dizaine 33 (Délie, 1544, ed. Eugène Parturier, pp. 29-30) beginning, "Tant est Nature en volonté puissante"; but the suggestion is hard to credit.

32 (No. 113) The louer complayneth his estate. In every edition (No. [117] in B-I, sigs. L^v-L2 in BC, F^v-F2 in D-H, E7^v-E8 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 380-381) reprints the poem from A, misprinting my self (79. 5) as myself, hath (line 8) as have, pensif (line 26) as pensiv.

79. 29 (No. 114) Against hourders of money. In every edition (No. [124] in B-I, sigs. L3^v in BC, F3^v in D-G, F3 in H, F in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 60) reprints the poem from A.

The original epigram on which the poem is based was long ascribed to Antipater or Statilius Flaccus but now more commonly to Plato: "χρυσὸν ἀνὴρ εὐρὼν ἔλιπεν βρόχον· αὐτὰρ ὁ χρυσὸν ὄν λιπεν οὐχ εὐρὼν ἦψεν ὄν εὐρε βρόχον." It was translated twice by Ausonius (Epigrammata, xxii, xxiii), whence Wyatt perhaps took his version. Many other English translations have been made. For example, Timothy Kendall, in Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, G4 (Spenser Society ed., p. 119), included an epigram

Translated out of twoo Greeke authors: Plato and Scatilius.

A Wretched caitiffe, in dispaire, went foorth with throtlyng corde
To make awaie hymself: by hap
he founde a golden hoarde:
He ioyfull twas his happie chaunce,
this hidden hoarde to finde:
Forsooke his purpose, tooke the gold and left the rope behinde.
The owner when he came, and sawe from thence his ruddocks refte:
For sorrowe hunge hym self with rope,
that there behinde was lefte.

Coleridge (Complete Poetical Works, ed. E. H. Coleridge, II [1912], 971) in 1812 wrote the following translation:

Jack finding gold left a rope on the ground:
Bill missing his gold used the rope which he found.

See also the versions by Shelley ("A Man who was about to hang himself") and Courthope (A History of English Poetry, II, 58 n.), and those in Latin, Italian, French, German (as well as Greek and English) included in Henry Wellesley's Anthologia Polyglotta (1849), pp. 440-442. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, E3^v, also tells the story, probably borrowing from Wyatt: "One goinge about his busines with an haulter in his hand, chaunced to finde monye which a miser had hid, which money he tooke, aud [sic] layde downe the haulter in the place: the olde huddle missing his monye at his next visitation, toke the haulter and hanged himselfe."

79. 38 (No. 115) Discription of a gonne. In every edition (No. [125] in B-I, sigs. L3^v in BC, F3^v in D-H, F in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 58) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711.

No. 115 is translated from the Latin of Pandulpho (flourished ca. 1500), with its final two lines original. Nott (Wyatt, p. cxxvii) quotes the Latin from Pandulpho's apologue "Bombarda," appended to Colloquia duo elegantissima, Basle, 1547, a book inaccessible to me:

Vulcanus genuit; peperit Natura; Minerva
Edocuit; Nutrix Ars fuit, atque dies.
Vis mea de Nihilo est; tria dant mihi corpora pastum.
Sunt nati, Strages, Ira, Ruina, Frigor.
Dic, Hospes, qui sum! Num terræ, an bellua ponti?
An neutrum! aut quo sim facta, vel orta modo.

A slightly different version, which appears along with Wyatt's translation in one of the MSS., is given by Miss Foxwell (II, 73).

80. 10 (No. 116) wiat being in prison, to Brian. In every edition (No. [126] in B-I, sigs. L4 in BC, F4 in D-G, F3^v in H, F^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 62) prints the poem from MS. Harleian 78, with the following variants:

80. 12 my ²] Om.
13 would . . . craue] suche musycke wolde crave
14 it] Om.
15 Pore innocence] Innocencie
16 iudge I] I judge
17 assaultes] assaulted
18 am I] I am

It was probably written during Wyatt's imprisonment, January 17-March 21, 1541. Like No. 126, it is addressed to Sir Francis Bryan.

20 (No. 117) Of dissembling wordes. In every edition (No. [127] in B-I, sigs. L4 in BC, F4 in D-G, F3^v in H, F^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 382) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

[210]

80. 21 wer] were 22 ynough] enough
 26 acord] accord

80. 27 (No. 118) Of the meane and sure estate. In every edition (No. [128] in B-I, sigs. L₄ in BC, F₄ in D-G, F₃^v-F₄ in H, F^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 366) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), with the following variants:

80. 29 whele] toppe
 30 hye astate] courtes estates
 31 And use me quyet without lett or stoppe
 32 the wanton toyes] such brackishe joyes
 81. 2 my . . . slowly] so lett my dayes forthe
 3 And] That: past] done
 4 Let me dye olde] I may dye aged
 5-6 For hym death greep' [?] the right hard by the crophe.
 That is moche knownen of other; and of himself, alas,
 7 He dyeth] Doth dye

Chalmers (The Works of the English Poets, II [1810], 385) noted that No. 118 is translated from Seneca's Thyestes (II. 391-403):

Stet quicunque volet potens
 Aulæ culmine lubrico:
 Me dulcis saturet quies.
 Obscuro positus loco,
 Leni perfruar otio.
 Nullis nota Quiritibus
 Aetas per tacitum fluat.
 Sic cum transierint mei
 Nullo cum strepitu dies
 Plebeius moriar senex,
 Illi mors gravis incubat,
 Qui notus nimis omnibus.
 Ignotus moritur sibi.

For other poems on the "low estate" see Nos. 124, 170, 191, 200.

81. 8 (No. 119) The courtiers life. In every edition (No. [129] in B-I, sigs. L₄-L₄^v in BC, F₄-F₄^v in D-G, F₄ in H, F^v-F₂ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 61) reprints the poem from A.

16 (No. 120) Of disapointed purpose by negligence. In every edition (No. [130] in B-I, sigs. L₄^v in BC, F₄^v in D-G, F₄ in H, F₂ in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 55) reprints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

81. 21 aduance] avaunce
 22 Ne could I] Could not it

The opening lines were suggested by sonetto 11 of Petrarch's "sonetti sopra varj argomenti" (Rime, 103, p. 106):

Vinse Hanibal, et non seppe usar poi ben la vittoriosa sua ventura:
però, signor mio caro, aggate cura che similmente non avegna a voi.

They are translated in a Harington MS. (Additional 36529, fol. 47):

Haniball woon and after cold not sew
The victrus lote that happly to him fell
Therfore deer sire take heed and fore see well
That like mischance doo not chance unto you.

The mention of Monzon in line 25 indicates that the epigram was written about 1537, when Wyatt was ambassador to Emperor Charles V.

81. 26 (No. 121) Of his returne from Spaine. In every edition (No. [131] in B-I, sigs. L4^v in BC, F4^v in D-G, F4 in H, F2 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 57) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 81. 28 tried] tryd
- 29 For . . . saile] With spurr and sayle for I
- 30 sheweth] showth
- 31 that] which
- 32 that leanes] doth lend
- 33 I seke] alone
- 34 Ioue] love: windes] winges

It was written to celebrate Wyatt's return to England from Spain in 1539. Drayton quotes the poem in the notes to Surrey's epistle to Geraldine in Englands Heroicall Epistles, 1598, N4, remarking that it is an "excellent Epigram, which as I iudge either to bee done by the said Earle [of Surrey] or Sir Frauncis Brian . . . which as it seemes to me was compiled at the Authors being in Spaine."

27-28 Tagus . . . Turnes vp the graines of gold. From Boethius (probably Chaucer's translation), III, meter x.

31 towne that Brutus sought by dreames. New Troy, or London, founded by Brutus, the great-grandson of Aeneas (according to the popular legend).

82. 2 (No. 122) Of sodaine trustyng. In every edition (No. [132] in B-I, sigs. L4^v in BC, F4^v in D-G, F4-F4^v in H, F2 in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 340) prints the poem from MS. Additional 17492 (where Nott had overlooked it), with the variant reading of the untrue (line 5) for thuntrue.

10 (No. 123) Of the mother that eat her childe, &c. In every edition (No. [133] in B-I, sigs. M in BC, F5 in D-G, F4^v in H, F2-F2^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 55) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 82. 13 whiles motherly] whilst moderately
- 15 The mother sayth] Sayth thebrew moder
- 18 were] wert

Josephus (The Wars of the Jews, vi. iii. 4, in his Works, ed. Whiston, II [1825], 465-466) tells how Mary, daughter of Eleazer, killed her son, and boiled and ate his body, during the siege of Jerusalem in the year 70 A.D.

82. 21 (No. 124) Of the meane and sure estate, &c. In every edition (No. [134] in B-I, sigs. M-M2^v in BC, F5-F6^v in D-G, F4^v-F6 in H, F2^v-F3^v in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 141-146) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

82. 23 do] did
 24 sing] sang sometyne: made] Om.: feldishe] feld
 25 forbicause] fobicause [?]
 26 se] seke
 27 greuous] much
 83. 2 both] boeth
 3 while] whilest
 4 when her] wher
 11, 20, 25 doth] doeth
 12 labours] laboureth
 13, 17 fedes] fedeth
 15 of] of the
 17 boyle meat] boyled: bake meat] bacon meet: on] Om.
 18 therfore no whit of] therof neither 21 makes she] she maketh
 22 goes] goeth
 24 there] Om.
 27 scrapes] scrapeth
 33 towne] townyssh
 40 Amid] Amyddes
 42 lookt] loke
 84. 3 the] tho
 7 townemouse] towney mowse: whither] whether
 8 The other] Thothr
 9 wisht] wyshed
 11 The heauen] Thevyn
 16 forgot] forgotten
 21 blindes] blynde
 24, 33, 39 you] ye
 26 with ¹] Om.
 30, 31 doth] doeth
 32 is it] it is 34 for] Om.: on ¹] upon: on ²] Om.
 37 Nor] Ne: set] se
 43 assinde] assigned
 85. 5 stickyng] sitting
 9 Poins] Poyngz
 11 his] his high
 13 doth] doeth

The poem is an imitation of the sixth satire of Horace's second book, in which a reference to the fable of the Town Mouse and the Country Mouse is introduced. Possibly Wyatt also knew the rendition of this fable written by Robert Henryson and published before 1500. The tone throughout and many of the actual phrases are Chaucerian. Of John Poyntz, to whom these terza-rima stanzas (as well as No. 125) are addressed, little is known. He belonged, however, to an Essex family of considerable distinction, and was related to Sir Francis Poyntz († 1528) and Sir Anthony Poyntz († 1533), who became important as diplomats. Nott (Wyatt, pp. lxxxiii-lxxxiv) gives some account of him, pointing out that his portrait by Holbein shows him "to have had a remarkably intelligent and expressive countenance," while Miss Foxwell (II, 102) adds that Holbein painted him in "a scholar's garb."

83. 43 two stemyng eyes. The adjective was no doubt suggested by the description of the Monk in the Prologue to The Canterbury Tales (A. 201-202):

His eyen stepe, and rollinge in his heed,
That stemed as a forneys of a leed.

Cf. also John Studley's Medea, act III (Seneca His Tenne Tragedies, 1581, fol. 128; see also the uses on fols. 153^v, 192^v), "Her firy, scowling, steaming Eyes"; and Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, IV, "a cat in seing with her steeming eies."

84. 16 her power, surety and rest. That is, her poor (in poverty) security and ease. Wyatt is contrasting security in poverty and insecurity in wealth.

25-27 No, no, although thy head, &c. Nott (p. 561) thinks these lines are "elegantly imitated" from Horace (Carmina, II. 16).

85. 3-4 seke no more out of thy selfe to finde, &c. "Cease to look for happiness outside of yourself. You are mad if you do." Cf. Persius, satire I. 7, "nec te quaesiveris extra" (Nott).

8 depe your selfe in trauell more and more. Perhaps "enter more deeply into the labor of literary and religious study." Nott thinks the idea may have come from Dante's Paradiso, I. 8-9:

Nostro intelletto sì profonda tanto,
Che retro la memoria non può ire.

11 to the great God, &c. Nott calls this whole passage "a beautiful imitation of the following spirited lines of Persius, in his third Satire" (lines 35-38):

Magne Pater Divum, saevos punire tyrannos
Haud alia ratione velis, cum dira libido
Moverit ingenium, ferventi tincta veneno,
Virtutem videant intabescantque relictæ.

19 (No. 125) Of the Courtiers life, &c. In every edition (No. [135] in B-I, sigs. M2^v-M3^v in BC, F6^v-F7^v in D-G, F6-F7^v in H, F4-F5 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 135-140) prints the poem from various MSS. (since Egerton 2711, which she follows so far as it goes, is incomplete), with the following variants:

85. 22 causes] cause
 27 because] for bicawse: or] and 28 whom fortune here] to whome fortune
 33 inward doth] doeth inward
 34 of glory that] that of glory
 39 my] me
 40 truth] trothe
 41 nice] vice
86. 2 set] settes
 5 such] do so grete
 8 my] Om.
 9 And] Nor 11 as] Om.
 12 and] or 13 Call] And call: lucre] proffet
 16 that] Om.
 20 doth] do
 21 where] when 22 wealth] wele
 24 in] Om.
 25 coward] cowardes
 27 dieth] dythe
 28 Alexander] Alessaundre
 30 Topas] Thopias
 33 laughes] laugheth
 34 frownes] frowneth
 35 both] boeth
 39 to] of
 41 With] With the: ay to cloke] to cloke alwaye
87. 5 faire] Om.
 6 curties] courtois
 7 Affirme] And say
 12 rechlesse vnto ech] rekles to every 20 and] and to 21 wether] weder
 23, 26 doth] doeth
 26 Saue] Sauf
 27 ordred] ordered
 28 both] boeth
 30 savry] saffry: those] the 33 that] than [?]
 34 lettes] letteth
 35 takes] taketh: wittes] wit
 36 such . . . beastes] they beestes do so 37 truth] Christe
 38 of some] at Rome
 40 I am here] here I ame
 41 Among] Emong
 42 myne owne Iohn] my: to] for to

The poem is paraphrased from Luigi Alamanni's tenth satire, "A Thommaso Sertini" (Opere Toscane, 1532, pp. 400-404):

Io ui dirò poi che d' udir ui cale
 Thommaso mio gentil, perch' amo, & colo
 Piu di tutti altri il lito Prouenzale.
 Et perche qui così pouero & solo,
 Piu tosto che 'l seguir Signiori & Regi
 Viuo temprando 'l mio infinito duolo.
 Ne cio mi uien perch' io tra me dispregi
 Quei, ch' han dalla Fortuna in mano il freno
 Di noi, per sangue, & per ricchezze egregi.
 Ma ben' è uer ch' assai gli estimo meno
 Che 'l uulgo, & quei ch' à cio ch' appar di fuore
 Guardan, senza ueder che chiugga il seno.
 Non dico gia che non mi scaldi amore
 Talhor di gloria, ch' io non uo mentire
 Con chi biasmando honor, sol cerca honore.
 Ma con qual pie potrei color seguire
 Che 'l mondo pregia; ch' io non so quell' arte
 Di chi le scale altrui conuien salire.
 Io non saprei Sertin porre in disparte
 La uerità, colui lodando ogni hora
 Che con piu danno altrui dal ben si parte.
 Non saprei reuerir chi soli adora
 Venere & Bacco, ne tacer saprei
 Di quei che 'l uulgo falsamente honora.
 Non saprei piu ch' à gli immortali Dei
 Rendere honor con le ginocchia inchine
 À piu ingiusti che sian, fallaci, & rei.
 Non saprei nel parlar courir le spine
 Con simulati fior, nell' opre hauendo
 Mele al principio, & tristo assentio al fine.
 Non saprei no, doue 'l contrario intendo
 I maluagi consigli usar per buoni,
 Dauanti al uero honor l' util ponendo.
 Non trouare ad ogni hor false cagioni
 Per abbassare i giusti, alzando i prauì
 D' auaritia, & di 'nuidia hauendo sproni.
 Non saprei dar de miei pensier le chiaui
 All' ambition, che mi portasse in alto
 Alla fucina delle colpe graui.
 Non saprei 'l core hauer di freddo sinalto
 Contro à pietà, talhor nocendo à tale,
 Ch' io piu di tutti nella mente esalto,
 Non di loda honorar chiara immortale
 Cesare & Sylla, condannando à torto
 Bruto, & la schiera che piu d' altra uale.
 Non saprei camminar nel sentier corto
 Dell' impia iniquità, lasciando quello
 Che reca pace al uiuo, & gloria al morto.

Io non saprei chiamar cortese & bello
 Chi sia Thersite, ne figliuol d' Anchise
 Chi sia di senno & di pietà rubello.
 Non saprei chi piu 'l cor nell' oro mise
 Dirgli Alessandro, e 'l pauroso & uile
 Chiamarlo il forte, ch' i Centauri ancise.
 Dir non saprei Poeta alto, & gentile
 Meuio, giurando poi che tal non uide
 Smirna, Manto, & Fiorenza ornato stile.
 Non saprei dentro all' alte soglie infide
 Per piu mostrar' amor, contr' à mia uoglia
 Imitar sempre altrui se piange, o ride.
 Non saprei indiuinar quel ch' altri uoglia,
 Ne conoscer saprei quel che piu piace
 Tacendo il uer che le piu uolte addoglia.
 L' amico lusinghier, doppio, & fallace
 Dir non saprei gentil, ne aperto & uero
 Chi sempre parli quel che piu dispiace.
 Non saprei l' huom crudel chiamar seuero,
 Ne chi lascia peccar chiamarlo pio,
 Ne che 'l tyranneggiar sia giusto impero.
 Io non saprei ingannar gli huomini & Dio,
 Con giuramenti & con promesse false,
 Ne far saprei quel ch' è d' un' altro mio.
 Questo è cagion che non mi cal, ne calse
 Anchor già mai, di seguitar coloro
 Ne quai Fortuna piu che 'l senno ualse.
 Questo fa che 'l mio regnio, e 'l mio thesoro
 Son gli 'nchiostri & le carte, & piu ch' altroue
 Hoggi in Prouenza uolentier dimoro.
 Qui non ho alcun, che mi domandi doue
 Mi stia, ne uada, & non mi sforza alcuno
 À gir pe 'l mondo quando agghiaccia & pious.
 Quando e' gli è 'l ciel seren, quando e' gli è bruno
 Son quel medesimo, & non mi prendo affanno,
 Colmo di pace, & di timor digiuno.
 Non sono in Francia à sentir beffe & danno
 S' io non conosco i uin, s' io non so bene
 Qual uiuanda è miglior di tutto l' anno.
 Non nella Hispagnia oue studiar conuiene
 Piu che nell' esser poi nel ben parere,
 Oue frode, & menzogna il seggio tiene,
 Non in Germania oue 'l mangiare e 'l bere
 M' habbia à tor l' intelletto, & darlo in preda
 Al senso, in guisa di seluagge fere.
 Non sono in Roma, oue chi 'n Christo creda,
 Et non sappia falsar, ne far ueneni
 Conuiene ch' a casa sospirando rieda.
 Sono in Prouenza, oue quantunque pieni
 Di maluagio uoler ci sian gli 'ngegni,
 L' ignioranza e 'l timor pon loro i freni.

Che benche sian di 'nuidia & d' odio pregni
 Sempre contro i miglior per ueder poco
 Son nel mezzo troncati i lor disegni.
 Hor qui dunque mi sto, prendendo in gioco
 Il lor breue sauer, le lunghe uoglie
 Con le mie Muse in solitario loco.
 Non le gran Corti homai, non l' alte soglie
 Mi uedran gir co i lor seguaci à schiera,
 Ne di me hauran troppo honorate spoglie
 Auaritia, & liuor, ma pace uera.

Though translated from Alamanni, No. 125 introduces various local and personal touches, as at 86. 20, 23-33, 87. 40-42. It was no doubt written during Wyatt's enforced exile in Kent after he had been released from prison in 1536.

85. 25 wrapped within my cloke. Cf. Horace's Carmina, III. xxix. 54-55, "mea virtute me involvo" (Nott).

30-33 I haue alwayes ment, &c. These obscure lines evidently mean that Wyatt esteems the great less than do the common sort of people, who judge them more by their outward appearance than by their real merits.

41 all nice. Read all vice with B-D* and the MS.

86. 10 Nor turne the worde, &c. Nott points out that the thought and expression are evidently taken from Horace, Ars Poetica, lines 389-390, "delere licebit Quod non edideris; nescit vox missa reverti."

18, 20 Cato, Liue. Wyatt adds Livy and substitutes Cato for Brutus. He handles proper names in the poem very freely, omitting, for example, Alamanni's references to Sulla, Thersites, Aeneas, Maevius, Smyrna, Florence, Provence. Marcus Porcius Cato (Uticensis), Pompey's adherent, committed suicide after the battle of Thapsus in 46 B.C., thus escaping (line 20) "from Caesar's hands." The book (cxiv) of Livy in which this was told is lost, so that (to quote Nott, p. 562) "Wyatt's authority must have been . . . the author of the Epitome to that book, whose words are; Cato, auditâ re, quum se percussisset Uticae et interveniente filio curaretur, inter ipsam curationem, resciso vulnere, expiravit."

30-31 syr Topas, the story that the knight tolde. This discriminating comment on two of Chaucer's Canterbury tales is, of course, Wyatt's substitution for Alamanni's "Poeta alto, & gentile, Meuio," etc.

41 With nearest vertue ay to cloke the vice. Nott believes this phrase is borrowed from Horace, Satires, I. iii. 41-42, "et isti errori nomen virtus posuisset honestum."

42-43 As to purpose, &c. On the repetition of these lines at 87. 2-3 see p. 19, above.

87. 16 I can not, I. On this common repetition of the pronoun see the examples listed in the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 190, and the Paradise, p. 239.

87. 26 a clogge doth hang yet at my heele. Wyatt was free during his "exile" in Kent, but was formally on parole to his father. The phrase is proverbial, as in John Taylor the Water Poet's Iuniper Lecture, 1639, D3^v, "then you say you cannot be merrie because you have such a clog at your Heeles," and The Rump Despairing, Or The Rumps Proverbs, 1660, p. 4, "For a Jackanapes cannot be merry when a clog is at his heeles." Cf. also Gabriel Harvey, The Trimming of Thomas Nashe, 1597 (Works, ed. Grosart, III, 44), "thou hast a clog at thy heele as the prouerbe is."

29 in Fraunce, to iudge the wine. Alamanni's words apply to Wyatt's own case; for when the latter poet was at Calais, in 1529, he received permission to export wine.

32 Rather then to be, outwardly to seme. "If you will seem honest," Wyatt wrote to his fifteen-year-old son, "be honest, or else seem as you are. Seek not the name without the thing" (see Nott's Wyatt, p. 272).

34-35 Flaunders chere lettes not, &c. "I am not in Flanders [Alamanni's "Germania"] where excessive eating and drinking prevent my telling black from white and destroy my wits with beastliness."

37, 38 truth, of some. In Wyatt's MS., as in Alamanni's verse, these words are Christ and at Rome. Of course the editor of A made the change in deference to political and religious conditions in 1557. Note Wyatt's comment at 85. 38 that he himself "cannot dye the color black a liar."

88. 2 (No. 126) How to use the court, &c. In every edition (No. [136] in B-I, sigs. M3^v-N in BC, F7^v-G in D-G, F7^v-F8^v in H, F5-F6 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 147-151) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

- 88. 7 doth] doeth
- 12 standst] stondes
- 19 mightest] myghtst
- 23 dung] the tordes
- 24 pearles with] perilles the
- 25 So] Then: doth] to
- 26 So sakes of dust be filled up in the cloyster
- 27 So] That
- 28 withouten moysture] withoute moyster
- 29 will] woll
- 36 knowest] knowst
- 37 trouth] trowght
- 38 both] boeth
- 89. 2 dayes] dayes so
- 4 saies] say so
- 9 calfe] dogge
- 12 the ladde] Kittson
- 13 withouten] withoute
- 14 knowes] knoweth
- 16 beginnes] begynneth
- 19 coughe] koggh
- 20 What] When

89. 24, 32 thou] you
 29 mayest] maist
 34 be] by
 90. 2 Laughest] Laughst
 4 Wouldest] Would'st
 8 thou] you
 13 world] worould

This satire, which shows the influence of both Horace (especially Satires, II. v) and Chaucer, was perhaps written about 1537. It is supposed to be a dialogue between Sir Francis Bryan (who is described in lines 15-18 on p. 88) and Wyatt. On p. 88, for example, the former speaks from the last half of line 22 through line 31, as well as the first half of line 34, and on p. 90 lines 3-7. In an article on "Particulars respecting Sir Francis Bryan" (Archaeologia, XXVI [1836], 446-453) J. P. Collier shows that Bryan had been married to the widow of John Fortescue before he married Joan, Countess of Ormonde; hence he explains 89. 30-31 as a reference to Bryan's "marriage with the widow Fortescue," who may have been older than he. On 90. 9-14 he comments as follows: "This . . . certainly seems meant as a reproof to Sir Francis Bryan, because he did not 'content himself with honest poverty,' and did not 'sometimes' run the risk of 'adversity' by displaying an independent spirit, but kept himself in with all parties, having subsequently been as great a favourite with the Protector Somerset, as he had been with Henry VIII." Miss Foxwell believes that Wyatt's poem led Bryan to write his Dispraise of the Life of a Courtier (1548).

88. 13-14 knowes how great a grace, &c. Apparently praise of didactic poetry written by Bryan. See my comments on p. 82 n., above.

22 For swine so groines. That is, grunts. Cf. Skelton (Poetical Works, ed. Dyce, I [1843], 132, 415), "Hoyning like hogges that groynis and wrotes," "the groynninge of the gronnyng swyne."

24 And driuell on pearles. Cf. Matthew vii. 6.

25 of the harpe the asse doth heare the sound. Cf. Chaucer's Boethius, I, prose iv, "Artow lyke an asse to the harpe?" and Troilus and Criseyde, I, 731-735:

Or artow lyk an asse to the harpe,
 That hereth soun, whan men the strenges plye,
 But in his minde of that no melodye
 May sinken, him to glade, for that he
 So dul is of his bestialitee?

Cf. also John Lydgate's Here foloweth the Churle and the byrde (Mychel's ed., 1550?), B2^v, B3^v:

To here of wysdome thyne eares ben defe
 Lyke to an asse/ that lysteneth to an harpe.

 I holde hym mad/ that bryngeth forth an harpe
 Theron to teche a rude dull asse.

88. 32-34 But what and if thou wist, &c. Cf. the opening lines of Horace's satire (II. v),

Hoc quoque, Tiresia, praeter narrata petenti responde, quibus amissas reparare queam res artibus atque modis.

89. 7 Seke . . . vpon thy bare fete. Perhaps this means "silently," "with silent tread," in "quiet and stealthy ways."

9 as to a calfe a chese. This allusion is not clear to any of the commentators. The MS. reads "as to a dog," etc.

12 at the ladde. Nott thinks that the MS. reading, at Kitson, may have reference to Sir Thomas Kitson, sheriff of London in 1533, but the wealthy bookseller Anthony Kitson (see E. G. Duff, A Century of the English Book Trade, 1905, p. 86) seems a more plausible guess. Omission of the proper noun agrees with the general policy of the editor of A.

19-20 if he coughe to sore, &c. "A great improvement on the original" (Horace's Satires, II. v. 106-109), declares Nott:

Si quis
forte coheredum senior male tussiet, huic tu dic, ex parte tua seu fundi sive domus sit emptor, gaudentem nummo te addicere.

28 though she curse or banne. A tautological phrase for curse. Thus Robert Armin, in The History of the two Maids of More-clacke, 1609, E3 (Tudor Facsimile Texts) writes, "Curse and ban him."

30 Let the olde mule bite vpon the bridle. A proverbial expression, examples of which are cited in the Paradise, pp. 235-236. Note also that Wyatt wrote a rondeau (Foxwell, I, 10) satirizing a decayed beauty whom he addresses in his first line and in three refrains as "Ye old mule!"

40-42 As Pandar was. The reference is to Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde, III. 260-263.

43 Be next thy selfe. From Terence's Andria, IV. i. 12, "Proximus sum egomet mihi" (Nott).

90. 15 (No. 127) The song of Iopas unfinished. In every edition (No. [137] in B-I, sigs. N-N^v in BC, G-G^v in D-G, F8^v-G^v in H, F6-F7 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 189-196) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

90. 17 wanderyng] wandryng
19 taught] did teche
20 in] in his
22, 24, 38 earth] yerth
23 powers] powrs
24 Repungnant] Repugnant
25 mother] moder
27 and] Om.

90. 28 placed] Om.
 32 Carieth] Caryth
 34 Two . . . be] There be two pointes
 36 grounde] round
 37 drawen] draune: the one to thother] ton to tothr
 38 none other] no nothr
 39 be] bene: discryde] discribd
 40 one] tone: thother] tothr
 91. 2 thone to thother] ton to tothr
 3 vpon] apon: the heauens] thevins: do] doth
 4 earth] yerth
 7 be] bene
 8 erryng] wandryng: circle] cyrcles
 9 because] by cawse: repungnant] repugnant
 12 saue] saff
 16 betwene] by twene
 18 seuenth] sevent
 19 gatherth] gaderth
 25 twelue] twelff: thothers] tothrs
 28 bears] berth
 29 eleuen] elefn
 30 fourth] fourt
 31 dayes] day his: her] he 32 gouerns] governth
 35 vnto] to 36 starre] stern [?]
 38 fixt] first 42 these] those
 92. 2 them selues] hym sellffes: be layed] ben layd
 4 Saue] Saff
 6 moouynges] moving: the east] thest
 9 twelue] twelff: east ²] thest: carieth] caryth
 10 we] me
 11 the ¹] that 12 the] Om.

This poem, written in awkward poulter's measure, was suggested by Virgil's Aeneid, I. 740-747:

cithara crinitus Iopas personat aurata, docuit quem maximus Atlas.
 hic canit errantem lunam solisque labores,
 unde hominum genus et pecudes, unde imber et ignes, Arcturum pluviasque Hyadas geminosque Triones;
 quid tantum Oceano properent se tingere soles hiberni, vel quae tardis mora noctibus obstet.
 ingeminant plausu Tyrii, Troesque sequuntur.

The theory of Copernicus was announced in 1530, but his work was first published in 1543. Wyatt may have known nothing of the theory: in any case, his poem is based upon the Ptolemaic system. No doubt, also, he knew Hyginus's treatise on astronomy.

90. 19 That mighty Atlas taught. The "antecedent" of that is Iopas, in line 20.

20 With crisped lockes. Wyatt was fond of crisped (curled), which he uses also at 66. 22 and 73. 17. Kendall, in Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, sig. K (Spenser Society ed., p. 161), writes of "crisped locks wavde all behinde."

91. 5 the substance . . . were harde . . . to finde. Hard, because it differs from each of the "four elements" named in line 4.

31 the sunne, therin her styckes. For her read he, with B+ and the MS.

93. 2 (No. 128) A trueloue. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 375) reprints the poem with the following variations:

2, 4 trueloue] true love
11 Or I my loue let] Or I let my love let 17 Muses] muses

W. P. Mustard, in Modern Language Notes, xli (1926), 202-203, points out that "various fancies" in this poem "may be traced to Virgil, or ultimately to Theocritus," but perhaps "came to Grimald through some such neo-Latin poem as Andrea Navagero's Iolas." He compares specifically lines 3-4, 5-8, with Iolas, lines 22-23, 68-73.

9-10 The oke . . . tuning of her lay. Merrill (p. 416) notes that these lines are borrowed from Virgil's Eclogues, viii. 52-56:

nunc et oves ultro fugiat lupus, aurea duræ mala ferant quercus, narcisso floreat alnus, pinguia corticibus sudent electra myricæ,
certent et cynis ululæ, sit Tityrus Orpheus,
Orpheus in silvis, inter delphinas Arion.

21 (No. 129) The louer to his dear, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 375-377) reprints the poem with these variations:

93. 23 by:] by,
94. 2 peeplepesterd] peeplepestered
7 somewhere] fromwhere
10 hed:] hed,
13 thee.] thee,
16 dreed?] dreed:
17 auaunt.] avaunt,
20 minde,] minde.
32 ease] eate

The source of this poem is Flegia III (misnumbered IIII) in Theodore de Bèze's (or Beza's) Poemata (Paris, 1548), pp. 23-25:

Cornua bis posuit, bis cæpit cornua Phœbe,
Nec tamen es tanto tempore uisa mihi.
Viuo tamen, si uita potest tibi, Publia, dici,
Mœrorem & lachrymas quæ fouet una meas.

Certe dura mihi mors sæpè in uota uocatur:
 Mors finem lachrymis impositura meis.
 Non aliter queritur uentrem durare Prometheus,
 Et posito mallet numine posse mori.
 Fallor enim, aut quisquis figmenta hæc repperit olim,
 Vulturis est illi nomine dictus amor.
 Quæ non uisa mihi est platea? quid in urbe relictum?
 Vrbe tamen tota Publia nulla fuit.
 Ergo uel miseram cohibent te coniugis iræ:
 O non tam sæuo fœmina digna uiro!
 Vel populosa tibi sordere Lutetia cœpit,
 Et placidi ruris dulcior aura placet.
 Forsitan in syluis nostros meditaris amores,
 Et tuto uelles omnia ferre loco.
 Ibo igitur, nec me quicquam retinebit euntem,
 Donec sis aliquo sola reperta loco.
 Interea manuum serues, collique colorem,
 Et fieri nigras ne patiare genas.
 Tecta incede caput: nam te si cernat Apollo,
 Ardeat in uultus ustus & ipse tuos.
 In syluis lauri uestita est cortice Daphne,
 Hei mihi si de te fabula talis erit!
 Callisto in syluis summo est compressa Tonanti,
 Ne rogo, ne placeat Iuppiter iste tibi.
 Heu quid non timeo? latronum hîc regna teguntur:
 Quisquis es, hinc aufer, prædo cruento, manus:
 Actæon doceat uiolati numinis iras:
 Dictynna certe non minor ista Dea est.
 Quid loquor? ô nostræ pars maxima, Publia, mentis,
 Non poterunt aures ista ferire tuas.
 O utinam præsens uerba obseruare legentis,
 Et frontis possem signa notare tuæ!
 Optima tunc nostro spes addi posset amori,
 Et possem mecum dicere, lenis erit.
 Perueniam certè quacunque morêris in urbe,
 Siue aliquo potius, Publia, rure lates.
 Perueniam, & si non mea per se forma loquatur,
 Fortunæ fiam nuntius ipse meæ.
 Quodd si surda preces ausis contemnere nostras,
 Nempe meæ subitò conscia cædis eris.
 Attamen hoc media nobis in morte placebit,
 Quodd tu causa meæ, Publia, cædis eris.

It has been conjectured that the Carie addressed in No. 129 had the surname Day which is played upon in No. 130. A contributor to Notes and Queries, 11th series, iv, 384, suggests that she may have been Grimald's fiancée, later his wife. It will be observed that Beza's Publia was a married woman, and that Grimald in line 35 changed Beza's coniunx to sire.

93. 29-30 So plaines Prometh, &c. "Just so Prometheus complains that his stomach never fails (but after the vulture has fed on it in the daytime grows whole again in the night), and, living forever, he had rather die (than exist in such torment)."

93. 31-32 I erre, or els . . . By that gripes name . . . vnsound. "Unless I am mistaken, he who first thought of the story (of Prometheus and the 'gripe') called love the vulture." For love is as great a tormentor as Prometheus's vulture.

94. 34 (No. 130) The louer asketh pardon, &c. In A only. On the Carie Day to whom this poem is possibly addressed see the notes to No. 129. Merrill (pp. 377-378) reprints the poem from A with the following variations:

95. 3 blinde] blind: wold] would 4 fled] fledd
 16 vpon] upon you
 23 hed] head
 24 defautes] defaults
 31 bee.] bee,

The source of the poem is Elegia v (misnumbered vi) in Beza's Poemata, 1548, pp. 27-28:

Quisquis amas (aiunt cuncti) fuge corpus amatum, Viuere si cæco liber ab igne cupis.
 Hei mihi, te quoties fugi, mea Candida, fugi:
 Semper at in nostro pectore regnat amor.
 Ecce iterum fateor, fugi te, Candida: uerum
 Et potui & possum dicere semper, amo.
 Siue abeo in syluas, nobis succurrit Adonis,
 Et fit tristitiæ conscia sylua meæ;
 Siue placent horti, quot florum hinc millia cerno,
 Tot stimulis captum me premit asper amor:
 Narcissum hinc croceum uideo, hinc flextes Hyacinthos, Hinc miser ante oculos pulcher Adonis adest:
 Magna quidem nostræ fateor medicamina flammæ,
 Sed me qui uincit, uincit & ille Deos.
 At si prata iuuant, ô quantas sentio flammæ!
 Ardeo tunc flammis totus amoris ego.
 Hic uideor Cereris fugientem cernere natam,
 Hic uideor furui cernere Ditis equos.
 Littora si specto, uitreas tunc cogito Nymphas,
 Feruidæque in medio numina sæpe mari.
 Quò magis euado montes sublimis in altos,
 Hoc propior Veneris fit puer ille mihi.
 Si placeant urbes, uis ut semel omnia dicam,
 Illic quum uideam plurima, nulla placent.
 Illius nunc carpo oculos, nunc illius ora,
 Hæc capite, hæc pedibus displicet, illa genis.
 Denique materies si desit, crimina fingo,
 Et quæcunque alijs candida, nigra mihi est.
 Quid prodest fugisse igitur, quum Candida præsens,
 Atque adeò lateri sit comes usque meo?

Vmbrae igitur meritò quadret tibi Candida nomen,
 Tale tamen nomen non decet iste color.
 Humanum potius debes deponere nomen,
 Vna simul gemino quæ potes esse loco.
 Parce, rogo, quæcunque Dea es: subiecit & ipsa
 Anchisi sese, res bene nota, Venus.
 Ecce fugam fateor, ueniam ne, Diua, negato,
 Sæpe mihi ueniam Iuppiter ipse dedit.
 Ipse quidem prima mox ad te luce reuertar,
 Quâsque uoles pœnas, si patiare, feram.

95. 10-11 In gardens . . . weeping chere. Condensed from six lines (9-14) of the Latin.

14 dame Ceres ymp. Proserpine, Dame Ceres' child ("Cereris . . . natam").

38 (No. 131) N. Vincent. to G. Black wood, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 378) reprints the poem with the following variations:

95. 38 Vincent.] Vincent: Black wood] Blackwood
 96. 3 tell, wherefore] tell wherfore
 7 pan?] pan?)
 8 say,] say
 9 soone] soon
 10 fine:] fine.
 20 Of] Or

The source of No. 131 is Beza's epigram "Ponticus Cornelio de uxore non ducenda" (Poemata, 1548, p. 95):

Quum uelis uxorem, Corneli, ducere: quæro
 Coniugium placeat qua ratione tibi.
 Scilicet ut deinceps uiuas felicior: atqui
 Fallor ego, aut non hac lege beatus eris.
 Vxor enim aut deformis erit, (tûne, obsecro, talis Si tibi sit coniunx iuncta, beatus eris?)
 Aut forma mediocris erit. modus iste, fatemur,
 Optimus, at subitò deperit iste modus.
 Aut formosa, ideóque uiris obnoxia mille,
 Et de qua nequeas dicere tota mea est.
 Vt sit casta tamen (nemo si fortè rogarit)
 Mille feret natos, tædia mille feret.
 Aut sterilis tecum tardos sic exiget annos,
 Nullus ut è multis sit sine lite dies.
 His addas caput indomitum, mentémque tenacem,
 Cæterâque à multis quæ didicisse potes.
 Desine sic igitur uitam sperare beatam,
 Sit potius cœlebs & sine lite thorus.
 Hic etenim si qua est felicitis semita uitæ,
 Fœmineas iuxta non latet illa nâtes.

It seems likely that Vincent, whoever he may have been, was the author of No. 131, not Grimald.

96. 5 I am beguylde, but you take, &c. "I am deceived if you aren't aiming (at happiness) in the wrong way."

7 flower of frying pan. Cf. Henry Medwall, Fulgens and Lucres, ca. 1497 (ed. Boas and Reed, 1926, p. 45), "Come forthe ye flowre of the frying pane, Helpe ye to aray vs as well as ye can" (explained by the editors of the play, at p. 95, as "a proverbial phrase for an ugly slut"). The proverb appears also in Breton's Pasquils Mistresse, 1600, C3, "If she . . . be the flower of all the frying pan . . . She shal be but the wench, when all is done"; and in Robert Armin's The History of the two Maids of More-clacke, 1609, C4 (Tudor Facsimile Texts), "Yes flowre it'h frying pan, he stops holes well." Grosart, editing Armin's Works, p. 89, changes pan to man!

22 (No. 132) G. Blackwood to N. Vincent, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 379) prints it with the following errors of punctuation:

96. 22 .N.] N.

34 great:] great,

97. 2 say:] say

The source of the poem is Beza's epigram, "Cornelius Pontico de uxore ducenda" (Poemata, 1548, p. 96):

Vxorem cupiam quum ducere, Pontice, quæris
 Coniugium placeat qua ratione mihi.
 Deformem nolo, formosam exopto: placebit,
 Si nequeo pulchram, quæ mediocris erit.
 Formosam, dices, alij mox mille rogabunt,
 At nulli, quanuis sæpe rogata, dabit.
 Forma perit subito mediocris: id ille queratur
 Qui præter formam nil muliebri probat.
 Si dederit natos, natos spectare iuuabit,
 Si sterilis, quid tum? sarcina nostra leuis.
 Cætera quæ narras certè sunt magna, fatemur,
 Est animusque tenax, indomitumque caput.
 Sed sua sunt cunctis connata incommoda rebus,
 Ipsa etiam damnis commoda plena uides.
 Et me miraris uitam sperare beatam,
 Si mihi sit deinceps fœmina facta comes?
 Semita uirtutis stricta est, si uera loquuntur.
 Hæc quoque quam quæro, Pontice, stricta uia est.

It seems likely that Blackwood, whoever he may have been, was the author of No. 132, not Grimald.

Poems on the themes of Nos. 131 and 132 are common. For example, see "Vxor Non Est Ducenda," "Vxor Est Ducenda," in Dr. Walter Haddon's Poemata, 1567, I4^v, K-K^v (pp. 70-72), and Turbervile's "To a yong Gentleman, of taking a Wyfe," "The Aunswere, for taking a Wyfe," in Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 130-132.

97. 4 (No. 133) The Muses. In every edition (No. [271] in B-I, sigs. Ff in BC, P in D-G, P^v-P₂ in H, O₂^v in I). Merrill (pp. 379-380) reprints the poem from A with the following variations:

97. 5 king] King
 12 dothe] doth
 14 eare] earr: bindes.] bindes,
 24 chase.] chase
 26 dothe enspire] doth inspire

No. 133 is (as Nott notes in C. 60. O. 13) a paraphrase of a poem, "Nomina Musarum," incorrectly attributed to Ausonius and still included in all editions of his works as idyll xx:

Clio gesta canens, transactis tempora reddit.
 Melpomene tragico proclamat moesta boatu.
 Comica lascivo gaudet sermone Thalia.
 Dulciloquos calamos Euterpe flatibus urget.
 Terpsichore affectus citharis movet, imperat, auget.
 Plectra gerens Erato, saltat pede, carmine, vultu.
 Carmina Calliope libris heroica mandat.
 Uranie coeli motus scrutatur, et astra.
 Signat cuncta manu, loquitur Polyhymnia gestu.
 Mentis Apollineae vis has movet undique Musas.
 In medio residens complectitur omnia Phoebus.

The first two and the last two lines of Grimald's poem appear to be original.

No. 133 is reprinted (from the "second edition" of the miscellany, says Crawford, p. 556) in Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600 (ed. Charles Crawford, no. 1194), with numerous unauthorized variants:

97. 9 solem] sullen: old] all 11 Thaley] Thalia
 12 like] Om.: last] tast
 14 eare] eares
 17 Fine] Fond: liuely] louely
 18 keeps] beares
 19 stere] stirre place
 20 renkes] rankes: in place] Om.
 21 Vranie] Vraine: -all] are 23 The blessed Eutrope tunes her instrument
 25 sprite] spirit
 26 embraceth all] Om.
 27-28 Om.

With customary haphazardness, Allot in his text attributes the poem to Surrey: for similar errors see p. 66 n. 1, above, and the notes to Nos. 149, 171, 261, 270, 278.

5 Imps of king Ioue, and quene Remembrance. "Daughters of Jove and Mnemosyne." Hyginus, in his fables, vouches for this parentage, calling Mnemosyne Moneta. See also 100. 26.

97. 28 that men in maze they fall. The Graces delight to go abroad in the Muses' garments so that men, seeing them, fall into admiration.

29 (No. 134) Musonius the Philosophers saying. In every edition (No. [272] in B-I, sigs. Ff-Ff^v in BC, P-P^v in D-G, P₂ in H, O₃ in I). Merrill (p. 380) reprints the poem from A, misprinting stil (98. 4) as still, ylswading (98. 6) as ylfwading. The rhyme-scheme, aaaaaabbccdd, is rather unusual.

The "saying" referred to by Grimald — "Verba Musoni philosophi Graeca digna atque utilia audiri observarique; eiusdemque utilitatis sententia a M. Catone multis ante annis Numantiae ad equites dicta" — may be seen in O. Hense's edition, C. Musonii Rufi Reliquiae, 1905, pp. 132-133:

Adulescentuli cum etiamtum in scholis essemus, ἐνθυμημάτων hoc Graecum quod adposui, dictum esse a Musonio philosopho audiebamus et, quoniam vere atque luculente dictum verbisque est brevibus et rotundis vinctum, perquam libenter memineramur: "Ἄν τι πράξης καλὸν μετὰ πόνου, ὃ μὲν πόνος οἴχεται, τὸ δὲ καλὸν μένει· ἂν τι ποιήσης αἰσχρὸν μετὰ ἡδονῆς, τὸ μὲν ἡδὺ οἴχεται, τὸ δὲ αἰσχρὸν μένει."

Postea istam ipsam sententiam in Catonis oratione, quam dixit Numantiae apud equites, positam legimus. quae etsi laxioribus paulo longioribusque verbis comprehensa est praequam illud Graecum, quod diximus, quoniam tamen prior tempore antiquiorque est, venerabilior videri debet. verba ex oratione haec sunt: 'Cogitate cum animis vestris: si quid vos per laborem recte feceritis, labor ille a vobis cito recedet, bene factum a vobis, dum vivitis, non abscedet; sed si qua per voluptatem nequiter feceritis, voluptas cito abibit, nequiter factum illud apud vos semper manebit.'

98. 8 (No. 135) Marcus Catoes comparison, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 380-381) reprints the poem with the following variations:

- 98. 8 comparison] camparison
- 11 But] Byt
- 17 let] Om.
- 18 cankerd] cankered
- 22 dothe] doth
- 29 measure] measures

Antonio Riccoboni, De Historia Liber. Cum Fragmentis Historicum Veterum Latinorum, 1579, pp. 122-123, quotes the "comparison" "ex Catonis carmine de moribus" as follows:

Nam vita humana prope uti ferrum est. ferrum si exerceas conteritur; si non exerceas, tamen rubigo interficit. Itidem homines exercendo videmus conteri. si nihil exerceas, inertia, atque torpedo plus detrimenti facit, quam exercitatio."

30 (No. 136) Cleobulus the Lydians riddle. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 381) reprints the poem with the following variations:

- 98. 37 Nor] Now
- 99. 2 do] doth
- 3 sire] fire

Cleobulus (628-558 B.C.) was one of the Seven Sages of Greece. His riddle is given in F. W. A. Mullach's Fragmenta Philosophorum Graecorum, 1 (1860), 219, thus: "Εἷς ὁ πατήρ, παῖδες δὲ δώδεκα· τῶν δὲ θ' ἑκάστῳ κούραι ἐξήκοντα, διάνδιχα εἶδος ἔχουσαι. Αἱ μὲν λευκαὶ ἔασιν ἰδεῖν, αἱ δ' αὖτε μέλαιναι· ἀθάναται δὲ τ' ἐοῦσαι ἀποφθινύθουσιν ἅπασαι." Mullach translates as follows: "Unus est pater, duodecim autem filii, quorum singulis sexaginta filiae sunt, duplicem formam habentes. Quippe aliae albo colore sunt, aliae nigro: quamvis vero immortales sint, omnes tamen moriuntur." A slightly different version of the Greek riddle is given in Theodorus Bergk's Poetae Lyrici Graeci, 4th ed., 1882, III, 201-202; and Greek, Latin, Italian, French, and English versions will be found in Henry Wellesley's Anthologia Polyglotta (1849), p. 41. In A Posie of Gilloflowers, 1580 (Poems, ed. Grosart, Miscellanies of the Fuller Worthies' Library, I, 431) Humfrey Gifford gives a version of this riddle which he claims to have "translated out of Italian verse":

A father once, as bookes expresse,
Had sonnes twise sixe, nor more nor lesse:
Ech sonne, of children had scores three,
Halfe of them sonnes, halfe daughters bee:
The sonnes are farre more white then snowe,
The daughters blacker then a crow.
Wee see these children dayly die,
And yet they liue continually.

99. 5 You shall I count an Edipus in wit. So an "Ænigma, 37" in Wits A. B. C. Or A Centurie of Epigrams [1620?], C4, ends,

Thou shalt be Oedipus if thou not misse,
To tell what kinde of creature this same is.

6 (No. 137) Concerning Virgils Eneids. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 382) reprints the poem, misprinting moste (line 9) as most.

21 (No. 138) Of mirth. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 382-383) reprints the poem with the following variations:

99. 22 Heauy] heavy: smart:] smart;
28 beast:] beast.
33 leam] beam
34 whelmd] whelmed
37 eternall] eternal

29 A mery hert sage Salomon countes, &c. See Proverbs xv. 15.

100. 2 (No. 139) To L. I. S. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 383-384) reprints the poem with the following variations:

100. 4 adioynd] adjoyned
5 Nymphs] nymphs
13 briefe:] briefe;

He suggests (p. 423) that the initials represent "Lady Jane Scymour," daughter of Edward Scymour, Duke of Somerset. Mustard (Modern Language Notes, xli [1926], 203) calls attention to the resemblance between the two opening lines of No. 139 and Sannazaro's Epigrams, III. 2,

Quarta Charis, decima es mihi Pieris, altera Cypris, Cassandra, una choris addita diva tribus.

Grimald credits Lady "I. S." with knowing "full well" Latin, French, Italian, and Spanish, no less than English. Such knowledge was not uncommon in ladies of the aristocracy. As an example, Thomas Heywood in 1640 dedicated The Exemplary Lives . . . of Nine the Most Worthy Women of the World to Lady Theophila, wife of Sir Robert Cooke, speaking of

The severall tongues, in which you so excell, Greeke, Roman, French, Castilian, and with those,
Tuscan, Teutonicke, in all which you pose
The forreigne Linguist: in the most select Both native Ideom, and choise dialect [sic].

Queen Elizabeth's learning, of course, seems everywhere to have been admired. Charles Gerbier describes it in Elogium Heroinum: Or, The Praise of Worthy Women, 1651, pp. 42-43:

Queen Elizabeth of late memory, whose wonderful knowledge, and Learning, was admired by all the Christian Princes that flourished in her time; shee was so well verst in the Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, and French languages, that shee needed no Interpreter, but gave her self answer to all such Ambassadors in their own Language, of which those learned Orations in the Latine tongue whiche shee delivered by her own mouth in the two famous Universities do bear a sufficient record in her behalf.

100. 3 Charis the fourth, Pieris the tenth, the second Cypris, Iane. A graceful compliment: Lady Jane was the fourth Grace, the tenth Muse, the second Venus. In Endimion and Phoebe, 1595 (ed. J. W. Hebel, 1925, pp. 45, 49), Drayton speaks of "The fayrest Graces Jove-borne Charites," and of Astraea,

To whom the Charites led on the way,
Aglaia, Thalia, and Euphrozie.

4 One to assemblies thre adioynd. The "three assemblies" were the Graces, the Muses, and Venus, with all of whom (see the foregoing note) Lady Jane was "adioynd" on equal terms.

6 the quenes most noble grace. Presumably Mary I, though I cannot find that Lady Jane Seymour was one of her maids of honor (as she afterwards was of Elizabeth).

18 And if you stay . . . wits will ouergo. "And if you don't make use of your natural gifts, other ladies (fresh wits) will eclipse your fame." The doings of line 17 suggests that her fame as a poet is meant.

23 (No. 140) To maistres D. A. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 384-385) reprints the poem with the following variations:

100. 24 fansy] fancy
 25 Britan] Britain
 26 Bothe] Both
 29 ther] their 32 Allurementes] Allurements
 36 lo] Om.
 37 nill] will
 101. 2 fansiefourm] fancie fourm
 11 yblest:] yblest,
 13 frendships] friendships
 14 threatning] threatening: tyme] time
 15 mark] marke: depaynt] depaynt,
 16 which,] which

Nos. 140, 141, and 146 are addressed, as the acrostic in No. 141 shows, to Damascene Awdley. Merrill (p. 425) comments: "According to the first she had 'golden gifts of mind,' the second says that she was of 'woorthy race,' while the third pictures her as a lady of 'gorgeous attire.' It seems not unlikely that she was of the noble house of Awdley (Audley), of Staffordshire, in which Eccles lies, the town in which Grimald was licensed to preach in 1551. As this church was one of the most important in that county, it is probable that Grimald came to know various members of the Awdley family. The records of that family do not show any member with the name of Damascene. The name damascene, or damask, which is that of a rose of pink or light red variety, and also that of a fabric of silky surface and elaborate design, popular in mediæval times, may, however, have been only a nickname."

101. 2 fansiefourm. Read as two words, fancy (the noun love) and form (the verb).

15 I that daye, with gem snowwhite, will mark. "The Romans used a white stone or piece of chalk to mark their lucky days on the calendar. Those that were unlucky they marked with charcoal" (Merrill, p. 426). Cf. Horace's Carmina, I. xxxvi. 10, "cressa ne careat pulchra dies nota"; Catullus, cvii. 6, "o lucem candidiore nota"; Pliny the Younger's Epistolae, vi. xi, "O diem . . . laetum, notandumque mihi candidissimo calculo."

17 (No. 141) Of .m. D. A. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 385-386) reprints the poem with the following variations:

101. 17 .m.] m.
 24 dere.] dere,
 29 outright.] outright,
 30 tyme] time
 32 Yeeld,] Yeeld

On Damascene Awdley see No. 140.

33 (No. 142) A neww yeres gift, to the l.M.S. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 386) reprints the poem with the following variations:

101. 38 begoon:] begoon.

102. 6 sound²] found

7 And,] And: conntrey] countrey

He suggests (p. 427) that Lady Margaret Seymour (cf. Nos. 143, 144) is the person addressed by Grimald.

102. 10 (No. 143) An other to J.M.S. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 386-387) reprints the poem with the following variations:

102. 10 .l.] l.

12 ryfe] ryte

28 Entire line om.

On the Lady M.S. see the notes to Nos. 142 and 144.

23 By . . . orders coomly rate. "By maintaining the comely pace of well-ordered behavior (as opposed to disorder)" (G. L. K.).

31 (No. 144) To J.K.S. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 387) reprints the poem with the following variations:

102. 31 .l.] l.

32 now] nowe: yere,²] yere

35 wit] with

Nos. 139, 142-145 were apparently written (as Merrill suggests) to four daughters — Jane, Margaret, Katherine, Elizabeth — of Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, and his wife, Lady Anne Stanhope (on whom see the notes to No. 264). To them Grimald had addressed his Carmen Congratulatorium when the duke was released from the Tower on February 6, 1550. The three eldest of the six sisters (Anne, Margaret, and Jane) were authors of a book of Latin verse on the death of Margaret of Valois (1550). In Notes and Queries, 11th series, IV, 384, it is suggested that No. 144 may be addressed to "Lady Katherine Seymour, widow of Henry VIII, who married the Protector's brother, and died in 1548."

103. 2 (No. 145) To J.E.S. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 387) reprints the poem with the following variations:

103. 2 .l.] l.

7 the weeks] Om.: howrs] howrs,

8 blisfull] blisful

On the person addressed (Lady Elizabeth Seymour?) see the note to No. 144.

9 (No. 146) To m. D. A. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 388) reprints the poem with the following variations:

103. 9 .m.] m.

14 what?] what,: sins] sins

18 suppose,] suppose

22 by] Om.

Evidently Grimald is here addressing Mistress Damascene Awdley, on whom see the notes to No. 140.

The poem is a paraphrase of Beza's epigram, "Xenium Candidæ" (Poemata, 1548, p. 72):

Vestes diuitijs graues & arte,
Aptandumué tuo monile collo,
Aut quos India mittit uniones
Iani nec queo nec uolo Calendis
Ad te mittere, Candida, una Bezæ Dilectissima Candida. At quid ergo?
Ipsam nempe animam tibi dicatam,
Amorisque tui ignibus perustam,
Quæ pridem tua sit licet, suamque
Te pridem dominam uocétque, amétque,
Se rursus tibi, dátque, dedicátque
Inclusa his numeris Phaleuciorum.
Quòd si munera raritate censes,
O Dij quàm tibi grande mitto munus!

103. 24 (No. 147) To m. S. H. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 388) reprints the poem with the following variants:

103. 24 .m.] m.
26 to] Om.
29 y] ye

I have not identified Mistress Susan H.

104. 2 (No. 148) To his familiar frend. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 389) reprints the poem, misprinting coounyng (line 3) as coouyng and expanding y (line 6) to yat. H. H. Hudson (Modern Language Notes, xxxix [1924], 393 n.) shows that No. 148 is based upon an epigram by Marc-Antoine Muret, or Muretus (Poemata, p. 33, in his Orationes, Epistolæ, etc., Leipzig, 1660):

Calendis Januariis, Jocosum.

Non tibi pro Xeniiis fulvi, pretiosa metalli
Pondera, non docta signa prolita manu,
Non lana Assyrio tincta & saturata veneno,
Non gravis argenti lamina munus erit.
Talia non capiunt generositas munera mentes,
Talia magnanimi spernere dona solent,
Cum te igitur, quam sis excelso pectore nôrim:
Non mittam ista tibi dona: quid ergo? nihil.

7 (No. 149) Description of Vertue. In every edition (No. [273] in B-I, sigs. Ff^v in BC, P^v in D-G, P2 in H, O3 in I). Merrill (p. 389) reprints the poem from A with these variations:

104. 10 price] price,
12 mark] marke
14 you?] you:

Grimald's epigram is also printed in Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, I8^v-K (Spenser Society ed., pp. 160-161), as an original translation from Beza. The only variant is of for whom (line 10). No. 149 is reprinted (from the "second edition" of the miscellany, says Crawford, p. 556) in Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600 (ed. Charles Crawford, no. 1620), with the following variations from A in diction:

104. 11 rayd] clad
 12 doublefaced] double fac'd: fare] rare
 14 Tooles . . . you?] VVhy beare you tooles?

Allot attributed the lines to "S. Th. Wiat." For similar errors of attribution see the notes to No. 133.

The source of the poem is Beza's epigram, "Descriptio Virtutis" (Poemata, 1548, p. 68):

Quænam tam lacero uestita incedis amictu?
 Virtus antiquis nobilitata sophis.
 Cur uestis tam uilis? Opes contemno caducas.
 Cur gemina est facies? Tempus utrumque noto.
 Quid docet hoc frenum? Mentis cohibere furores.
 Rastros cur gestas? Res mihi grata labor.
 Cur uolucris? Doceo tandem super astra uolare.
 Cur tibi mors premitur? Nescio sola mori.

104. 17 (No. 150) Prayse of measure-kepyng. In every edition (No. [274] in B-I, sigs. Ff^v-Ff² in BC, P^v-P² in D-G, P²-P^{2v} in H, O₃-O_{3v} in I). Merrill (pp. 389-390) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

104. 20 mean:] mean,
 23 sire] fire
 30 kill.] kill,
 33 fansies vain,] fancies vain.
 105. 2 prayzd] prayzed
 4 chere,] chere.
 8 medcines] medicines

The source of No. 150 is Beza's Elegia II, "In Mediocritatis laudem" (Poemata, 1548, pp. 22-23):

Non frustrâ solita est medium laudare uetustas,
 Nam nil laudari dignius orbis habet.
 In medio posita est uirtus hinc indéque fallax:
 Tota sinistra uia est, totâque dextra uia est.
 Icare, si patrem esses inter utrumque secutus,
 Icarias nullus nomine nosset aquas.
 Si medio Phaëton mansisset calle superbus,
 Non esset sæua terra perusta face.
 Nec lenis nimium, nec durat sæua potestas,
 Quæ medium seruat, sola perennis erit:

Te nimia, ò Iuli, clementia perdidit olim:
 Occidit feritas te truculente Nero.
 Augustus felix cur multos mansit in annos?
 Nec facilis nimium, nec truculentus erat.
 Nec nimis ipse coli, nec sperni Iuppiter optat,
 Sed magis una iuuat mens moderata deos.
 Largus opum nullus, nullus laudatur avarus:
 Magnus, in his potuit qui tenuisse modum.
 Antonij mensas sic uicit cœna Catonis,
 Et tenuem melior fama secuta larem.
 Nec gracilis structura nimis, nec crassa probatur:
 Hæc spectatori displicet, illa ruit.
 Vt moderata iuuant, sic ægris pharmaca multis,
 Heu nimium multis, sæpe petita nocent.
 Dicere plura nefas credo, nam laude nequaquam
 Efferrî immodica sustinet ipse modus.

104. 23 with fire. Read with sire (the "patrem," Daedalus, of Beza's lines). Fire is a misprint.

29 Thee, Iulie, once did too much mercy spill. Julius Caesar after the battle of Pharsalia pardoned his enemies Gaius Cassius and Marcus Brutus, who had been adherents of Pompey, and who later murdered Caesar. Cicero (Epistolæ ad Diversos, VIII. 15) queries, "Ecquem autem Caesare nostro acriorem in rebus gerendis, eodem in victoria temperatiorem, aut legisti, aut audisti?"

30-31 Nero, August. Nero's "rigor" brought about his suicide (to escape public execution) in his fourteenth year as emperor and his thirty-first year of age. Augustus Caesar by holding the golden mean between mercy and severity "well passed" the years from 63 B.C. to 14 A.D.

31-32 passe, was. Grimald uses similar rhymes at 109. 37-38, 112. 5-6, 29-30, 114. 26-27.

105. 12 (No. 151) Mans life after Possidonius, &c. In every edition (No. [275] in B-I, sigs. Ff2 in BC, P2 in D-G, P2^v in H, O3^v in I). Merrill (p. 390) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

105. 12 Possidonius,] Possidonius
 17 feelds] feelde
 18 riche,] riche
 19 poore,] poore

It is reprinted as an original translation from Erasmus's Chiliades in Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, F7^v (Spenser Society ed., p. 110), with the title of "Best neuer to be borne," with the ten long lines printed as twenty short ones, and with trauail, and with toyl (line 17) changed to toile and trauell and lieth (line 18) to lyes. Another translation (beginning, "What course of life should wretched Mortalles take?") is printed in L. E. Kastner's edition of Drummond of Hawthornden's Poetical Works, II (1913), 173, but was actually (see James Hutton in The Modern Language Review, xxi [1926], 368-372) made by Sir John Beaumont, who likewise translated the original on which No. 152 is based: see his Bosworth-field, 1629, pp. 35, 36. Better known than these is Bacon's version in his poem beginning, "The world's a bubble, and the life of man less than a span." Much like No. 151, furthermore, are the two early Elizabethan ballads by I. G. printed in Lilly's Ballads, pp. 192-193, 227.

Posidonius (ca. 130-50 B.C.) was a Stoic philosopher, accounted the most learned man of his day, and the teacher of Marius, Pompey, and Cicero. Crates, a Cynic philosopher and a pupil of Diogenes, flourished about 320 B.C. J. W. Mackail, Select Epigrams from the Greek Anthology, 1906, p. 299, prints the epigram as the composition of Posidippus, saying (p. 420) that it is "a worthless Byzantine tradition" which ascribes the two epigrams (the originals of Nos. 151 and 152) to Heraclitus and Democritus. Mackail's translation of Posidippus's epigram (which begins, "Ποίην τις βιότοιον τάμη τριβον; εἰν ἄγορῇ μὲν") runs thus:

What path of life may one hold? In the market-place are strifes and hard dealings, in the house cares; in the country labour enough, and at sea terror; and abroad, if thou hast aught, fear, and if thou art in poverty, vexation. Art married? thou wilt not be without anxieties; unmarried? thy life is yet lonelier. Children are troubles; a childless life is a crippled one. Youth is foolish, and grey hairs again feeble. In the end, then, the choice is of one of these two, either never to be born, or, as soon as born, to die.

A Latin version will be found in a book printed at Nuremberg in 1501: Cratis Thebani Cynici philosophi Epl'e aureis sentencijs referite theologie consentanee, A6^v, where the poem is attributed to Heraclitus. There is a faint possibility that Grimald translated Nos. 151 and 152 directly from the Greek. Both, however, were familiar from the Latin translations made by Erasmus in his Adagia (Opera Omnia, 10 vols., Leyden, 1703-1706, II, 503-504) and by George Buchanan in the first book of his epigrams (Poemata, Leyden, 1621, pp. 129-130). Grimald's titles (and his lines in general) are much like Buchanan's: "E Graeco Possidippi, seu Cratetis," "Contraria sententia verisimilis, ex Metrodoro." Translations into Italian, French, and German have been made by Alamanni, De Baif, and Herder. Nott, by the way (in C. 60. O. 13), points out parallels to the originals of Nos. 151 and 152 in the fifteenth idyll of Ausonius ("Ex Graeco Pythagoricum de ambiguitate eligendae vitae").

105. 24 (No. 152) Metrodorus minde to the contrarie. In every edition (No. [276] in B-I, sigs. Ff2-Ff2^v in BC, P2-P2^v in D-G, P2^v-P3 in H, O3^v in I). Merrill (pp. 390-391) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

105. 28 wee] we: our selues] ourselves
32 art thou] thou art
34 sires] fires
35 dye:] dye,

It is reprinted, like No. 151, in twenty short lines as an original translation from Erasmus in Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, F8 (Spenser Society ed., p. 111), with the following variants:

105. 27 courts] Court: encreased] encreaseth
 29 doo] doth
 30 is gayn to gett] great gain is got 31 knoweth] knowes
 35 that choys] the choyse

The "saying" will be found, attributed to Democritus, in the Nuremberg volume of 1501, A6^v (cf. the notes to No. 151). The original Greek epigram by Metrodorus, beginning "Παντοῖον βίοτοιο τάμοις τρίβον· ἐν ἀγορῇ μὲν," may be seen in Mackail's Select Epigrams from the Greek Anthology, 1906, p. 300, where it is translated thus:

Hold every path of life. In the market-place are honours and prudent dealings, in the house rest; in the country the charm of nature, and at sea gain; and abroad, if thou hast aught, glory, and if thou art in poverty, thou alone knowest it. Art married? so will thine household be best; unmarried? thy life is yet lighter. Children are darlings; a childless life is an unanxious one: youth is strong, and grey hairs again reverend. The choice is not, then, of one of the two, either never to be born or to die; for all things are good in life.

106. 2 (No. 153) Of lawes. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 391) reprints the poem with the following variations:

106. 2 lawes] Lawes
 4 lābes] babes
 5 heades] heads

He suggests that it refers to Sir Thomas Wyatt's rebellion of 1554.

9 (No. 154) Of frendship. In every edition (No. [277] in B-I, sigs. Ff2^v-Ff3 in BC, P2^v-P3 in D-G, P3-P3^v in H, O3^v-O4 in I). Merrill (pp. 391-393) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

106. 14 brute:] brute.
 23 dothe] doth: led.] led:
 26 sicknesse] sicknesse
 29 fowl] fowle
 31 blisfull] blissful
 35 Menetus (see Variant Readings)] Menclus
 107. 2 frend] frend,
 3 ŷ] yat: kinde] kind

There is another copy in MS. Sloane 1896, fols. 39^v-40^v, which varies as follows:

106. 9 A Commendacion of friendshippe.
 11 the] this
 12 decayd] decayed
 13 MS. inserts:
 The golden estate of emperors,/ full sone doth weare away:
 & other precious thinges doe fade,/ freindshippe will never decay.

- 20 solace . . . one] may befall, then one for the 21 mayst] maiest
 24 see] mayest thou
 25 shall] may 26 sownd] also sound
 27 mayst] mayest: sure] true
 30 sprite] spirite
 32 didst] didest
 33 egall] equall
 35 Comes after 37 in the MS.
 36 cause] first cause
 107. 5 lo] nowe
 11 sayth] saiethe
 12 sins] sithe: kindely] Ioyfull
 13 frendful] freindly

Most of the ideas and proper names in No. 154 are borrowed in Turbervile's poem, "That it is hurtfull to conceale secrets from our Friendes" (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 170-173). The following lines (106. 20-23) are copied in MS. Rawlinson Poet. 108, fol. 7 (cf. 69. 31-32 n.):

what sweter solace shal befall then one to fynde
 vppō whose brest thowe mayst expose the secretes of thy mynd.
 He wayleth at thy woo, his tears wth thine be shedde, wth y^e dothe he all ioyes enioye so lefe a lyfe is ledde.

106. 32 Scipio with Lelius. Scipio (Aemilianus) Africanus the younger and Gaius Laelius were life-long friends. They are represented as the interlocutors (though M. Porcius Cato does most of the talking) in Cicero's De Senectute; while in the De Amicitia Laelius eulogizes and laments Scipio, who had died in 129 B.C., remarking (to follow John Harington's translation of 1550, sig. I), "Truely of all the thynges whiche fortune or nature gaue me, I haue nothyng to matche with Scipioes freendship."

34 Gesippus eke with Tite. The friendship of Gisippus and Titus Quintus Fulvius is celebrated in Boccaccio's Decameron, x. 8. For a list of books in which they are featured see Modern Philology, vii (1910), 580-581.

35 with Menetus sonne Achill, &c. Referring to the devoted friendship, as told in the Iliad, of Patroclus (Menoetius's son) and Achilles.

36 Euryalus . . . Nisus . . . Virgil. See Virgil's Aeneid, ix. 176-180.

107. 4-5 Cicero . . . to Atticus . . . Of frendship wrote. Cicero's De Amicitia is dedicated to Titus Pomponius Atticus (†32 B.C.), as is also the De Senectute. Furthermore, sixteen books of letters addressed to him by Cicero have survived.

14 (No. 155) The Garden. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 393-394) reprints the poem with the following variations:

107. 18 dothe] doth
 23 forow] forowe
 24 downe] down

107. 29 down] Om.
 32 bowz] bows
 33 yeeld] yeld
 34 All mirthfull] One word: ayre,] ayre
 36 harts] hartes
 37 drawes] draws 39 dothe] doth
 40 more,] more

Mustard (Modern Language Notes, xli [1926], 203) observes that No. 155 is a paraphrase of a Latin poem, De laude horti, reprinted in Alexander Riese's Anthologia Latina, 1906, pp. 101-102 (no. 635):

Adeste Musae, maximi proles Iovis,
 Laudes feracis praedicemus hortuli.
 Hortus salubres corpori praebet cibos
 Variosque fructus saepe cultori refert:
 Holus suave, multiplex herbae genus,
 Uvas nitentes atque fetus arborum.
 Non deficit hortis et voluptas maxima
 Multisque mixta commodis iocunditas.
 Aquae strepentis vitreus lambit liquor
 Sulcoque ductus irrigat rivus sata.
 Flores nitescent discolore germine
 Pinguntque terram gemmeis honoribus.
 Apes susurro murmurant gratae levi,
 Cum summa florum vel novos rores legunt.
 Fecunda vitis coniuges ulmos gravat
 Textasve inumbrat pampinis harundines.
 Opaca praebent arbores umbracula
 Prohibentque densis fervidum solem comis.
 Aves canorae garrulos fundunt sonos
 Et semper aures cantibus mulcent suis.
 Oblectat hortus, avocat pascit tenet
 Animoque maesto demit angores graves.
 Membris vigorem reddit et visus capit.
 Refert labori plenior gratiam,
 Tribuit colenti multiforme gaudium.

108. 2 (No. 156) An epitaph of sir Iames wilford knight. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 394) reprints the poem with the following variations:

108. 2 sir] Sir
 3 wilford] Wilford
 5 and] and the 11 wight.] wight

On Wilford see also Nos. 157, 182, 189. He was born about 1516, was brought up as a soldier, and fought in the French war of 1544-1545. In September, 1547, he was appointed provost-marshal of the English army invading Scotland under the Protector Somerset, by whom the Scots were disgracefully routed at the battle of Pinkie near Musselburgh. Immediately thereafter (September 28) Wilford was knighted by the protector at Roxburghe. He then served under Lord Grey de Wilton at the capture of Haddington. On Grey's recommendation to Somerset, Wilford was made governor of that fortress, in which he withstood a siege from the allied Scots and French for nearly eighteen months. Early in 1549 he was captured while leading an attack on Dunbar Castle, but apparently was exchanged in November. He died about a year later, and was buried on November 24, 1550, at St. Bartholomew the Less, London. Wilford is praised as "a worthy wight in deed" in The Firste Parte of Churchyardes Chippes, 1575 (Collier's reprint, p. 127).

108. 14 Laundersey, Muttrel. The French city of Montreuil was besieged by the Duke of Norfolk (the poet Surrey's father) in July–September, 1544. Bountiful information about it can be gained from the Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic, of the Reign of Henry VIII, vols. xviii, xix. In the official papers Montreuil appears as Monstreull, Mounstrel, Mustrell, Moultrell, and the like; but the spelling Muttrel used by Grimald is almost duplicated in the Muttrell mentioned by the Earl of Arundel, lord-deputy of Calais, in a letter dated February 26, 1543 (Letters and Papers, xviii, no. 211). Laundersey appears in the Letters and Papers (along with such spellings as Landersey, Landryssy, Landresye, and the like) as the English spelling of Landrecies, a city in France, some twenty miles southeast of Valenciennes. Abundant details about the military affairs of the city may be gathered from the official papers already mentioned and from Nott's Surrey (especially the Appendix, pp. xxxvi–xxxix). See further Crowe's History of France, II (1860), 557, where mention is made of "6000 English" who joined the armies of Charles V before Landrecies in 1543. Evidently Wilford was among the six thousand.

15 Musselborough, Haddington. On these Scottish towns see the notes to line 2, above. It should be added that the battle of Pinkie was and is often referred to as the battle of Musselburgh.

18 (No. 157) An other, of the same knightes death. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 394–395) reprints the poem with the following variations:

108. 22 bookes,] bookes
26 where] wher
31 earth] erth

The source of the poem is Beza's epitaph, "Eiusdem," that is, "Gulielmi Budæi, Viri nostræ ætatis doctissimi, qui Lutetiæ obiit anno M.D.XL. XIII. Cal. Septemb." (Poemata, 1548, pp. 42–43):

Budæum fleuere homines, plorauit & aër,
Budæus gelidis est quoque fletus aquis:
Sic fleuere homines, ut plena uolumina mæstis
Carminibus quiuis Bibliopola terat.
Sic aër luxit, consumptis undique nimbis,
Vt iam quas plueret non reperiret aquas.

Flumina sic flerunt, ut quâ modo nauis abibat,
 Currat inoffensis sicca quadriga rotis.
 Restabant cælum & tellus, communis ut omni
 Quanlibet immenso mæror in orbe foret,
 Sed quum cælum animam Budæi, terra cadauer Possideat, quæso, qua ratione fiant?

Beza's epitaph is likewise translated in Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577 (Spenser Society ed., pp. 156-157).

108. 22 that bookes, abrode which bee. I have seen no books on Wilford, but there are four distinct elegies (cf. 108. 2 n.) on him in the present volume. In any case, the remark was suggested by Beza's comment on Guillaume Budé, who died in 1540.

32 (No. 158) An Epitaph of the ladye Margaret Lee, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 395) reprints the poem with the following variants:

109. 2 what] is what
 4 nor] not
 6 world:] world;
 7 doolfull] doolful

Lady Lee was the daughter of Sir Henry Wyatt (hence she was the sister of the poet, Sir Thomas) and the wife of Sir Anthony Lee.

109. 7 Sleeps doolfull sister. That is, Death, referred to as masculine in lines 9-10. Sackville, in his "Induction," 1563, stanza 41, speaks of "heauy Sleepe, the cosin of Death"; Daniel, in Delia, 1592, sonnet 49, of "Care-charmer Sleep . . . Brother to Death." So in Hercules Furens, line 1069, Seneca calls Sleep "frater duræ languide Mortis." The Elizabethan sonneteers delighted in this personification, which was equally popular among French sonneteers.

14 (No. 159) Vpon the tomb of A. w. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 395) reprints the poem with the following variations:

109. 14 w] W
 17 Neybours] Neybors
 18 yeelding] yeeldig

A. W. is unknown. Possibly Merrill's suggestion is correct: namely, that she was Lady Anne Wentworth, daughter of Sir James Tyrrell, of Gipping, Suffolk; wife of Sir Richard Wentworth (according to the D. N. B., W. L. Rutton's Three Branches of the Family of Wentworth [1891], and other authorities, though his name is given as Robert in Copinger's Manors of Suffolk, II, 331, and Burke's Peerage); mother of Thomas, first Baron Wentworth, and of seven other children. Dates, however, are against this identification: Grimald was born (Merrill says) about 1520, Lord Thomas was born in 1501, Sir Richard died in 1528. For that matter, there were other Lady Anne Wentworths, one of whom — a daughter of Humphrey Tyrrell and the wife of Sir Roger Wentworth, of Gosfield — died in 1534 (see also 113. 34 n.). In any case, Grimald's A. W. had numerous children (109. 16), so that there can be no possible identity between her and the Lady Wentworth of No. 213; for the latter died in delivering her first child, itself still-born. But too few facts are given in No. 159 to permit any conclusive explanation of the initials A. W.

109. 22 (No. 160) Vpon the deceas of w. Ch. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 396-397) reprints the poem with the following variations:

- 109. 22 w] W
- 23 by:] by
- 24 doolfull] doolful
- 31 that ⁊] what
- 110. 8 so conioynd] conjoyned
- 16 dere:] dere?
- 18 complaintes] companions
- 35 lost.] lost,
- 36 renewe] renew: feastfull] featfull

This blind boy (cf. 109. 33-34) was W. Chambers, brother of the Nicholas mentioned in No. 161, and probably a student at Oxford. Grimald's elegy has more feeling than is usually shown in Elizabethan elegies.

110. 38 (No. 161) Of .N. Ch. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 397) reprints the poem with the following variations:

- 110. 38 .N.] N.
- 111. 5 Leste] Lest: afterfall] afterall
- 6 Saturnian] Saturniam
- 11 farewell:] farewell,

N. Ch. was Nicholas Chambers, the death of whose brother is lamented in No. 160. He may have been the Nicolas Chambers, who (Joseph Foster, Alumni Oxonienses, I [1891], 259) proceeded B.A. at Christ Church, Oxford (Grimald's own college), in 1547/8.

III. 12 (No. 162) A funerall song, vpon the deceas of Annes, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 398-400) reprints the poem with the following variations:

- III. 21 laws,] laws.
- 33 Phrygian] Phyrgian
- 35 dubble] double
- 39 place,] place
- 112. 2 face.] face
- 4 go?] go.
- 16 gan] can
- 22 seemd] seemed
- 23 bad,] bad
- 24 schools] schoold
- 26 reioyse] rejoyce
- 30 Temms] Temms,
- 31 O,] O
- 38 coomfort] comfort
- 43 Leste] Lest
- 113. 7 Nicolas] Nicholas

113. 14 reioyce.] rejoyce,
 21 But] By: doolfull] doolful
 23 verse,²] verse 24 still.] still
 28 dwell,] dwell.

Annes is, of course, a popular corruption of Agnes. As appears from 112. 29-30, Mrs. Grimald died sometime after January, 1552, when her poet-son left Oxford.

111. 23-24 Martius . . . at moothers boon, his ire. The reference is to Gaius Marcius Coriolanus, whose story is well known through the medium of Shakespeare's tragedy.

25 Sertorius. Quintus Sertorius, Roman statesman and general (†72 B.C.), whose affectionate attachment to his mother is casually referred to in his biography as written by Plutarch.

27 Dear weight on shoulders Sicil brethren bore. The brethren were Amphinomus and Anapus, who carried their parents to safety on their shoulders when an eruption of Mt. Etna was destroying country and people. They received divine honors in Sicily. Cf. Valerius Maximus, v. iv, ext. 4: "Notiora sunt fratrum paria . . . Amphinomus & Anapus . . . quod patrem & matrem humeris per medios ignes Aetnae portarunt."

30 charged necks with parents yoke. A reference to Cleobis and Biton, sons of the priestess Cydippe, whose chariot they once dragged for forty-five furlongs to the temple of Hera. See Herodotus, I. 31.

31 Nor onely them thus dyd foretyme entreat. "In earlier times not only parents were honored but (line 32) also nurses."

32-33 the noorsse, Caiet, &c. Caieta, nurse in the family of Aeneas. Tradition says that she was buried on a promontory in Latium since called Gaeta. Cf. the Aeneid, VII. 1-7.

35 Acca, in dubble sense Lupa ycleaped. Acca Laurentia, wife of the shepherd Faustulus. She was called lupa, first, because she nursed Romulus and Remus after they were taken from the she-wolf; and, second, because other stories made her out to be a prostitute and lupa to be the shepherds' name for her. Sir Thomas North, Plutarch's Lives, 1579 (ed. George Wyndham, I [1895], 72), phrases it: "The Latines doe call with one selfe name shee woulfes Lupas, and women that geve their bodyes to all commers: as this nurce . . . dyd use to doe."

39-112. 2 Hyades, Lyai, the Bulls fayr face. When Hyas was killed by a snake, his seven sisters, the Hyads, were so overcome with grief that Zeus in pity changed them into the seven stars which form the head in the constellation of Taurus, the Bull (or, as some have it, there were twelve or fifteen sisters, five of whom became the constellation Hyades and the rest the Pleiades). Grimald makes Lyaeus, or Bacchus, responsible for the stellification of the nymphs who had taken care of him as an infant.

112. 19 What gayn the wooll . . . the wed had braught. For wed read web: the wool is the raw material, the web the finished product. Probably had is a misprint for has or hath.

29 that fayr foord. Oxford.

113. 34 (No. 163) Vpon the death of the lord Mautrauers, &c. In A only, whence Merrill (pp. 401-402) reprints the poem with the following variations:

- 113. 34 the²] Om.
- 37 the] Om.
- 114. 2 race,] race.
- 5 arms] armes
- 21 your sire.] you sire,
- 23 bright,] bright
- 25 abide] abide.
- 27 Cesars] Caesars
- 28 And thus] And, thus
- 37 bent.] bent:
- 38 fine,] fine. apparently
- 39 Shelley] Shelly

Henry Fitzalan, Lord Maltravers, son of Henry, twelfth Earl of Arundel, was born in 1538 (according to the D. N. B. and other authorities, including Vicary Gibbs's Complete Peerage, I [1910], 252; but on p. 251 Gibbs states that his mother died on May 1, 1532, as does also J. E. Doyle, The Official Baronage of England, 1886, p. 83). He was knighted in February, 1547, was matriculated at Queen's College, Cambridge, in May, 1549, and was married to Anne Wentworth, widow of Sir Hugh Rich, in April, 1555. (Lady Anne [cf. the notes to Nos. 159 and 213], born in 1537, was the daughter of Sir John Wentworth [1494-1567], of Gosfield. Her first husband, Rich, died on November 1, 1554, only some six months after their marriage. For her third husband she chose the manager of her estate, William Deane, and when she died in 1580, she was buried with Rich in the Wentworth Chapel at Gosfield church. See Rutton's Three Branches of the Family of Wentworth, 1891, pp. 161-162.) Sent as ambassador to the king of Bohemia, Maltravers died of a fever at Brussels on June 30, 1556 (according to Vicary Gibbs, the D. N. B., and W. A. Shaw's Knights of England), and was buried in the cathedral there, "aged eighteen." But Grimald at 114. 31-33, as well as Haddon's Latin poem below, gives the day of his death as July 31 and his age as nineteen. It is worth noting that Henry Parker, Baron Morley, dedicated his translation of Petrarch's Triumphs (printed in 1554) to "the mooste towarde yonge gentle Lorde Matrauers, sonne and heyre apparaunt to the worthy and noble Earle of Arundel"; and also that Roger Ascham, in The Schoolmaster, 1570 (Whole Works, ed. Giles, III, 142), remarked, "Two noble primroses of nobility, the young Duke of Suffolk, and Lord Henry Matrevers, were two such examples to the court for learning, as our time may rather wish than look for again."

No. 163 is a translation from Haddon's Poemata, 1567, N2-N3 (pp. 97-99). Walter Haddon, LL.D. (1516-1572), was a scholar and an ecclesiastic of high repute, as the sketch in the D. N. B. evidences. His poem follows:

In Mortem Domini Matrauersi, comitis.

Nobilis Henricus qui Matrauersius heros,
 Stirpis Arundeliæ maiorum nomine prisco,
 Dictus erat, genus atque suum de gente trahebat
 Fitzallenorum, comitum virtute potentum,
 Quem pater excellens florentem viderat armis,
 Artibus, ingenio, dulci sermone fluentem,
 Consilio plenum, cuius transcenderrat annos
 Ante diem virtus veniens, grauitasque virilis,
 Clade ruit subita, generosam gloria mentem
 Dum subit, & nimium iuuenili pectore feruet.
 Cæsaris ad fratrem, Maria hunc regina Britonum, Legauit, iuuenem clarum, lectissima princeps.
 Fertur equis, volitansque via peruenit ad aulam
 Cæsaris, & summa commissum laude peregit.
 Munus, & ad magnam profluxit gloria famam.
 Sed venit in medios febris funesta triumphos,
 Tabificaque lue teneros depascitur artus.
 O miserande puer, nimiumque oblite salutis
 Ipse tuæ, nimium patriæ memor, atque parentis,
 Cur ita festinas? magnum est, moderare laborem.
 Sic patriæ seruire decet, seruire frequenter
 Vt liceat, seroque tuo succrescere patri.
 Sed tibi fortè placet vitam pro laude pacisci,
 Nec metuis mortem, tanto quæ splendet honore.
 Gloria non poterat certè contingere maior,
 Si tibi sexcentos donasset Iupiter annos.
 Primæ causa viæ fuit, & tibi causa laboris,
 Funeris atque comes processit Cæsaris aula.
 Sic, ô sic superi, iuuenis dignissimus astris,
 Fœlicem vitam conclusit morte beata.
 Cum Mariæ regnum quarto processerat anno,
 Iulius extremam lucem quam mensis habebat,
 Illa eadem, claro iuueni, lux vltima fulsit.
 Quattuor à lustris vnum si dempseris annum,
 Hæc Matrauersi morientis habebitur ætas.
 Sic Titus est Cæsar primis ereptus in annis,
 Sic puer est, princeps Eduardus, morte reuulsus.
 Parce pater lachrymis; ô Anglia siste dolorem.
 Fata fauent nulli, mors imminet omnibus hostis.
 Quod licet, hoc vnum Shelleius ore diserto
 Præstitit, vt grato nomen sermone celebret:
 Et tuus Haddonus, magnus viuientis amator,
 Ista tibi ponit studij monumenta prioris.
 Iamque vale, pubis nostræ lectissima gemma,
 Quo post Eduardum maius nil Anglia vidit.

114. 11 to Cesars broother sent. That is, sent as ambassador to King Ferdinand I (1503-1564) of Bohemia, the brother of Charles V, Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire.

34 Titus Cesar. Titus reigned only two years (79-81 A.D.), though he died at the age of about forty-one.

35 yong prince Edward. Edward VI of England (1537-1553). Cf. also line 43.

39 Hath Shelley used. This production is apparently unknown. Merrill's suggestion that it may have been written by Sir Richard Shelley (1513?-1589?), diplomat and grand prior of the Knights of St. John, is highly unlikely. Much more plausible candidates for its authorship would seem to be the T. Shelley whom in 1545 the poet Surrey described as "sometime my servant, and now a captain within this town" of Boulogne, France (Nott's Surrey, p. 180; Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic, of the Reign of Henry VIII, xx, part ii, p. 399); or the Edward Shelley (possibly the same person as the foregoing "T." Shelley), an attendant of Surrey's, whose bravery in fighting against the French was celebrated in a Latin poem by Chaloner (Nott, p. 180 n.; cf. Letters and Papers, xxi, part i, pp. 16, 336-337); or the Richard Shelley, servant to the deputy of Calais in 1541 (Nicolas, Proceedings and Ordinances of the Privy Council, vii, 111). A brave soldier named Shelley who was slain at Musselburgh, Scotland, is the subject of an elegy in Barnabe Googe's Eglogs, etc., 1563 (ed. Arber, pp. 70-71). The name Shelley seems in the first half of the sixteenth century to have been almost synonymous with fighting.

115. 2 (No. 164) Vpon the sayd lord Mautrauers death. In A only, whence Merrill (p. 402) reprints it. Its source is Beza's epitaph, "D. Io. Valentis, Regi à consilijs" (Poemata, 1548, p. 42):

Extincto nuper Respublica mœsta Valente,
Visa mihi secum sic gemebunda queri:
Sæpe alios fleui, dum sic raperentur, alumnos:
Causa tamen nunquam iustior ulla fuit.

8 (No. 165) The death of Zoroas, &c. In every edition (No. [278] in B-I, sigs. Ff3-Ff4^v in BC, P3-P4^v in D-G, P3^v-P5 in H, O4-O5^v in I). Merrill (pp. 403-406) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

115. 18 fare.] fare, 35 hee^{1,3}] he
116. 5 meetyng] mettyng
11 autum] autumn
16 heauen:] heaven,
18 sire] fire
19 makes] markes
20 dothe] doth
32 death:] death,
41 bothe] both

117. 5 quod] quoth
 6 thee,] thee: death,] death
 25 leste] lest
 26 blowes.] blowes,
 32 seg.] seg
 40 prayse] prase
 118. 4 honour] honor: procurde,] procurde.
 6 and,] and [See Variant Readings]

This poem, as George Steevens noted (Johnson and Steevens, The Plays of William Shakspeare, American ed., iv [1805], 389 n.), is a partial translation of the Alexandreis of Philippus Gualterus de Castellione (known as Gautier de Châtillon, Philippe Gualtier de Châtillon or de Lille, and so on), who flourished about 1170–1180. Grimald's lines 115. 12–15 (to the ayre) correspond to lines 1–3 of the Latin; his lines 115. 15 (from against) to 115. 18, to lines 30–31 of the Latin. The remainder of the poem (115. 19–117. 33) corresponds (though with a few omissions and considerable expansions) to Gualtier's lines 119–188, but with the final lines (117. 34–118. 8) apparently an original addition by Grimald. I reprint the Alexandreis from the edition published at Ingolstadt, Germany, in 1541 (liber III, D–D4^v), as being close in date to Grimald.

Iam fragor armorum, iam strages bellica uincit Clangorem lituum, subtexunt astra sagittæ, Missillumque frequens obnubilat aëra nimbus. Primus in oppositos prætenta cuspide Persas Ocius emisso tormenti turbine saxo	5
Torquet equum Macedo, quæ confertissima regum Auro scuta micant, ubi plurima gemma superbis Scintillat galeis, qua formidabile uisu Auriuomis patulas absorbens faucibus auras Igniti Dario præfertur forma draconis,	10
Quærentique ducem, quem primo uulnere dignum Obruat, obijcitur Syriæ præfectus Aretas, Cuius ab aurata uolitans. ac pendulus hasta, Vendicat astra Leo, galeam carbunculus urit, Primus Alexandri ualido transuerberat ictu	15
Chaldæus clypeum, sed fraxinus asseris arctum Non patiens aditum, fracto crepat arida ligno, Grauius occurrens ferro Pellæus Aretæ, Disijcit umbonem, qua barbara bulla diescit Principis in clypeo, nec eo contenta trilicis	20
Loricæ dispersit opus, cordisque uagatur Per latebras, animamque bibit letalis harundo, Occidit occisus, largo foramine manans Purpurat arua cruor, regem clamore fatentur Altisono uicisse suum, primumque tulisse	25
Primitias belli, faustum sibi prædicat omen Græca phalanx, lætosque ferunt ad sidera plausus Densantur cunei, Clitus & Ptolomæus in armis Conspicui, tanta leuitate feruntur in hostes,

In tauros quanta geminos rapit ira leones	30
Quos stimulat ieiuna fames, causamque furoris
Adiuuat excussæ grauis obligatio caudæ
Hic Ptolomæus equo Medum Doduntha supinat,
Pectora transfixum, cerebroque lucente gementem
At toto Clitus Artophilon euertere tentat,	35
Inque uicem sese feriunt, clypeisque retusa
Vtraque dissiluit obtuso lancea ferro.
Quadrupedi, quadrupes, armoque opponitur armus
Pectora pectoribus, orbisque retunditur orbe
Thorax thorace, gemit obruta casside cassis,	40
Nec mora, poplitibus ambo cecidere remissis
Vectores, uectique simul, similesque peremptis
Exanimis latuere diu, sec corpora postquam
Conualuere, prior reparato robore rectum
Inque pedes sese recipit Clitus, Artophiloque	45
Surgere conanti, solo furialiter ictu
Demetit ense caput, & terræ mandat humandum.
Præditus eloquio, bello, spetieque, sinistro
Fuderat in cornu græcum Maræus Iollam,
Vltor adest agilis stricto mucrone Philotas,	50
Et quia Maræum sonipes submouerat, Ochum
Comminus aggreditur, cuius latus ense bipertit
Interea multa sudantem cæde Philotam
Hycani cingunt equites, quorum agmina rumpunt
Impiger Antigonus, Cenex, Craterus, & ipse	55
Parmenio, sine quo nil unquam carmine dignum
Gessit Alexander, sed quæ peruenerit illi
Gratia pro meritis, magis arbitror esse silendum.
Antigoni iacet ense Phelax, Mida cuspide Cheni
Antiochum Crathæus adit, quem casside rupta	60
Extrahit exanimem curru, iungitque ruenti
Antomedonta suum, iam uiscera rupta trahentem
More suo ruit in Persas damnatus iniquo
Sidere Parmenio, cui regibus ortus. Hysannes,
Et Dimus incutiunt hastas lateri, manet ille	65
Immotus, stabilitque fugam pauitantis Orestis
Qui pedes exesæ tendebat in ardua rupis,
Hunc simul intuitus, perfossum pectus Hysannem,
Sternit equo, miserum profugumque restaurat in arma
Instantemque Dimum rapto mucrone lacerto	70
Cornipedis planta terit, in ualidumque reliquit,
His Agilon, his addit Helan, Arabemque, Cheromnum,
Parte alia Furit Eumenides, Persasque lacessit
Nunc gladio, nunc missilibus, mucrone Diaspem
Deijcit, Eumethij telum in pulmone cruentat.	75
Dissecat ora uirum, procerum conculcat acervos
Nec minus in dextra dum pugnat parte Nicanor
Sanguine spargit agros, humectat cædibus arua
Cui iuuenis facie diues, sed ditior ortu
(Quippe genus clarum referens à sanguine Cyri)	80

Obuiat Edimnus, clypeumque Nicanoris ictu Prouocat, ut laterem tectiuaga ueris in ortu Grando ferire solet, sed respuit aëris iram Tuta domus, uerum durato corde Nicanor
Irruit in facinus miserandæ cedis, eumque	85
Qua candens oculis aperit lorica fenestram Cuspide percellit, & lumine priuat utroque. Dumque per unius aditum scelus ausa, cucurrit Fraxinus alterius extinxit luminis usum.
Stabat ab auerso discriminis agmine duri (Clara propago Nini) princeps Niniuita Negusar, Doctus in obiectos dubia seuire securi, Doctus & à tergo iaculis incessere fata	90
Nunc iaculo, nunc ense ferit, nunc uero bipenni Excruciat cerebrum, iaculo perfoderat Helyn Actoridem, Dorilon gladio uiduauerat armo,	95
Fuderat Armogenam cæsa ceruice securi, Hunc ubi multimoda uastantem cæde Pelasgos Intuitus, stricto celer aduolat ense Philotas
Quaque super conum lucem uomit igne pyropus Pertundit galeam, sed lubrica discutit ictum, Non impune tamen descendit mucro, sinistram (Quam sibi forte manum fronti prætenderat) ante Amputat, ecce parat ulcisci dextra sororem	100
Cædibus exposita, & cædis secunda securim Librat & astanti casum casura minatur, Ereptamque sibi gemeret fortasse Philotas	105
Ante dies animam, sed equo prælatus Amynthas Opposuit clypeum, quem miro traijcit ictu Machina terribilis, medioque umbone recepta est,	110
Retrahere ardenti qua iungitur ulna lacerto Ense uiri instantis à pectore cæsa recessit, Excitat interdum uires dolor, ille recisis In bello manibus se corpus inutile cernens
Quod potuit fecit, & equo se obiecit Iollæ	115
Tresque ruere simul, periit perfossus Iollas, Et sonipes iaculis, sed nec tibi dure Negasar Missilium nimbus, nec tanta ruina pepercit. Iam latet herba madens terramque cadauera celant
Arua natant sanie, complentur sanguine ualles, Largus utrinque cruor, sed maior inebriat agros Persarum strages, rarescit barbarus hostis, Tabescitque animo, licet infinitus, eumque	120
Pauca manus Macedum non cessat cædere, quorum Defectum numeri feruens audatia suplet.	125
His igitur iam terga fugæ præbentibus instat Fulmineus Macedo, perque inuia tela, per enses Perque globos equitum, peditum stipante corona Ad Darium molitur iter, sed contrahit agmen
Exacreus, Dario quo nemo propinquior ortu, Hic dolor, hic gemitus, perit acris utrinque iuuentus	130

Inuoluitque ducum mors uno turbine turbam Seminat in Persas leti genus omne cruentas Excutiens Bellona manus, gemit iste recluso Guttare, traiecto iacet ille per ilia ferro,	135
Hunc sudis exercet, hunc fudit funda, uel arcus, Ille uomit saniem, fractis ceruicibus, illi Intestina cadunt, alium sibi uendicat ensis, Hic obit, ille obiit, hic palpitat, ille quiescit: Stabat ab oposito niueis preciosus in armis	140
Memphites Zoroas, quo nemo peritior astris, Mundanas prænosse uices, quo sidere frugum Defectum patiatur ager, quis frugifer annos, Vnde niues producat hyems, quæ ueris in ortu Temperies inpinguet humum, cur ardeat æstas	145
Quis dedit autumnno maturis cingier uuis. Circulus an possit quadrari, an musica formet Cælestes modulos, uel quanta proportio rerum Quattuor inter se, nouit quis sidera septem Impetus obliquo rapiat contraria mundo,	150
Quot distent à se gradibus, quæ stella nocium Impediat sæuire senem, quo sidere fiat Obijce propitius, Martem quis temperet ignis, Quam sibi quisque domum quærat, quod sidus in isto Regnet hemispherio, motus rimatur, & horas	155
Colligit, euentus hominum perpendit in astris. Parua loquor, totum claudit sub pectore cælum. Hic igitur stellis mortem sibi fata minari Contemplatus erat, sed enim quia uertere fati Non poterat seriem, penetrare audebat ad ipsum	160
Rectorem Macedum, toto conamine poscens A tanto cecidisse uiro, uitamque perosus Mortem parturiens, in primo fronte furoris Occurrebat ei, curruque premebat ab alto, Turbine missilium percussus principis orbem	165
Non solum iaculis, sed uoce probrisque lacessit, Atque ita, Neptanabi non inficienda propago, Dedecus æternum matri, quid uulnera perdis Ignauos agitans, in me conuerte furorem, Si quid ad huc uirtutis habes, me contere, cuius	170
Militiam claudit septemplex arca sophiæ, Et caput astriferum cuius tegit utraque laurus. Motus Alexander miseretur obire uolentis, Et placide subicit, proh monstrum, quisquis es (inquit) Viue precor moriensque suum non destrue tantis	175
Artibus hospitium, nunquam mea dextera sudet, Vel rubeat gladius cerebro tam multa scienti, Vtilis es mundo, quis te impulit error ad amnes [sic] Tendere uelle stygis, ubi nulla scientia floret, Dixit, at ille pedes terræ se mandat, eique	180
Qua se dissotians ocream lorica salutat Sauciat ense femur, & dedicat arua cruore,

Infremuit Macedo, Zoroæque ut parcere possit
 Admissum procul egit equum, sic ergo remotus
 Continuit bilem, uerum Meleager in illum
 Irruit, & Zoroæ qua cruri tibia nubit
 Cædit utrumque genu, tunc cætera turba iacentem
 Comminuunt in frusta uirum, stellisque reponunt.

185

115. 12 Now clattering arms, &c. The poem is written in blank verse, with perhaps an unintentional rhyme at 116. 35, 37. Similarly, rhyme appears in the next blank-verse poem at 118. 15, 17, 120. 14, 15.

13 taratantars clang. Notice in the Variant Readings the bad change made in B+. See my notes in the Handful, pp. 84-85.

26 Oxate ("Exacreus"), more commonly called Oxathres, was the brother of Darius III, whom he defended against the attack of Alexander. See Diodorus Siculus, xvii. 34, and Quintus Curtius, iii. xi. 8, vi. ii. 9.

33 Him down the club. "This one the club (strikes) down"; but the phrasing is changed in B+.

34 shinand. This northern form of the present participle was changed in B+ to shining.

116. 12 Whether the circle, quadrate may becoom. "Whether the circle may be squared."

18 What sterr dothe lett the hurtfull sire to rage. See the Latin, above (lines 151-152): "quæ stella nociuum Impediat sæuire senem."

36 Nectanabs bastard. Nectanebus, the last Pharaoh, the real father (according to the romances) of Alexander the Great by Olympias, wife of Philip II of Macedonia.

43 The seuenfold sophie of Minerue contein. That is, the sophie, or wisdom, of Minerva in its sevenfold branches—the trivium (including grammar, rhetoric, logic) and the quadrivium (arithmetic, music, geometry, astronomy).

118. 3 Camenes. The Camenae, prophetic nymphs of Italy, or sometimes identified with the Muses.

9 (No. 166) Marcus Tullius Ciceroes death. In every edition (No. [279] in B-I, sigs. Ff4^v-Gg^v in BC, P4^v-P5^v in D-G, P5-P6 in H, O5^v-O6^v in I). Merrill (pp. 406-408) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

118. 10 Therfore] Therefore: restlesse] restless 25 rode.] rode,
 27 sire] fire
 30 prone] prove
 35 Tullius,] Tullius
 119. 2 preserud] preserved
 9 safegard] safeguard
 22 thofspring] thoffspring: know:] knowe
 31 man,] man
 32 vnmoued.] unmoved,

- 34 Be] Bee
 37 swords] swords
 38 Herennius,] Herennius
 39 styl]?) styl,
 42 heap,] heap
 120. 2 paynt.] paynt:
 7 fall,] fall
 15 senslesse] senseless: stock] flock: gryzely] gryzley

The poem is translated from Beza's Sylva II, "Mors Ciceronis, Ex Lib. historiarum Liuij C.XX. & Vitis Plutarchi, & Valer. Max." (Poemata, 1548, 7-9):

Ergo ut uentorum rabiem, pelagique furorem
 Indomitum aspexit, fatis heu poscitur, inquit,
 Poscitur infelix Cicero: conuertite uela,
 Et me uicinæ moriturum reddite ripae.
 Scilicet has grates gladijs erepta tuorum
 Patria persolues? moriar, sic numina diuûm, 5
 Sic uoluere dei, seruata ut Consul in urbe
 Tullius intereat. nec plura effatus, ab imo
 Corde trahens gemitus memoratæ ad nomina Romæ,
 Imbre oculos, lachrymisque genas impleuit obortis. 10
 At licet assiduis exercita turba periclis,
 Inuiti lachrymas nautæ tenuere, diûque
 Obnixi sæuos pelagi transcendere fluctus,
 Omnia laxarunt iratis carbasa uentis,
 Et tandem incolumem statuerunt littore proram. 15
 Descendit mœstus Cicero, multoque labore
 Membra trahit confecta senex. simul undique magna Circunstabat herum seruorum turba, periclis
 Nec nimium stupefacta suis, nec tempore duro
 Pollicitam fractura fidem: pars apparat enses, 20
 Pars domino assistit, cæcæque ambage uiarum
 Lecticæ impositum ducunt, si fallere sæuos
 Antoni possint gladios, turbæque sequentis Euitare minas. Sic ibat Tullius ille, Tullius ille togæ princeps, magnique Senatus, 25
 Quum procul aduentare uiros, inimicæque signa
 Conspicit, & stricto mortem procul ense minantem
 Poppilium, cuius quondam seruauerat ipse
 Fortunas, uitamque rei, quum libera Roma
 Olim illum audiret, mirareturque tonantem. 30
 Iam quoque sæuus adest, & poscit Herennius hostem.
 Quid faciat? num fortè manus protendat inermes,
 Aut mercede petat ueniam? num flectere uerbis
 Defensi quondam conetur militis iras?
 Hæc ætas uirtusque uetant, & pectore in alto 35
 Fixus amor patriæ, Romæque cadentis imago.
 Vertite, ait, currus, plenis curratur habenis
 Immeritam in mortem: me pridem nuncia Phœbi Poscit auis, cæloque nouum coniungere ciuem

Iuppiter exoptat. Bruti Cassique beatæ	40
Viuite uos animæ. quod si non omnia nobis
Fata nocent, forsân nec nos moriemur inulti.
Iam uixi mihi Roma satis, me uita uereri
Acta uetat nigræ damnosa obliuia mortis.
Occidite, at noscent uenturi cuncta nepotes,	45
Æternâmque dabunt morienti hæc funera uitam.
Immò (aut fallor ego, & frustra tibi Roma creatus Augur eram quondam) non semper amica fauebit
Antoni Fortuna tibi, ciuésque peremptos
Tempus erit uictrix à te quo Roma reposcat.	50
Me iuuat interea speratum inuisere cælum.
Desierat. iugulúmque parans, immota tenebat.
Ora senex. Illum properantem in fata nec ipsi Aspiciunt equites læti, positóque furore,
Vt nudum uidere caput, canámque senectam,	55
Vix tandem inuiti lachrymas tenuère cadentes,
Et penè è manibus gladij cecidère cruentis.
Vnus torua gerens truculentus Herennius ora, Degeneres quid statis? ait. simul ense superbo
Colla secat, nec adhuc satiatur cæde: scelestum	60
Adiunxisse scelus sceleri iuuat. ergò disertis
Ausas Antoni uitam signare tabellis
Cædit & ipse manus. morientem uidit ab alto
Inuitus cælo Phœbus, piceáque refertur
Nube caput texisse diu. fleuère cadentem	65
Et flebunt Latiae æternùm Graiæque Camænæ.
Flexanimis uerò Pitho (mirabile dictu)
Sueta illi quondam tum res tum uerba loquenti
Suggerere, & suauì conspergere nectare linguam,
Vt patuit iugulus, fugiente aufugit amico,	70
Et terras, cheu nunquam reditura, reliquit.
Poppilius uolat intereà, truncóque relicto,
Antoni portat sæuis spectacula mensis.

118. 15, 17 end, shend. On this rhyme see 115. 12 n.

17 In citie saued that Consul Marcus shend. Not a very clear translation of "seruata ut Consul in urbe Tullius intereat" (lines 7-8).

33 Antonius, mentioned also at 119. 27 and 120. 2, 16, was, of course, Mark Antony.

39 Popilius, or Gaius Popillius Laenas, was a native of Picenum whom Cicero had once (according to custom, gratuitously) successfully defended before the courts of Rome.

119. 2 when Room as yet to free. "Quum libera Roma Olim" (lines 29-30).

4 Herennius, the centurion in command of the soldiers who captured and murdered Cicero near Caieta, or Gaeta (cf. III 32-33 n.), on December 7, 43 B.C.

120. 6 latine Muses, and the Grayes, they wept. A reference to Beza's text (line 66) shows that Grayes is used for Graiae, that is, Grecian.

8 Pitho. That is, Peitho, the goddess of persuasion.

14-15 there, bear. On this rhyme see 115. 12 n.

17 (No. 167) Of M. T. Cicero. In every edition (No. [280] in B-I, sigs. Gg^v in BC, P5^v in D-G, P6 in H, O6^v in I). Merrill (p. 409) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

120. 18 Tullie,] Tullie

19 spare:] spare.

21 bee] be

The source of the poem is Beza's "T. Liuij" (Poemata, 1548, p. 57):

Tumulum Tito nuper parabam Liuiio,
Quum sic Apollo iussit ut desisterem,
Hæc mortuos, inquit, decent, uiuit Titus.

A translation of Beza's poem appears in Kendall's Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, 18 (Spenser Society ed., p. 159):

Of Titus Liuius.

For Liuiie late a Tombe I gan ordaine,
what meanest thou Apollo said, refraine:
Such maner things become the dead (q he) but Liuiie liues, and still aliuie shalbe.

19 Cynthie. Beza has "Apollo," and evidently such was Grimald's own meaning, since in line 20 he refers to Cynthie (not Cynthia) as hee.

121. 2 (No. 168) The complaint of a louer, &c. In every edition (No. [138] in B-I, sigs. N2-N2^v in BC, G2-G2^v in D-H, F7-F8 in I).

15-16 And for her beauties prayse, &c. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 237, these lines are quoted as an illustration of "Etiologia," on which see 52. 30-33 n.

122. 37 (No. 169) Of the death of master Deuerox, &c. In every edition (No. [139] in B-I, sigs. N2^v-N3 in BC, G2^v-G3 in D-G, G3 in H, F8-F8^v in I). There is another copy — without title or signature and lacking the last two lines of A — in MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fols. 80-80^v, where it is preceded by a poem of Surrey's and followed by one of Thomas Norton's. Variants are:

123. 4 worldly] wordely

7 sort] state

8 Thuncertentie] vncertaynti

9 what . . . them] looke what thinges men most desire: those

10 Deuorox] Devers (so in line 19)

11 to] Om.

14 serued] serude

15 the] Om.: rest] laste

123. 17 pleasured] plesured: enmies] enimies
 19 Ne . . . was] Theseus frendshippe was not 24 Death, and the] his deathe and 26-27 Om.

Walter Devereux, third Baron Ferrers, who later was known as the first Viscount Hereford, died in 1558. His eldest son Richard (on whom this elegy was written) died in 1547, leaving a son Walter, who became the Earl of Essex and the father of Sidney's "Stella."

It has not previously been observed that No. 169 was composed by John Harington. His son, Sir John, in A Tract on the Succession to the Crown (A.D. 1602) (ed. C. R. Markham, pp. 74-75, Roxburghe Club, 1880), attacking the Jesuit Parsons (alias Dolman), remarks:

First therefore for your great love to my Lo. of Essex, his father and Graundfather, see how you and I might shake handes, I that when I first mett with your book was in Ireland with him [i. e., Robert Devereux, second Earl of Essex], I that in xx^{tie} yeares omitted no office of a kynde freind to him, I that had a father who wrote thus of his grandfather

A Cato for [sc. for] his head, his witt was surely suche, Theseus freindshippe not so great, but Deevrux was as much.

Which verse hath bene often applied to his Graunchilde's head by her [i. e., Queen Elizabeth] that might have saved his head, and wisheth as many think now she had done so.

Sir John evidently quoted the two lines (123. 18-19) from memory: hence the slight inexactness.

123. 6 as wee long vpward all. "As we all long to be (lifted) up in worldly success."

28 (No. 170) They of the meane estate are happiest. In every edition (No. [140] in B-I, sigs. N3-N3^v in BC, G3-G3^v in D-H, F8^v-G in I). There is an unsigned copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 9-9^v), with the following variants:

123. 32 by] through: do yelde] yeld up 33 The] my
 34 vnplaced] vnplaste
 35 If] and: riches lose his shape] riches leese his due 36 embraced] embraste
 37 hurt] harme: happe] sue
 124. 3, 4 riches] rychesse
 6 is] for: impacient] to stryf is bent
 15 rowe] rove
 17 well?] good
 19 ceasse] stay: you] all

For other poems on the same theme see the notes to No. 118.

Another copy of No. 170 appears in The Arbor of amorous Deuises, 1597, B2-B2^v, a miscellany attributed to Breton. Because of the rarity of that book I give the poem in full, correcting a few unmistakable misprints:

A Poeme both pithie and pleasant.

IF right were rackt and ouer-runne,
 And power take parte with open wrong,
 If force by feare doe yeeld too soone,
 The lack is like to last too long:

If God for goods shalbe vnplac'd,
 If right for riches leaues his shape,
 If world for wisdom be imbrac'd,
 The guesse is great much hurt may hap.

Among good things I prooue and find,
 The quiet life doth most abound,
 And sure to the contented mind,
 There is no riches may be found.

Riches doth hate to be content,
 Rule is enmie to quiet ease,
 Power for the most part is vnpacient
 And seldome likes to liue in peace,

I heard a Shepheard once compare,
 That quiet nights he had more sleepe,
 And had more merrie dayes to spare,
 Then he which ought his Flock of sheepe.

I would not haue it thought heereby,
 The Dolphin swim I meane to teach,
 Ne yet to learne the Faulcon flie,
 I roue not so farre past my reach.

But as my part aboue the rest,
 Is wel to wish and good to will:
 So till the breath doth fayle my brest,
 I shal not stay to wish you still.

124. 8-11 I hard a herdman once compare, &c. Collier (A Catalogue, Bibliographical and Critical, of Early English Literature, 1837, p. 298) points out an apparent borrowing of this passage in William Warner's Albion's England, iv. 20 (1602 ed., p. 96):

Well wot I, sooth they say that say more quiet nights and daies
 The Shepheard sleeps & wakes than he whose Cattel he doth graize.

These two lines are included in England's Parnassus, 1600, in editing which Crawford (1913, p. 472) remarks, "It seems likely that Warner here is alluding directly" to No. 170.

20 (No. 171) Comparison of lyfe and death. In every edition (No. [141] in B-I, sigs. N3^v-N4 in BC, G3^v G4 in D II, G G^v in I). Other copies are preserved in (1) MS. Ashmole 48, ca. 1555-1565 (Songs and Ballads, pp. 36-37, ed. Thomas Wright, Roxburghe Club, 1860); (2) in the Paradise, 1576, pp. 51-52, where it is signed D. S. (D. Sand); and (3) in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 10^v-11). Collations follow:

124. 22 that] whiche (2): doth] doeth (2)
 23 draw] drawythe (1)
 24 plages forepast] plage skarce past (3)
 25 Yelde] Yeldes (1-3)
 26 fele] fynde (3)
 27 The] That (2, 3): endeth] shortnythe (1), shorteneth (2), shortyth (3)
 28 Yet] And (1, 2)
 29 At] All (2)
 30 The Lord be prayسد] my God I thanck (3)
 33 doth¹] doeth (2): doth²] shall (3)
 34 pleasant] plesand (1): seme, so swifte that] sown so swyftly (1), semes so sweetly (2), seme so swyftlye (3) 35 that flete] they flytt (1)
 36 nightes] wights (2): day] daies (2): daweth] daws (1, 2), drawth (3)
 37 mete] hytt (1)
 38 Doe] Dothe (1)
 125. 2 be] lye (3)
 3 drede] shonne (3)
 4 alway] allways (1)
 7 Though . . . doth] But over whome onlye the Lord dothe (1), The hower wherein onely hym self doeth (2): the . . . alone] hymself doth only (3)
 8 burdens] burthynges (1): 8, 9 doth] doeth (2)
 9 he doth] yt (1)
 10 What . . . spring] what greefes do grow what daungers dayly springe
 (3): perilles] perill (2)
 11 sure] safe (3): dayes] tyme (1)
 12 as] and (2)
 13 were better] ys happyar (1, 2)
 14 a port] the doore (2): passe] drawe (2)
 16 dere] swet (1), dole (2): annoy] awaie (2)
 17 that . . . is] yt yeldythe all in (1)
 18 to] in (2): is] was (1, 3)
 19 likewise] Om. (1): likewise . . . fredome] by death is (was 3) free-dome likewise (2, 3)
 20 Wherefore] Therefore (1): men] flesshe (3)
 21 dissolude] dissolvdyd (1, 2): of] from (3): fleshy] fleshly (2)
 22 armed] armde (3)
 23 they be] we may be (1)
 25 To] And (2)

There is a reprint in an abbreviated form (consisting of 124. 22-27, 34-39, 125. 14-19) in Nugae Antiquae (1769, pp. 95-96; 1779, 1792, III, 269-270; 1804, II, 332-333), with the title, "Elegy wrote in the Tower by John Harington, confined with the Princess Elizabeth, 1554." This title, however, did not occur in the MS. followed by Henry Harington (a transcript of which is now

MS. Additional 28635); it was manufactured by him. Nott, who used the original MS., jotted down in his edition of the miscellany (C. 60. O. 13), "NB. This has no signature of John Harington: nor does it purport to have been written by him from the Tower, as it is said to have been in the Nugae Antiquae." Nevertheless, in the Nugae Harington introduced many readings not to be found in the MS. For example, 124. 25 is changed to "But some new grief, still green, doth marr our state."

124. 24 plages forepast. This is the earliest use of forepast, meaning past, given in the N.E.D. The word is used again at 137. 18. Cf. also Bartholomew Yonge, marginal note in his translation of Boccaccio's Amorous Fiammetta, 1587, P2^v: "Euery thinge refresheth the memory of the Louer of his forepassed and happy life"; and Robert Parry, Sinetes Passions vppon his fortunes, 1597, B4, "Long loathed lookes, of my forepassed life."

125. 14-19 Death is a port, &c. These lines (with dere [line 16] as neare, and is [line 18] as was) are quoted in Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600 (ed. Crawford, no. 282), over the signature of "E. of Surrey"; but there is no basis for that attribution (see the notes to No. 133). Lines 14-15 are borrowed, along with various lines from the Paradise, p. 52 (cf. p. 217), in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583.

20-24 with Paul let all men . . . pray, &c. See 2 Corinthians v. 1 and 2 Timothy ii. 3, iv. 6-8.

26 (No. 172) The tale of Pigmalion, &c. In every edition (No. [142] in B-I, sigs. N4-N4^v in BC, G4-G4^v in D-H, G^v-G2 in I). There is an unsigned copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 35^v), with the following variants:

- 125. 38 wandering] wandringe
- 126. 3 moued] mov'd
- 4 stayde] stayed
- 5 might] wolde
- 9 coucht] toucht
- 12 curious] envious

Perhaps the ballad of "Pygmalyn" that was registered for publication by Richard Jones in 1568-69 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 2087) was the same as No. 172. Imitated from the latter is William Fullwood's poem, "A secret Louer writes his will, By storie of Pigmaliions skill," in The Enimie of Idlenesse (1568).

126. 24 (No. 173) The loue sheweth, &c. In every edition (No. [143] in B-I, sigs. N4^v in BC, G4^v in D-G, G4^v G5 in H, G2 in I). Another copy, with music, will be found in John Forbes's Cantus, Songs and Fancies, song 25 (1666, 1682). It differs in so many particulars that I reprint it below (from the 1682 edition, but without reproducing its occasional single letters in italic type):

Like as the Lark within the Marleons foot,
 With piteous voice doth chirk her yeelding lay;
 Even so do I, since is no other boot,
 Rendring my Song unto your will obey.

Your vertue mounts above my force so hie,
 That vvith your beauties seas'd I am so sure,
 That there remains resistance none in me;
 But patiently your pleasure to endure.

And in your vvill my fancie shal depend,
 My life and death consists into your vvill:
 I rather vvould my life vvere at an end,
 Then in dispair this vvay continue still.

Wounded I am, with deadly darts dint,
 Fetter'd with fetters, dispairing of relief;
 Lying in langor as careful captive tint,
 And ye the cause of all my wo and grief,

And since there is no pity more in place,
 But that your cruelty doth thirst my blood.
 I am content to have no other grace,
 But let it out, if it may do you good.

Not so different from No. 173 is the copy (omitting the final two lines) preserved, with the music, in The Melvill Book of Roundels, 1612, ed. Bantock and Anderton, pp. 51-52, 203-204 (Roxburghe Club, 1916).

126. 26 Lyke as the lark within the marlians foote. Barnabe Googe, Eglogs, etc., 1563 (ed. Arber, p. 103), tells how the merlin

The selye Larke,
 doth take by force of flyght,
 And hyes to tree,
 where as she lodged late,
 And on the trem-blyng Byrde all nyght she stondes,
 To keepe her feete,
 from force of nyppyng colde.

A song with music in John Hall's The Courte of Vertue, 1565, Q2^v, begins:

Like as the larke within the marlions foote
 From solace supplanted it were with me,
 If thou lord wert not my buckler and boote:
 At whose hand I hope saluacion to see.

The conceit is also imitated by Turbervile, Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 34-35, in a poem beginning,

Like as the fearefull foule within the fawcons foote Doth yelde himselfe to die,
 and sees none other boote,
 Even so dread I (my deare);

and by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, sig. R: "Didst thou neuer read the properties of the pretie Merlin, who holding the Larke all nighte betwene her litle talantes to kepe her warme, assoone as it is morning vnfastens her holde, & lettes her flie, and marking which way she takes her flighte, will not all the day following set winge to that corner?" See also Melbancke's words quoted at 146. 7-10 n.

127. 2 (No. 174) Vpon consideracion of the state, &c. In every edition (No. [144] in B-I, sigs. O in BC, G5 in D-H, G2 in I). A copy in MS. Sloane 159, fol. 23, varies only in having longer for lenger (line 4) and merier for mery (line 13). These two variants, with the for that (line 20), appear also in the copy in MS. Rawlinson Poet. 85, fol. 115^v, which is signed "E of Surry." A copy of the last two stanzas (lines 10-21) is preserved in MS. Additional 26737, fol. 108.

The author of The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, pp. 216-217, highly approved of the rhetorical echo-device that makes up this poem. It may, he says, "be called the marching figure, for after the first steppe all the rest proceede by double the space, and so in our speach one word proceedes double to the first that was spoken, and goeth as it were by strides or paces; it may aswell be called the clyming figure, for Clymax is as much to say as a ladder." Other examples will be found in Googe's Eglogs, etc., 1563 (ed. Arber, p. 96), and in Turbervile's Epitaphes, etc., 1567, p. 222.

13 The mery minde. Read The merrier with D+ and the MSS.

22 (No. 175) The louer that once disdained, &c. In every edition (No. [145] in B-I, sigs. O-O2 in BC, G5-G6 in D-H, G2^v-G3 in I). A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 7^v-8^v) has the following variants:

127. 25-30 MS. reads:

Vnto my songe geve eare that wyl and deeme my doinges as you please for I shall tell yf you be still what trade I toke to lyve in ease and how those wayes that I way'd best in fyne did fayle to myne unrest.

- 31 time . . . of] dayes were once and very
128. 4 marked not] reckt no whit: lines 4 and 6 are transposed
6 forced not] toke no care
7 My . . . thinges] ffrome all suche thinges my hart
9 to] of
11 Where fortune laught] their woes I mockt: scorned] skorn'd
13 smiled] smylde
14 begiled] begylde
16 styll] forthe
21 length] last: spied] spyde 23 how] saw
24 still liue] liue still 26 threw] cast

128. 27 nature neuer] neuer nature 28 saue] but 29 as] that 30 A] an
 32 Her nature] nature her 33 euen] all 37 euer] that
 39 greues me] greevythe
 40 sortes] kyndes
 41 salue] heale
 42 But onely she] save she alone
 43 life] healthe
 129. 2 saue or slay] heale or hurt euen
 3 But seing] Wherefore synce
 4 bounde] fest
 5 ye] you: ensample] example
 6 That] whiche: fele] fynd
 7 not them] them not
 8 be . . . his] lack powre to flye the

This copy is carefully signed "huomo inconosciuto," but "in a later hand," Nott informs us in C. 60. O. 13. Nevertheless, Henry Harington printed six stanzas from it (corresponding to 127. 31-35, 128. 2, 9-38) in his Nugae Antiquae, 1769, pp. 91-92 (1779, 1792, III, 265-266; 1804, II, 334-336), under the unauthorized title of "Sonnet by John Harington, 1554." Since he omitted the first stanza, beginning his reprint with a variant of 127. 31 ("The days were once, and very late"), no detection of his shifty methods has hitherto resulted.

127. 29-30 And from the top of all my trust, &c. George Ballard, Memoirs of Several Ladies of Great Britain, 1752, p. 161, says that Mary, Queen of Scots, "wrote these two lines in a window at Fotheringhay [sic] castle.

From the top of all my trust,
 Mishap has laid me in the dust."

Hazlitt, editing Warton's History of English Poetry, IV (1871), 65, apparently objects to this statement, and refers vaguely to Willis's Current Notes, V (1854), 14. But I see nothing in that book relevant to the passage in question.

128. 41 salue the sore. A commonplace, repeated at 165. 15, 179. 29, 32, 181. 33, 211. 12.

129. 9 (No. 176) Of Fortune, and Fame. In every edition (No. [146] in B-I, sigs. O2-O2^v in BC, G6-G6^v in D-H, G3-G3^v in I).

130. 7 (No. 177) Against wicked tongues. In every edition (No. [147] in B-I, sigs. O2^v in BC, G6^v in D-H, G3^v in I). A broadside copy, signed "Finis, quod I. Canand" (on the same sheet with No. 180), is reprinted in Lilly's Ballads, pp. 149-150. It presents the following variants:

130. 9 slea] flea
 10 faute] fault

- 11 slaundring] sclaundring
 15 warre] hatred
 16 Ye] You: rich realmes] good order: and] and eke
 17 down right] downeright
 19 ye] you
 20 liues] liueth

130. 22 (No. 178) Not to trust to much, &c. In every edition (No. [247] in B-I, sigs. Cc^v in BC, N5^v in D-G, N6-N6^v in H, M8-M8^v in I). The poem is made up almost solely of proverbs and commonplaces.

131. 12 by flaming of the smart. That is, until my pain, growing unbearable, flames out and expresses itself against my will in words.

13 (No. 179) Hell tormenteth not, &c. In every edition (No. [148] in B-I, sigs. O2^v-O3 in BC, G6^v-G7 in D-H, G3^v-G4 in I). The poem is imitated in considerably expanded form by Turbervile's "Of the torments of Hell, and the paines of Love" (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 241-244).

20 The dropsy dryeth. Dryeth is a noun. Cf. John Hall, The Courte of Vertue, 1565, Q2, "Sometyme we call for dryth, Some tyme we aske for rayne."

30 (No. 180) Of the mutabilitie of the world. In every edition (No. [149] in B-I, sigs. O3-O3^v in BC, G7-G7^v in D-H, G4-G4^v in I). A copy preserved in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 118-119) has the following variants:

131. 32 By . . . bed] In dumppes but late wheare as I laye 36 I] even theare I: wofull] Om.
 132. 2 wayes] waves: mine] my
 3 this] the
 4 And . . . ygraunted] how sone from wealth ofte graunted
 5 it] yet
 7 my] moche
 8 me] some: my] the 10 in] an: lines 9-10 follow lines 11-12 in the MS.
 11 most straunge of all] a thinge moste straunge 12 her] the 13 lenger] longer: her] she 16 fleyng] Om.: seen] sene trulye
 17 saw] Om.: doe] Om.
 18 falleth] lyeth: lines 17-18 follow 25-26 19 my] our 21-22 Om.
 23 dothe] did
 25 eke vertue, how she sat] wheare Atrapose did sytt
 27-30 MS. adds:

I saw a lofte vppon the wheele/ honour in highe estate whose wretched end most eyes behelde/ loe, heare his fynall fate
 The happyste man theare I saw then/ who sought no greedy gayne but with his calling was content/ delighting in the meane
 I saw and heard the dolefull crye/ of people in the land
 How wickednes the world gan wylde / and had the upper hand

In place of Iudgement theare I saw/ with feare and cruell moode wheare wrong that blooddye beast was sett/ drincking the giltles bloode and when all theise with many moe/ I sawe moste perfektlye in me my thought eache one had wrought/ a perfect propertie then sighing said I thus o Lorde/ at thye moste dreadfull dome when riche and poore bothe good and bad/ before thie seat shall come thow lyke a just and ryghtuous judge/ there shalt rewarde eache wight according as he heare hath wrought/ to darknes ells to light.

Alexander Lacy registered a version of No. 180 in 1565-66 for publication as a ballad called "the fantises of a Trubbled mans hed" (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 861). That ballad, signed I. C. (that is, John Canand) and printed on the same broadside as No. 177, will be found in Lilly's Ballads, pp. 147-149. It presents the following variants:

131. 33 had] hath
 34 full] all 35 then] that
 132. 5 how enuy it] eke how Envie
 7 that] fowle
 13 lenger] longer: her] shee
 16 fleyng] flyeng
 19 the] a
 21 gayn] payne
 22 youthfull] youthly
 23 ant] ants: runne] rome
 24 her] their
 28 parfite] perfect

Another copy of No. 180 is included in the rare miscellany known as Breton's Arbor of amorous Deuises, 1597, B3-B3^v. Correcting a few unmis-takable misprints, I give it below:

Fantasma.

I N fortune as I lay, my fortune was to finde
 Such fancies as my carefull thought, had brought into my minde,
 And when each one was gone to rest, full soft in bed to lie,
 I would haue slept, but then the watch did follow still mine eye:
 And sodainly I saw a sea of sorrowes prest,
 Whose wicked waues of sharpe repulse brought me vnquiet rest.
 I saw this world, and how it went, each state in his degree,
 And that from wealth graunted is both life and libertie:
 I saw how Enuie it did raigne, and bare the greatest price,
 Yet greater poyson is not found within the Cockatrice;
 I also saw how that disdaine, oft times to forge my woe,
 Gaue me the cup of bitter sweete, to pledge my mortall foe:
 I also saw how that deceit, to rest no place could finde,
 But still constraind an endles paine, to follow natures kinde.
 I also saw most strange, how Nature did forsake the blood that in her womb was wrought, as doth the loathed snake.

I saw how fancie would remaine, no longer then her lust,
 And as the winde how she doth change, and is not for to trust:
 I saw how stedfastnes did flie, with winges of often change,
 A bird, but truely seldome seene, her nature is so strange:
 I saw how pleasant Time did passe, as Flowers in the Mead,
 To day that riseth red as Rose, to morrow lyeth dead.
 I saw my time how it did run, as sand out of the Glasse,
 Euen as each hower appoynted is, from tide to tide to passe:
 I saw the yeares that I had spent, and losse of all my gaine,
 And how the sport of youthfull playes, my folly did retaine:
 I saw how that the little Ant in Summer still doth runne,
 To seeke her foode, whereby to liue in winter for to come:
 I saw eke vertue, how she sate the threed of life to spinne,
 Which sheweth the end of euery thing before it doeth begin.
 And when al these I saw, with many moe perdie,
 In me my thoughts each one had wrought a perfect propertie:
 And then I sayd vnto my selfe, a Lesson this shalbe,
 For other that shal after come, for to beware by me.
 Thus al the night I did deuise which way I might constraîne.
 To forme a plot that wit might worke the branches in my braine.

132. 8 Gaue me the cup of bitter swete, &c. Cf. 71. 9-10 n.

15-16 I saw, how stedfastnesse did fly, &c. Borrowed by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, D2: "Thou seest how Stedfastnes doth fly w^t winges of often chaūg, a flying birde, but seldome seene, her nature is so straung."

23-24 the little ant in somer, &c. On this commonplace see Thomas Howell, 1568 (Poems, ed. Grosart, pp. 56-57); Geoffrey Whitney, A Choice of Emblems, 1586, p. 175; and the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 186.

33 (No. 181) Harpelus complaynt, &c. In every edition (No. [150] in B-I, sigs. O3^v-O4^v in BC, G7^v-G8^v in D-H, G4^v-G5^v in I). Percy reprinted the poem in his Reliques, 1765 (ed. Wheatley, II, 75-79), calling it (though he reprinted next to it Robert Henryson's Robin and Makyne) "perhaps the first attempt at pastoral writing in our language," — a remark approved of by Warton in his History of English Poetry (ed. Hazlitt, IV [1871], 62), — and asserting that it is "far superior" to Spenser's Shepherds' Calendar.

No. 181 was registered as a ballad entitled "Filida was a fayre mayden" at Stationers' Hall in 1564 65 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 889). It is summarized thus in the last poem in Fullwood's The Enimie of Idlenesse, 1568 (1593 ed., R4^v):

I read how Harpelus,
 faire Phillida did pray:
 But she with checking taunts and mockes his purpose did gainesay.
 The Gods regarding this,
 tooke pittie on his case,
 And punished her cruell fact,
 within a little space.

Her heart was shortly set on fire, with Corins loue:
 Who passed not a pin for her,
 as she did plainely proue.
 Whereby she pinde away,
 the like may chaunce to you.

In a similar fashion Stephen Batman, The trauayled Pylgrime, 1569, C2, writes:

The fatall chaunce and destenie of Herpelus his loue,
 Auailed not to molifie, although he long did proue,
 A thousande moe I coulde recite.

From B or some later edition No. 181 was included in England's Helicon, 1600 (ed. Macdonald, pp. 42-45), where a number of unauthorized variants were introduced into the text and the signature of "L. T. Howard, Earle of Surrie" added. Furthermore, England's Helicon (pp. 45-48) also has a sequel: "An other of the same subiect, but made as it were in aunswere," beginning, "On a goodly Sommers day," and signed by "Shep. Tonie," who is supposed to be Anthony Munday. An imitation of No. 181, "The complaint of the Shepheard Harpalus" (beginning, "Poore Harpalus opprest with loue, Sate by a christall brooke"), is to be found in Sir David Murray's Cælia, 1611 (Poems, E6-E7, ed. Bannatyne Club, 1823); and as a broadside ballad, signed D. M., it appears also in The Roxburghe Ballads, II, 605-607.

134. 25 your faythfull face. Read makes (= mates) with B+.

135. 20 (No. 182) Vpon sir Iames wilfordes death. In every edition (No. [151] in B-I, sigs. O4^v-P in BC, G8^v-H in D-G, H in H, G5^v-G6 in I). On Wilford see No. 156.

136. 4 er he step vs fro. For step read stepte with B+.

8 (No. 183) Of the wretchednes in this world. In every edition (No. [152] in B-I, sigs. P in BC, H in D-G, H-H^v in H, G6 in I). There is a copy in MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fols. 81-81^v, with the following variants:

136. 11 was] were 14 gette] clime: hye] eche
 15 the] this
 17 himself] them selves: hart] harts
 20 earth] yearte
 23 the] a
 24 hordst] hydste
 25 Thine] thy: swat] swett

26 (No. 184) The repentant sinner, &c. In every edition (No. [153] in B-I, sigs. P-P^v in BC, H-H^v in D-G, H^v-H2 in H, G6^v-G7 in I). Other copies are in (1) a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 37^v) and (2) MS. Sloane 1896, fols. 38-39^v. Collations follow:

136. 26-27 durance . . . aduersitie] aduersity prayeth vnto god for mercy (2):
no title in (1)
 29 the shell] my youth (2)

- 31 grate] call (2)
 32 thee O Lorde alone] thow alone o Lorde (1)
 34 way] race (1): liekt] lyked (2)
 36 The . . . throwen] The pathe that I pursude/ hath brought (1)
 137. 4 and] of (1)
 5 flee] flye (1)
 6 there] Om. (2)
 8 no place no houre no] no tyme no place nor (1): I shal] shall I (2)
 9 shall neuer] noe tyme shall (2) 10 to craue, to call] to call, to crave (2): which] that (1): sayth] sayeth (2)
 11 it] you (1)
 13 For] and (1)
 16 receiued] receav'd (1)
 18 the forpassed] me for passed (2)
 19 draw] draweth (2)
 20 lone] loue (2)
 21 threatened] threatned (1, 2)
 25 hope my trust] trust, my hope (2)
 26 saue the soule] sowle to save (1)
 28 all] Om. (1)
 29 knowledge eke] eke confesse (1) 30 I . . . dreade] to love and feare/ I ought (1): (1) ends here because the page is torn 32 walkt] walcked (2)
 33 sprite] spirite (2)

The poem is a mosaic of Biblical expressions, several of which are pointed out below.

136. 29 euen frō the shell. Cf. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, E^v, "to comit wealth to him which yesterday came out of the shell."

33 small scourge. Cf. John ii. 15.

137. 11 Knocke and it shalbe heard, but aske, &c. Cf. Matthew vii. 7-8; Luke xi. 9-10.

13 the one wandryng shepe. Cf. Matthew xviii. 12-13; Luke xv. 3-7.

17 for my helpe make haste. Cf. Psalms xxxviii. 22, xl. 13, lxx. 1, lxxi. 12.

23 Not my will lord but thyne, &c. Cf. Luke xxii. 42.

25-26 My fayth my hope, &c. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 223, these lines are quoted as an illustration of "Sinonimia, or the Figure of store," with the explanation that "Here faith, hope and trust be words of one effect, allowed to vs by this figure of store." Line 26 is indebted to Romans x. 21.

27 that thou so dere hast bought. Cf. Acts xx. 28, 1 Corinthians vii. 23, 1 Peter i. 18-19.

35 (No. 185) The louer here telleth, &c. In every edition (No. [154] in B-I, sigs. P2-Q^v in BC, H2-H5^v in D-G, H2-H6 in H, G7-H2^v in I). It is imitated by F. G. in the Paradise, 1576, pp. 30-31.

Nott (C. 60. O. 13) noted that the source of this poem was Petrarch's canzone in vita 1 (Rime, 23, pp. 17-23). Koepfel (Studien, p. 88) remarked that No. 185 "das ganze Liebesleben und -leiden Petrarca erzählt — mit dem einzigen Unterschied, dass der Engländer in die Geschichte seiner Liebe zwischen die Qualen und Zweifel des Werbens und den Tod der Geliebten eine kurze Episode vollen Liebesglückes eingefügt hat."

137. 39-138. 2-15 Sythe singyng . . . within my hart. Paraphrased from Petrarch (p. 17):

Nel dolce tempo de la prima etade, che nascer vide et anchor quasi in herba
la fera voglia che per mio mal crebbe, perché cantando il duol si disacerba, canterò com' io vissi in libertade mentre Amor nel mio albergo a sdegno s' ebbe;
poi seguirò sí come a lui n' encrebbe troppo altamente, e che di ciò m' avvenne, di ch' io son facto a molta gente exempio.

138. 37, 40 I spilt no teare, &c. I brake no slepe, &c. From Petrarch (p. 18):

lagrima anchor non mi bagnava il petto,
né rompea il sonno.

139. 22 The head (alas) dothe still remaine. A favorite conceit with the Elizabethans, as in J. C.'s Alcilia, 1595 (ed. Grosart, p. 9), "hastilie I plucked forth the dart [of Cupid], But left the head fast fixed in my heart."

140. 25 I gaue my teares. From Petrarch (p. 21), "a le lagrime triste allargai 'l freno."

30 Thus dranke I all mine owne disease. On this punning commonplace see my notes in the Handful, p. 97, and the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 206.

42-141. 2-3 Lowde would I cry . . . this grief. From Petrarch (p. 22), "chiamando morte et lei sola per nome."

141. 9 Lo, death is painted, &c. Cf. Petrarch (p. 20), "Morte mi s'era intorno al cor avolta."

19 that, that shalbe, nedes must fall. Cf. Romeo and Juliet, iv. i. 21, "What must be shall be"; Twelfth Night, iv. ii. 17, "That that is is"; Dryden's translation of Horace, iii. 29, st. 8, "what has been, has been."

26-29 I wrote . . . thyne. Cf. Petrarch (p. 20):

ond' io gridai con carta et con incostro:
Non son mio, no; s' io moro, il danno è vostro.

30-31 Herewith a . . . did stay. From Petrarch (p. 21):

Ben mi credea dinanzi a gli occhi suoi
d' indegno far così di mercé degno;
et questa spene m' avea fatto ardito.

143. 19 As to the pleasyng of my thought. Perhaps this phrase means, "What seemed to me (the highest place of all)."

144. 35 And earth dothe hide. From Petrarch, canzone in morte 1, stanza 4 (Rime, 268, p. 259): "Oimè, terra è fatto il suo bel viso."

145. 10 (No. 186) Of his loue named white. In every edition (No. [155] in B-I, sigs. Q^v in BC, H₅^v in D-G, H₆ in H, H₂^v in I).

25 (No. 187) Of the louers vnquiet state. In every edition (No. [156] in B-I, sigs. Q^v-Q₂ in BC, H₅^v-H₆ in D-G, H₆-H₆^v in H, H₂^v-H₃ in I). In A+ the poem has only thirteen lines. A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 144) supplies the missing line, thus restoring the two rhyme-royal stanzas. Its variants are:

145. 27 which] that
 28 yet it] and yet: denied] denyde
 29 receiued] receav'd
 30 vnoccupied] unoccupyde
 31 which] Om.: applied] applyde
 32 Still thus to seke, and] thus may I say I 33 newest] new
 34 In wilfull riches I have found povertie
 35 In] and in: liue I] I lyved
 36 In] in too: lacke my] lacked: · after this line the MS. adds:
 nothing but plentie caused my scarsenes 146. 2 am] was
 3 that] Om.: shall] should
 4 In] in a: suffer] suffred

The first seven lines (145. 27-33) are preserved also in MS. Harleian 78, fol. 29^v, along with an answer solving the "riddle." That copy runs as follows:

A Ridle

What thyng is that that I bothe have and lacke
 w̃ goodwill graunted and yet yt is denied alwayes forwarde and yet full fare put backe Ever more doinge and yet vnoccupied most slow in that ỹ I have most applied whearby I lese all that I wyne ffor ỹ that was readie is now to beginne

Aunswer

Love thou hast wch thou dost lacke
 w̃ goodwill graunted of her treuly but yet to graunt her frendes be slacke
 So ye be doinge and yet schasely [?]
 ffor slothe and fere you cane not wyne
 so you ar readie now to begyne

146. 5 (No. 188) where good will is, &c. In every edition (No. [157] in B-I, sigs. Q₂ in BC, H₆ in D-G, H₆^v in H, H₃ in I).

146. 7-10 It is no fire that geues no heate, &c. Borrowed (apparently along with 126. 26-27) in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, C2^v: "Thus when with fained tunes she hath chirpt her yelden laies, and perceiues that fauning can force no fancie, she will assay another way to flap the in the mouth with flimflam floutes, to dash the out of countenance, As that for one: It is no fyre that giues no heate, though it appeare neuer so hotte, and they that runne and cannot sweate, are very drye and leane godwot: but since I lende my loue to losse, fancy (saith she) farewell, adue dastarde."

Miss Elsa Chapin has suggested to me that lines 9-10 ("And they that runne and can not sweate, Are very leane and dry God wot") may perhaps be a reference to Sir Francis Bryan's supposed description of himself at 88. 28, "Though I seme leane and drye, withouten moysture."

15 New wine will search to finde a vent. Combined with line 17 and 148. 24-25 in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, Y2: "Thou maiest aswell be feareles, as he that holds y wolfe by the eares: new wine will seaech [sic] to finde a vent, and wit will walke where will is bent: when the winde is not in a good coast, we must ship our oares and further our course: venter & conquer."

25 There can no want of resident. That is, no lack of residents (no abundance of soldiers) can defend the castle successfully when Wit and Will and Diligence unite to assault it.

31 (No. 189) Verses written . . . of sir Iames wilford. In every edition (No. [158] in B-I, sigs. Q2^v in BC, H6^v in D-G, H6^v-H7 in H, H3-H3^v in I). On Wilford see No. 156. From line 34 it seems likely that the poem was first issued as a broadside-elegy with a woodcut picture.

147. 12 (No. 190) The ladye praieth, &c. In every edition (No. [159] in B-I, sigs. Q2^v-Q3 in BC, H6^v-H7 in D-G, H7 in H, H3^v in I). The poem was probably suggested by Surrey's Nos. 17 and 19, which it resembles in title and subject.

37 (No. 191) The meane estate is best. In every edition (No. [160] in B-I, sigs. Q3-Q3^v in BC, H7-H7^v in D-G, H7^v in H, H3^v-H4 in I). On this topic see the notes to No. 118.

148. 20-21 What helps the dyall to the blinde. Borrowed in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, Y2^v: "Alas, what helps the diall the blind, the clock the deafe, or wit him that wantes opportunitie?"

24-25 Shalbe as free from cares, &c. See 146. 15 n. and, for the proverb, see my notes in the Paradise, p. 234. Cf. also Mercurius Elencticus, November 5-12, 1647, p. 11, "The Members at Westminster have a Woolfe by the cares." In The Barons' Wars (1603), 1, 36, Drayton gives the proverb as "He's mad who takes a lion by the ears."

38 (No. 192) The louer thinkes no payne, &c. In every edition (No. [161] in B-I, sigs. Q3^v-Q4 in BC, H7^v-H8 in D-G, H8-H8^v in H, H4-H4^v in I).

149. 3 after paynes pleasure prest. For paynes read paine is with B+.

149. 14 The pore mā ploweth his ground for graine. The rhyme-word gain (as in D+*) might be expected. The idea is a commonplace. Cf. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, H4^v, "The plowmans toile hath hope that makes him till: Loue hath a sauce that makes his sorrow swete"; A. N., A true Relation of the Trauels of M. Bush, 1608, C4^v, "Spes alit agricolas: Hope nourisheth the Country-men. The hope of gayne causeth the labouring husbandman, not to feele the scorching heate of the summer, nor the hoary frosts of winter"; and the Paradise, 1576, p. 211.

23 And thus for rest to rage I reche. "Thus, instead of attaining rest, I attain the opposite of rest, — frenzy."

39 me ioy thus lesse reioyce. Read me ioylesse thus reioyce.

150. 4 so fast I folde. Probably F+ are correct in making I folde the preterite participle yfold.

8 (No. 193) Of a new married Student. In every edition (No. [162] in B-I, sigs. Q4 in BC, H8 in D-G, H8^v in H, H5 in I). Warton (History of English Poetry, ed. Hazlitt, iv, 64) remarks: "Sir Thomas More was one of the best jokers of that age, and there is some probability that this [poem] might have fallen from his pen." Professor H. H. Hudson has called my attention to a shortened version of No. 193 that appears in John Davies of Hereford's Wit's Bedlam, 1617, p. 5 (Complete Works, ed. Grosart, II [1878], last article). Thence it was reprinted in Samuel Pick's Festum Voluptatis, Or the Banquet of Pleasure, 1639, sig. G, and in Wit's Recreations, 1640, no. 192 (Facetiae, 1817 reprint, II, 106, J. C. Hotten's reprint, n. d. [1874?], II, 111, no. 388). Davies's lines run thus:

Fast and Loose.

Paphus was married all in hast,
And now to wracke doth runne,
So, knitting of himselfe too fast,
He hath himselfe undone.

Davies's title was suggested by some edition later than A.

In the margin of the Rosenbach copy of C a hand about as old as the copy itself (1557) has written:

gooe feede thie fylthie lustes
wth venus fylthie flames
J loue the lawe and muste
J care not for suche dames gooe tosse thy ladyes trayne let me aplye my bookes & see what thowe shalt gayne
when J gayne silluer hookes.

17 (No. 194) ¶ The meane estate is, &c. In every edition (No. [163] in B-I, sigs. Q4-Q4^v in BC, H8 H8^v in D, G, H8^v-I in H, H5 H5^v in I). This poem is a translation, more paraphrastic than the translations in Nos. 28 and 295, of Horace's Carmina, II. 10 (see pp. 152-153, above). With it might be compared the translation into "attempted" English sapphics as given in John Thelwall's Champion (see The Poetical Recreations of the Champion, 1822, pp. 107-108), beginning,

Safely shalt thou, Varro, direct thy vessel,
Neither seeking rashly the deep, nor steering
Near the faithless shore, when the storms attack thee, Fearfully sailing.

150. 24 left harme him happe awayting lest. The first word is a misprint for lest. I suppose the line (which has no equivalent in Horace) means, "lest harm come to him when he is least expecting it."

28 he put. The sense of the passage requires is put.

151. 8, 10 fraught, nought. This rhyme violates the regular octameter-couplet scheme, making lines 8-11 a quatrain. In lines 13, 15 blastes, frostes make a poor rhyme.

20-21 Not always il . . . rides the racke. This appears to mean, "It's not ill always, though now, while clouds are driven (by the winds), destruction rides for a time" — an expansion of Horace's sentence (cf. 26. 36), "Non, si male nunc, et olim sic erit."

22-23 Phebus . . . muse to wake. Horace writes, "quondam cithara tacentem suscitāt Musam neque semper arcum tendit Apollo." Cf. Surrey's translation at 26. 36-38.

28 (No. 195) ¶ The louer refused, &c. In every edition (No. [164] in B-I, sigs. Q4^v-R in BC, H8^v-I in D-G, I-I^v in H, H5^v-H6 in I).

30 I Lent my loue to losse, &c. This line is commended in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 191: "Whereas this worde lent is properly of mony or some such other thing, as men do commonly borrow, for vse to be repayed againe, and being applied to loue is vtterly abused, and yet very commendably spoken by vertue of this figure," that is, "Catachresis, or the Figure of abuse."

152. 23 (No. 196) The felicitie of a mind, &c. In every edition (No. [165] in B-I, sigs. R-R^v in BC, I-I^v in D-G, I^v-I2 in H, H6 in I). This poem is of considerable interest, for it is a fairly close translation of the opening lines of the second book of Lucretius's De Rerum Natura:

Suave, mari magno turbantibus aequora ventis,
e terra magnum alterius spectare laborem;
non quia vexari quemquamst iucunda voluptas,
sed quibus ipse malis careas quia cernere suave est.
suave etiam belli certamina magna tueri per campos instructa tua sine parte pericli.
sed nil dulcius est, bene quam munita tenere edita doctrina sapientum templa serena, despicere unde queas alios passimque videre errare atque viam palantis quaerere vitae, certare ingenio, contendere nobilitate,

noctes atque dies niti praestante labore
 ad summas emergere opes rerumque potiri.
 o miseras hominum mentes, o pectora caeca!
 qualibus in tenebris vitae quantisque periclis degitur hoc aevi quodcumquest! nonne videre nil aliud sibi naturam latrare, nisi utqui corpore seiunctus dolor absit, mente fruatur iucundo sensu cura semota metuque?
 ergo corpoream ad naturam pauca videmus esse opus omnino, quae demant cumque dolorem.

For other (partial) renderings of this passage see Sir Thomas North's translation of Amyot's preface to Plutarch's Lives, 1579 (ed. Wyndham, 1 [1895], 17), and Bacon's essay "Of Truth" (1625).

153. 10-11 Yea . . . delight is spent. These lines are not in the original.

12 (No. 197) All worldly pleasures fade. In every edition (No. [166] in B-I, sigs. R^v-R² in BC, I^v-I² in D-G, I²-I^{2v} in H, H⁶-H^{6v} in I). There is a copy in MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fols. 81^v-82^v, with the following variants:

153. 13 griesly] ougly
 14 lusty] tender: earth] yearthe
 15 don] do
 26 The] then: eates] eth: is Autumn] Autumn is 28 done] doo: whiche] that: had made so] left vs
 30 cūtinue] abyde
 34 No] what: morne] morow 36 dothe pronounce] gyues of the 38 Nor surged] no sugred
 154. 2 thence deliuer] helpe from thense the

No. 197 is a translation (with the omissions specified below) of Horace's Carmina, iv. 7, beginning,

Diffugere nives, redeunt iam gramina campis arboribusque comae;
 mutat terra vices et decrescentia ripas flumina praetereunt.

24-32 The Autumn . . . pleasure gon. Lines 24-28 represent a considerable expansion of Horace's phraseology, while lines 29-32 are inserted in place of the verses,

Damna tamen celeres reparant caelestia lunae;
 nos ubi decidimus,
 quo pius Aeneas, quo Tullus dives et Ancus, pulvis et umbra sumus.

34 my lyfe shall last. After this line the translator omits Horace's "Cuncta manus avidas fugient heredis, amico quae dederis animo."

35-40 For when . . . abyde & dwell. Horace's verses are:

Cum semel occideris et de te splendida Minos fecerit arbitria, non, Torquate, genus, non te facundia, non te restituet pietas.

154. 4 (No. 198) A complaint of the losse, &c. In every edition (No. [167] in B-I, sigs. R2-R2^v in BC, I2-I2^v in D-G, I2^v-I3 in H, H6^v-H7^v in I).

21 reason rasde through barke and rinde. "(That day) when my reason was utterly destroyed (by love)." "Bark and rind" seems to have much the same force (cf. 70. 37) as "root and branch."

155. 8-13 In whose calme streames I sayld, &c. Borrowed by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, sig. Y: "I raise a star whereto direct my course, in whose prospect my tackle faild, my compas brake. I threshed for corne, & all is turnd to chaffe."

24 (No. 199) A praise of his Ladye. In every edition (No. [168] in B-I, sigs. R2^v-R3^v in BC, I2^v-I3^v in D-G, I3-I4 in H, H7^v-H8 in I). There is a copy in MS. Additional 15225, fols. 16-16^v, dating about 1616, which is entitled "here followeth a song in praise of a Ladie," and which has the following variants:

- 155. 26 you] yea
- 37 lampe] lambe
- 156. 4 well] very well
- 15 the] a
- 18 redier] ruddier
- 20 feast] feastes
- 30 in her such] herselfe with
- 32 as] soe
- 34 Ielifloure a] gilliflower the
- 37 this] that

A copy in MS. Harleian 1703, fols. 108-109, made about 1572 by William Forrest, a Roman Catholic priest, is assigned to John Heywood, the well-known epigrammatist and playwright, with the statement that it celebrates Queen Mary I. It differs so greatly from the text in A as almost to be a new poem. A reprint follows:

A discription of A most noble Ladye, advowed by John Heywoode:
presently who advertisinge her graces, as face, saith of her thus, in much eloquent phrase,

Geue place, ye Ladyes all bee gone,
shewe not your selues att all,
ffor whye? behoulde, there cometh one whose face, yours all, blanke shall.

The vertue of her lookes, excelles the precious ston yee neede none other bookes to reade, or looke vpon

In each of her twoe iyes, ther smiles a naked boye,
 It woulde you all suffice too see those lampes of ioye.

Of [sic] all the worlde were sought full farre,
 who coulde finde such a wyght.
 Her beutye twinkleth like a starre,
 within the frostye night.

Her couler comes and gose,
 with such a goodly grace More ruddye then the rose within her liuely face.

Among her youthfull yeares,
 shee tryumphes over age,
 And yeat shee still appeares;
 boath wyttie, graue, and sage,

J thinke nature, hath lost her moulde, wher shee her forme dyd take,
 or ells J doubt $\ddot{y}$ nature coulde,
 so faire a creature make,

Shee maye bee well comparde,
 vnto the Phenix kinde,
 whose like hath not byn harde,
 that anye nowe can finde,

Jn Lyfe a dyane chaste,
 in truth Penelopeye, Jn worde and deede steedfaste,
 what neede J more to seye,

At Baccus feast: none may her meete,
 or yeat at anye wanton playe,
 Nor gasinge in the open streete,
 or wandringe, as a straye,

The mirth that shee doth vse,
 is mixt with shamfastnesse,
 all vyces shee eschues,
 and hateth Jdelnes.

Yt is A worlde to see,
 how vertue can repaire,
 And decke such honestee,
 in her that is so faire,

Great sute to vyce, maye some Allure,
 that thinkes to make no fawlte,
 Wee see a forte hadde neede bee sure,
 w^{ch} manye doth assaulte,

They seeke an endlesse waye,
that thinkes to wynde her love,
As well they maye assaye,
the stoney rocke to moue.

ffor shee is none of those,
that settes not bye evill fame,
Shee will not lyghtly lose,
her truth and honest name,

How might wee doo to haue a graffe,
of this vnspotted tree,
ffor all the rest they are but chaffe
in prayse of her to bee.

Shee doth as farre excede,
these women now a dayes,
As doth the floure, the weede,
and more, a thousande wayes.

This prayse J shall her geeue, when death doth what hee can,
her honest name shall liue,
within the mouth of man.

This worthe ladye too beewraye
a kinges doughter was shee,
Of whom John Heywoode lyst to saye,
in such worthe degree,

And Marye was her name weete yee,
with these graces Jndude,
At eightene yeares, so flourisht shee,
so doth his meane conclude.

This manuscript copy is reprinted, with modernized spelling and punctuation, in Thomas Evans's Old Ballads, III (1810), 120-123. From the final stanza ("At eightene yeares") it appears that, since Mary I was born in 1516, Heywood wrote his "Description" in 1534, and hence that Surrey (who was about seventeen in 1534) imitated Heywood in No. 20. Heywood's No. 199 was registered for publication as a ballad about May 11, 1561, under the title of "gyve place you Ladyes" and under the same title in 1566-67 (Rollins, Analytical Index, nos. 967, 968).

155. 30-33 The vertue of her liuely lokes, &c. Borrowed in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, C2: "the vertue of her thralling lookes so brauely gloste with glimsing grace, that thou wouldest wishe no other bookes to reade or looke vpon."

35 Smileth a naked boye. Love (Cupid) is reflected in her eyes.

156. 18 More redier to then doth the rose. That is, more readily; but the MS. has More ruddye, D+ have more ruddier.

157. 2 (No. 200) The pore estate to be holden for best. In every edition (No. [169] in B-I, sigs. R3^v in BC, I3^v in D-G, I4 in H, H8 in I). A copy, without a title, in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 137) differs in the following particulars:

157. 6 fate] state
 12 haue they] they have 13 fele] fynde
 14 they] the 15 the] their
 16 liues] lyv'ste

Other poems on the topic of the "poor estate" are listed in the notes to No. 118.

The initial letter of each line plus the final letter of the last line spell the name "Edward Somerset"; but the acrostic is given completely in B only; it is incomplete in A, and is not noticed at all in C-I or the MS. In his edition of the miscellany (p. vii) Arber listed Edward Somerset among the contributors to that volume; and he has been followed by nearly all subsequent writers, but not by A. F. Pollard, England under Protector Somerset, 1900, p. 321. Padelford, for example, in his Early Sixteenth Century Lyrics, p. 145, accepts the authorship of "Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset," saying, "This is the only extant poem of Somerset's, though his papers are voluminous." (Parenthetically, it may be noticed that Nugae Antiquae [1769, p. 86; 1779, 1792, III, 259; 1804, II, 328-329] contains "Verses found written by the Lord Admiral Seymour the Week before he was beheaded, 1549"; though Seymour, who became lord high admiral in December, 1542, was not beheaded till 1552. "A Sonet written upon my Lord admirall Seymour," preserved in MS. Additional 28635, fol. 3, is also printed in Nugae Antiquae directly after the "Verses.")

Now the fact that the poem has the acrostic "Edward [Duke of] Somerset" is no reason at all for thinking that Somerset was the author: it is far more reasonable to believe that it was written by some one else as a compliment to him. Thus in The Arbor of Amitie, 1568 (Poems, ed. Grosart, pp. 96-97), Thomas Howell has "A Poesie" with the acrostic Elisabeth Bradburne (a fact not noticed by Grosart), and there are other examples in H. His Deuises, 1581 (the same work, pp. 237-239). Kendall printed in Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, poems of his own composition which have the acrostics Henrie Knevet, Richarde Woodward, Paul Tooley, Mary Palmer (Spenser Society ed., pp. 266-267, 288-290); and Anthony Munday included in his Mirror of Mutability (1579) a poem in honor of his patron, Lord Oxford, with the acrostic Edward de Vere. Literally dozens of other examples could be cited, but a reference to Grimald's No. 141 and to 14. 9 n. will suffice. The claim of Edward Somerset (whether duke or commoner) for a place among the "uncertain authors" must therefore be dismissed. But a careful reading of No. 200 strongly suggests that the poem was written after the Duke of Somerset's execution in January, 1552: the first stanza seems to discuss his downfall ("Who climbs to raigne with kinges, may rue his fate full sore"), the second stanza to warn men to be content with humble estate.

157. 9 Deceiued is the birde, &c. See 30. 12 n.

18 (No. 201) The complaint of Thestylis, &c. In every edition (No. [170] in B-I, sigs. R3^v-R4 in BC, I3^v-I4 in D-G, I4-I4^v in H, H8^v in I). In the second idyll of Theocritus and the second eclogue of Virgil, Thestylis is a shepherdess (John Martyn, editing the eclogues [1829, pp. 15-16 n.] thinks that Thestylis was the cook-maid at Virgil's farm), and hence she appears as "a fair lass" in George Peele's Arraignement of Paris, ca. 1584, III. ii. In No. 201, as well as in the reply to it (No. 234), Thestylis is a man's name. A shepherd Thestylis appears also in Lodowick Bryskett's epitaph on Sidney, The mourning Muse of Thestylis, 1587 (published in Spenser's Colin Clout volume, 1595, G3), and in Francis Sabie's Pan's Pipe, 1595, eclogue III. No. 201 was reprinted, with some minor variations, in England's Helicon, 1600 (ed. Macdonald, pp. 52-53), as the composition of "L. T. Howard, E. of Surrie." The music for "Thestylis a seely man" (with no further words than these) is given in MS. Additional 4900, fol. 58.

158. 16 (No. 202) The louer praieth pity, &c. In every edition (No. [172] in B-I, sigs. R4^v-S in BC, I4^v-I5 in D-G, I5 in H, I-I^v in I). It is imitated by Turberville's "To his Love, that Controlde his Dogge for fawning on hir" (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 98-99).

24 he might her play and moue. The reading in B+ is pray and moue, which is perhaps correct.

32 (No. 203) Of his ring sent to his lady. In every edition (No. [173] in B-I, sigs. S in BC, I5 in D-G, I5-I5^v in H, I^v in I). The poem was possibly suggested by, and in any case resembles, Ovid's Amores, II. 15, "Anule, formosae digitum vincture puellae." It is imitated by Turberville's "To his Ring given to his Ladie, wherein was graven this verse: My hart is yours" (Epitaphes, etc., 1567, pp. 32-33). Dr. Leicester Bradner, in The Review of English Studies, IV (1928), 207-208, calls Nos. 203 and 231 "forerunners of the Spenserian stanza."

159. 5 (No. 204) The changeable state of louers. In every edition (No. [174] in B-I, sigs. S-S^v in BC, I5-I5^v in D-G, I5^v in H, I^v-I2 in I).

33 (No. 205) A praise of Audley. In every edition (No. [175] in B-I, sigs. S^v in BC, I5^v in D-G, I5^v-I6 in H, I2 in I). A copy in MS. Additional 23971, fols. 37^v-39, called "An Epitaphe vpon the dethe of M^r Thomas Awdeleye," is signed "qd. C.," which may represent (Thomas) Churchyard. The same MS. contains a long treatise on the art of war addressed by Audley to Edward VI. Both works are in one handwriting, probably that of a scribe, "Wyll goodal," whose name is signed on fol. 37. (Another copy of Audley's treatise is in MS. Tanner 103, fols. 30-47, Bodleian library; it has the title, "An introduccion or A. B. C. to the Warre dedicated to kinge Edward the Vjth the first yeaere of his regne by Thomas Audeley newelie corrected in the first yeare of Quene Marie by the sayde Thomas Audeley.") Variants between No. 205 and the MS. follow:

159. 36 lad] ledd

37 calde] called

160. 4 war long time] warres full Longe

5 Cald] called: MS. adds:

kyng Henry the viijth sent hym to Guynes
as provest marshall there/whose famous deedes in lytle tyme dyd floryshe everye where/

A tutour to thignorant,

A fathere to them all,

he tought them howe to lede there men

as chyefe and principall,

The worthiest men that yngland brede thes manye hundred yeres,

dyd thinke no skorne to lerne of hym

as nowe right welle apperes.

ffrom Guynes the kinge to bullen toke

This noble mars sonne,

and placed hym in tholde man

whan he the Tonne hade wone

his knowelledge gate suche credytt styll

The kinge to love hym thane

One of his privye chamber has

he made this worthy mane

and so he was vnto his sonne who sent this his lode starr, to skotteland as a Counseller,

in tyme of cruelle warre,

6 tornay] Jurneye: there] that: refusde] refused

7 exploit] Expoyete: after this line the MS. adds:

And fyrst of all his trueth was tryede

his faythe was throwzelye knownen

whan Wyat dyd foresake the fylde

& at lenghe [sic] his men overthrown, what can be named that vertuous ys

but he thereof hade parte,

In everye poyente to Souldyers all a mastere of the Arte

8 fierce] free: the] all

9 In] A: yet] ye

10 that] if: defame] dyspraise

11 life] tyme: MS. adds:

Thoughe fame helde vpe his name a lofte

yt fortune kepte hym lowe and worthy welthe dyd hym forsake

as his poure ende dyd showe

Some men wolde hys dedes deserved greate recompense to haue but what lefte he behynd but fame
 when he wente to his grave Althoughe his meryttes clamed rewarde his fortune was so yll, when othere men there suetes obtayned
 he was forgotten styлле,

160. 13 No hard mischaunce] nor no myschange
 14 loued] beloved: mislikt] myslyked
 15 And . . . not] where ever he went eche man him caled
 16 doth cause] will haue
 17 to . . . greuous] for to escape his 18 ground] grave
 19 ygraue in] in stone or: shall stand] shalbe
 20 lies] lyeth: hateth] hated: vertues] vertuouse
 21 name in earth] fame one earthe: deserues] deserved:

The subject of No. 205 is not John Tuchet (or Touchet), Lord Audley (†ca. 1558), or Thomas Audley, Baron Audley (†1544); it is Thomas Audley, a captain at Guisnes. See Letters and Papers, Foreign and Domestic of the Reign of Henry VIII, xvii, 275, 325, 331, etc. About February, 1546 (the same work, xxi, pt. 1, pp. 118, 200-201), Henry VIII appointed him lieutenant of the Old Man in Boulogne with a salary of thirteen shillings fourpence a day and with ten assistants. He was also gentleman usher to Henry VIII, who willed him two hundred marks (the same work, pt. 11, 322; Dasent, Acts of the Privy Council, 11, 101). On August 21, 1548 (Dasent, 11, 217), the Privy Council sent Audley "northward," giving him fifty pounds for the journey; and on September 7, 1549 (Dasent, 11, 323), it granted him fifty pounds "in reward for bringing Ket," the rebel. It is somewhat ironical that Audley's name is omitted from the D. N. B. "Why, what are thou," asks Barnabe Rich, in A Right Exelent [sic] and pleasaunt Dialogue, betwene Mercury and an English Souldier, 1574, sig. B, "that doest not yet know the noble Captaine Audley, whose prouesse and valiaunce, as it hath made him famous to euery inferiour person, so hee is lykewise honoured of each renowned wight"?

160. 6 What tornay was there. Though tornay (tourney) appears in all the editions, sense and the MS. show that the word should be journey.

8 In towne a lambe in felde . . . a lyon. Cf. Gascoigne, A Hundreth Sundrie Flowres, 1573 (ed. Ward, p. 119), "In felde a lion and in towne a childe, Fierce to his foe," etc.; Gabriel Harvey, A New Letter of Notable Contents, 1593 (Works, ed. Grosart, 1, 277), "The brauest man is such a personage, as I haue elsewhere described: A Lion in the field, a Lamme in the towne," etc.

22 (No. 206) Time trieth truth. In every edition (No. [176] in B-I, sigs. S^v-S₂ in BC, I5^v-I6 in D-G, I6 in H, I2-I2^v in I).

Very different versions of this poem appear in the Gorgeous Gallery, 1578, pp. 47-48, and a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 137^v). Below I reprint the one in the Gallery, with collations from the MS. in foot-notes:

¶Of a happy wished time.¹

Eche thing must haue a² time, and tyme doth try mens troth,³
 And troth deserues a special trust, on trust great frenship groth:
 And freendship is full fast, where⁴ faythfulnesse is found
 And faythfull thinges be⁵ ful of fruicte, and fruitful thinges be⁶ sound
 The sound is good in prooffe, and prooffe is Prince of prayse,
 And woorthy prayse is such a pearle, as lightly not decays.
 All this doth time bring forth, which time I must abide,
 How should I boldly credit craue? till time my truth⁷ haue tried.⁸
 And as a time I found, to fall in Fancies frame,
 So doo I wish an⁹ happy time, at large to shew the same.
 If Fortune aunswer hope, and hope may haue her¹⁰ hire,
 Then shall my hart possesse in peace, the time that I desire.

There is a later copy, with the title "Tempus omnia probat. ffestina lente," in MS. Additional 26737, fol. 107. The idea of the poem was perhaps suggested by Ecclesiastes iii. 1-8.

160. 35 (No. 207) The louer refused, &c. In every edition (No. [177] in B-I, sigs. S2-S2^v in BC, I6-I6^v in D-H, I2^v in I).

Other copies are in (1) MS. Additional 17492, fols. 68-68^v, and (2) the Gorgeous Gallery, 1578, p. 45. Each has two stanzas not in A-I. The latter copy is entitled "The desperate Louer exclaymeth his Ladyes cruelty and threatneth to kill himselfe." The former, without a title and written in a villainous hand, changes the singular her to the plural the(y) throughout. Collations follow:

161. 2 youthfull yeres are] ioyful dayes bee (2): yeres] days (1)
 3 ioyfull dayes] pleasant eres (1), pleasant yeres (2): are] be (2)
 4 may not last] dothe bot wast (1)
 5 am one] haue won (1)
 6 ioyes are] al ys (1, 2)
 8 Desirous] Desyer (1), Desireth (2)
 11 amids the] in midst of (2)
 12 she dothe] the do (1)
 13 is my most] most I do (1, 2)
 14-17 follow the new stanza added in (2) after line 25
 15 lyfe] dethe (1, 2)
 16 she] the (1)
 17 That is my] I se my (1, 2): deadly] ffryndly (1), cruell (2):
 (1) inserts:

¹ Om. ² his ³ tryes out mens trouthe ⁴ never fayles/ when ⁵ faithfulnesse is ⁶ are ⁷ trothe ⁸ tryde ⁹ a ¹⁰ his

I se the know my hart and how I cannot ffain
I se the se my smart and how I leff yn pane.

161. 18 how] that (2): she] the (1)
19 yet she] yt the (1)
21 She] The (1): sekcs] se (1), seeketh (2)
22 she doth] the do (1)
24 nie] by (1)
25 she] the (1): after this line (2) inserts:

I see shee knoweth my harte
And how I doo complayne,
I see shee knoweth my smarte
Shee seeth I doo not fayne.

- 26 will ye] wold you (1, 2)
27 She] the (1): will] wold, (1, 2)
28 you] shee (2)
29 she] the (1): her] ther (1)
30 with] by (2)
32 will] would (2)
33 To . . . good] yff yt myt do them (1), which adds:

the shal haue ther reqwest and I must haue my mend lo her my bloody brest
to ples the $\frac{w}{v}$ vnkynd

In (2) the final stanza is:

Shee shall haue her request
And I will haue mine ende,
Lo heere my blouddy brest
To please her most vnkinde.

161. 15 I see my lyfe also. The antithesis on which the poem is based shows that lyfe should be, as in the other versions, death.

34 (No. 208) The Picture of a louer. In every edition (No. [178] in B-I, sigs. S2^v in BC, I6^v in D-G, I6^v-I7 in H, I3 in I).

162. 26 (No. 209) Of the death of Phillips. In every edition (No. [179] in B-I, sigs. S2^v-S3 in BC, I6^v-I7 in D-G, I7 in H, I3-I3^v in I). Grove's Dictionary of Music (ed. J. A. F. Maitland, III [1907], 708) gives a number of facts about a composer, Philip van Wilder, known as "Mr. Philips," who in 1538 was appointed lutenist to Henry VIII and keeper of His Majesty's musical instruments, and who in 1550 was made a gentleman of the Privy Chamber by Edward VI. Since No. 209 stresses Phillips's skill as a lutenist, it seems not unlikely that this Phillips was Philip van Wilder.

163. 2 (No. 210) That all thing sometime finde ease, &c. In every edition (No. [180] in B-I, sigs. S3-S3^v in BC, I7-I7^v in D-H, I3^v in I). The theme and various lines of this poem remind one of Surrey's No. 265; the style suggests Thomas Churchyard.

163. 21-28 The owle with feble sight, &c. Park (in Warton-Hazlitt's History of English Poetry, iv, 63 n.) remarks: "The turn and texture of these stanzas would appear to be derived from the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Luke, viii. 20, and ix. 58."

37 (No. 211) Thassault of Cupide, &c. In every edition (No. [181] in B-I, sigs. S₃^v-S₄ in BC, I₇^v-I₈ in D-G, I₇^v-I₈^v in H, I₄-I₄^v in I). A partial copy in MS. Harleian 6910, fols. 175-175^v (ca. 1596), has the following variants:

163. 37-39 Title om.

164. 4 battry] batterie

9 aray] awaye

17 the fort] them forth

20 Expence of Powder he spar'd not

23 discharged] discharging: MS. ends with line 23

No. 211 was registered for publication as a ballad, "the Cruell assaulte of Cuydes forte," in 1565-66 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 430). A moralization called "The Cruel Assault of Gods Fort" (ca. 1560), the composition of the printer-poet John Awdelay, is reprinted in J. P. Collier's Old Ballads, pp. 29-37 (Percy Society, 1840), and in H. L. Collmann's Ballads and Broad-sides, no. 3 (Roxburghe Club, 1912). In the Gorgeous Gallery, 1578, pp. 31-33, there is "An exellent [sic] Sonet, Wherin the Louer exclaymeth agaynst Detraction, beeing the principall cause of all his care. To the tune, when Cupid scaled first the Fort," which borrows not only the idea of No. 211 but also several of its phrases outright.

The author of The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, pp. 246-247, in discussing "Pragmatographia. or the Counterfait action", remarked: "In this figure the Lord Nicholas Vaux a noble gentleman, and much delighted in vulgar making, and a man otherwise of no great learning but hauing herein a maruelous facillitie, made a dittie representing the battayle and assault of Cupide, so excellently well, as for the gallant and propre application of his fiction in euery part, I cannot choose but set downe the greatest part of his ditty, for in truth it can not be amended." He then quotes 164. 2-23, making some changes in the text. Percy, reprinting the poem in his Reliques, 1765 (ed. Wheatley, II, 50-53), rightly decided that the author was not Lord Nicholas Vaux, but was Lord Thomas Vaux.

164. 19 Stode in the rampyre. "Stood on the rampart." Cf. Churchyard, A pleasant Discourse of Court and Wars (1596), B₃^v, "No walls nor rampire could hold out A lions hart in manly minde."

165. 13 youe eye. Read your eye.

16 (No. 212) The aged loue renounceth loue. In every edition (No. [182] in B-I, sigs. S₄-T in BC, I₈-K in D-G, I₈^v-K in H, I₄^v-I₅ in I).

This poem is ascribed to Lord (Thomas) Vaux in (1) MS. Ashmole 48, ca. 1555-1565 (Songs and Ballads, pp. 34-36, ed. Wright, Roxburghe Club, 1860) and (2) MS. Harleian 1703, fols. 100-100^v, the last page of which is dated by the copyist, William Forrest, Roman Catholic priest (cf. the notes to No. 199), October 27, 1572. Other copies are preserved in (3) MS. Additional 38599, fols. 134^v-135 (ca. 1611), and (4) MS. Additional 26737, fol. 107^v. The last, which it is not necessary to collate, contains only thirty-two lines arranged in the curious order 165. 18-39, 166. 2-3, 24-27, 4-7. Collations of A with the three other MS. copies follow:

165. 16-17 No title in (1): A dyttie or sonet made by the lorde vaws in time of the noble queene Marye representinge the Image of deathe (2), A verie pretie songe of an ould man (3)
18 that] what (1)
20 requires] requyrth (2)
21 thinkes] thinke (3)
23 My] And (1): be] are (2, 3)
24 tract] trake (1)
25 vpon] within (2)
27 clawed] clawd (1, 2), caught (3): cowche] crutche (1-3)
28 life] youth (2, 3): she] he (1, 2), doth (3): leapes] leape (3)
30 not] not me (1)
31 Me as] As she (1), As it (3): she did] hathe done (1, 3)
32 are] ys (1)
33 they haue] yt hathe (1)
35 This] Thes (1), all (2): youthly idle rime] youthfull wyldish toyes
(3): rime] ryemes (1)
36 to me she] on mee hee (2)
37 these toyes in time] thos trykes be tyemes (1), in tyme these Ioies (3):
in time] betyme (2)
38 brow] browes (3)
166. 2 Say] Saythe (1-3): will hedge] must lodge (1), hath caught (2)
4 harbinger] harberger (3)
5 To] Towardes (1)
7 Dothe bid] Which bydes (1)
9 a shrowdyng] wyndinge (2)
11 For] Of (1): most] full (1)
12 the] Om. (2)
13 That] Which (1): knols] knylles (2), touns (3): knell] bell
(1-3)
14 wofull] merye (1), wearye (2, 3)
15 Er] Or (1): lines 24-27 follow 15 in (3)
16 kepers] keper (3): knit] knytes (1, 3)
17 That] Which (1), whome (3): did] doth (2), haith (3): laugh]
laught (3)
18 me] hyme (1): clene shalbe] shal be clene (1, 2): in (3) the line runs, Which nowe awaie is cleene forgott 19 I] he (1), om. (3): had not ben] had never be (2), never had (3) 20 Thus] This (2): in (3) the line runs, Which youth [sic] I nowe yeelde vpp: 20-23 follow 27 in (1)

- 24 Loe here] Behowld (1): bared] bare head (1, 2), parched (3)
 25 signe] skyne (1), signes (2, 3)
 26 stoupyng] lympyng (1), crooked (3)
 27 Which] That (1-3)
 28-31 Om. in (1, 3)
 32 ye] youe (1-3): bide] byedes (1), do staie (3): behinde] begyne (1)
 33 ye] youe (1-3): none] no (3)
 34 As ye of claye] but as of claye y' [ye 3] (2, 3): ye] youe (1):
 were] are (1): cast] mayd (1, 2): by] be (1) 35 ye] youe (1): waste] turne (1-3): followed in (1) by Fynys, quod lord Vaws.

Lord Vaux's authorship of the poem is also confirmed by George Gascoigne, who in the preface, "To al yong Gentlemen," to his Posies, 1575 (Complete Poems, ed. Hazlitt, 1, 9), remarks: "What! shoulde I stande much in rehersall how the L. Vaux his dittie (beginning thus: I loth that I did loue) was thought by some to be made vpō his death bed?"

No. 212 was registered for publication in 1563-64 as a ballad, "the Aged lover Renownceth love," and perhaps on October 19, 1579, as "an olde louers complaynt" (Rollins, Analytical Index, nos. 48, 2005). The Gorgeous Gallery, 1578, pp. 35-37, contains a poem "to the Tune of I lothe that I did loue." Chappell (Popular Music of the Olden Time, 1, 216-217) gives two tunes for this poem, the first from "the margin of a copy of the Earl of Surrey's poems," the second from MS. Additional 4900, fols. 62^v-63. He observes also that "on the stage the grave-digger now sings them to the tune of The Children in the Wood," the music for which he prints at 1, 200-201.

Lord Vaux's poem is immortalized, as everybody knows, by the three stanzas which, in an intentionally corrupt form, the first grave-digger sings in Hamlet, v. i. 69 ff.:

In youth, when I did love, did love,
 Methought it was very sweet,
 To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,
 O, methought, there was nothing meet.

But age, with his stealing steps,
 Hath claw'd me in his clutch,
 And hath shipped me intil the land,
 As if I had never been such.

A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade,
 For and a shrouding sheet:
 O, a pit of clay for to be made
 For such a guest is meet.

What might be called a second immortality was conferred on Vaux's poem when Goethe introduced two stanzas of it into Faust, part II, v. 6 (Werke, ed. E. Schmidt, 1 [1909], 614), where Lemures sings:

Wie jung ich war und lebt' und liebt'
 Mich deucht, das war wohl süsse;
 Wo's fröhlich klang und lustig ging,
 Da rührten sich meine Füße.

Nun hat das tückische Alter mich
 Mit seiner Krücke getroffen;
 Ich stolpert' über Grabes Tür,
 Warum stand sie just offen!

With the opening line of No. 212 compare the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 17 ("Would God I had no cause to leaue that I did loue, Or lothe the thing that likt mee so"), and Alexander Craig's Amorose Songes, 1606, 15, ed. Hunterian Club, p. 137 ("Not, that I loath, where I so long did loue").

165. 26 age with stelyng steppes. Perhaps Vaux had a good deal to do with popularizing this alliterative phrase. It is used, for example, by T. H. (Thomas Howell?) in The fable of Ouid tretynge of Narcissus, 1560, A2^v ("Wyth stealyng steppes, she [Eccho] foloweth fast"); by Howell in The Arbor of Amitie, 1568 (Poems, ed. Grosart, pp. 25, 30); by Kendall in Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, E3^v-E4, Spenser Society ed., pp. 86-87 ("Old croked age with stealyng steps, encrocheth on by kynde").

27 clawed me with his cowche. Instead of cowche all the MSS. and B+ read crutch or crowch. Percy, reprinting the poem in his Reliques, 1765 (ed. Wheatley, 1, 179-182), gave crowch in his text, but remarked in a foot-note: "Crowch perhaps should be clouch, clutch, grasp." Goethe (see just above) borrowed two stanzas for Faust from Percy's reprint, and it speaks well for his knowledge of English (as Bayard Taylor, Faust, 11 [1871], 528, remarks) that he emended Percy's text to crutch, translating the phrase as "mit seiner Krücke." Shakespeare (see the note to line 16) has clutch.

28 lusty life away she leapes. The MSS. read youth for life, which seems more fitting.

166. 4 The harbinger of death. On the traditional messengers of death see my notes in the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 192, and the Paradise, p. 218.

16 My keepers knit the knot. Percy suggests, "Alluding perhaps to Eccles. xii. 3"; but the suggestion is far-fetched.

36 (No. 213) Of the ladie wentworthes death. In every edition (No. [183] in B-I, sigs. T in BC, K in D-G, K-K^v in H, I5-I5^v in I). The lady in question was probably Mary, daughter of Sir John Wentworth, of Gosfield, Essex, who on February 9, 1546, became the first wife of Thomas, second Baron Wentworth, of Nettlestead, Suffolk. She died sine prole (as the poem tells) about 1555. See W. L. Rutton, Three Branches of the Family of Wentworth, 1891, pp. 51, 55, 139. For other Lady Anne Wentworths see the notes to 109. 14.

167. 13 (No. 214) The louer accusing hys loue, &c. In every edition (No. [184] in B-I, sigs. T-T^v in BC, K-K^v in D-G, K^v-K2 in H, I5^v-I6 in I).

167. 16-25 The smoky sighes . . . swaruyng. There is a long discussion of this passage in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 85, based upon its meter, "where one verse is of eight an other is of seuen [feet], and in the one the accent vpon the last, in the other vpon the last saue on[e]." The passage is rendered thus:

*The smoakie sighes, the bitter teares
That I in vaine haue wasted
The broken sleepes, the woe and feares
That long in me haue lasted
Will be my death, all by thy guilt
And not by my deseruing
Since so inconstantly thou wilt
Not loue but still be sweruing.*

Line 16 is also quoted (p. 261) to illustrate alliteration, with bitter arbitrarily changed to trickling.

26 To leue me oft. Probably oft should be off, the reading of B+.

168. 7 The one, byrdes feedes, the other slayes. A somewhat similar statement about the holly is made in the Encyclopaedia Britannica (11th ed.): "The berries provoke in man violent vomiting and purging, but are eaten with immunity by thrushes and other birds." The Elizabethan herbals are, so far as I can find, silent on this point; but Melbancke (Philotimus, 1583, sig. Y) remarks, "The Hollin [sic] tree beareth barke, & berries, the one kills birds, the other feedes them."

11 That Adrianus paynted. Borrowed by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, sig. Y: "Adrianus painted grapes so artificially, that birds pecked at them, neither could any descerne them, but with diligent marking." The story, however, is usually told of Zeuxis; hence the old annotator of I (Bodleian) emended the line to read, That paynter Zeuxis paynted.

23 By Naulus hate so odious. Professor Magoun has shown me that Naulus is a curious error for Nauplius, king of Euboea, whose son Palamedes had been falsely accused of treason by Agamemnon, Diomedes, and Odysseus, and stoned to death. The "hate so odious" refers to the revenge Nauplius took on the Greeks, as they sailed from Troy, by placing false lights on the promontory of Caphareus, and thus wrecking many ships. See Propertius, Elegies, iv. i. 115, "Nauplius ultores sub noctem porrigit ignes," and the abundant information in Hyginus's fables, cv, cxvi, ccxlix.

26 (No. 215) The louer for want of his desyre, &c. In every edition (No. [185] in B-I, sigs. T^v-T² in BC, K^v-K² in D-G, K² in H, I⁶ in I). The poem greatly resembles No. 244; perhaps the same man wrote both.

35 As Chameleon that lackes the ayre so sote. Turberville, Tragical Tales [ca. 1574], 1587 (1837 reprint, p. 298), remarks that the "Chameleon feedes but on the ayre, the lacke whereof is his decay"; and Robert Chester, in Love's Martyr, 1601 (ed. Grosart, pp. 112-113, New Shakspeare Society, 1878), tells of a species of chameleon:

The Stellio is a beast that takes his breath,
 And liueth by the deaw thats heauenly,
 Taking his Food and Spirit of the earth,
 And so maintaines his life in chastitie,
 He takes delight to counterfeit all colours,
 And yet for all this he is venomous.

The blame for this misinformation rests upon Pliny's Natural History, xi. 31.

168. 37 salamandra repulsed from the fyre. Turbervile (place cited in the foregoing note) says,

The Salamander cannot liue without the help of flaming fire;
 To bathe his limnes in burning coales,
 it is his glee and chiefe desire.

See Pliny, x. 86, xxix. 23.

169. 2 (No. 216) A happy end exceedeth all, &c. In every edition (No. [186] in B-I, sigs. T2 in BC, K2 in D-G, K2-K2^v in H, I6-I6^v in I). Tottel printed only the first stanza of a long poem that is preserved in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 120^v-121^v). The whole poem runs as follows:

No wight hym self happie can call before the end whiche shewith all.

The sheening season heare to some the glorye great even of dew right renowned fame throughe fortune wonne
 the glyttring goolde the eyes delight the censuall lyfe aye seemyng sweete the hart with joyfull dayes replete the thinge theare to eache wight is thrall
 the happie end exceedith all.

The merrye meane who so can hytt that stable state aye standing sure the chaste wyfe by thie syde to sytt whose vertue may thy love assure suche faithfull frendes as for to trust treasure, to serve, but none to rust theise guiftes moste rare they vanyse shall the happye end exceedith all

The hardie hartes that Mars doth sarve when blooddye battails joyne in fight the fyrye strokes for to desarve the lawrell greene even of due right the Coward knightes turning their backes the Victour, of his conquest crackes the Valyaunt to the varlett thrall
 the happie end exceedith all.

The symple soule that toylethe still by sweatt of browes to eate his bread of Venus lawes hath he no skill ne Bacchus trobleth nought his head eache golden hall he doth detest his thackyd howse hym lyketh best yf contentacon hym befall his happie end exceedith all.

In Ceasers seate who lyst to sytt with Bodkins brought to shamefull end Catoes cunning and his witt that with dispaire durst not contend Hercules honour, and yett be brentt Ryche as Cresus, in Orientt whome Syrus made to serve as thrall
 the happye end exceedith all

Over thye head now dothe depend hanging by Subtylle twyned threede Immortall fame whiche dothe assend
 Upp to the Starres who so can reede
 Tells contraye, for aye suche shame
 As crewell Nero had by name
 So that no wight happie I call before the end whiche shewith all.

A poem by D. S. (D. Sand) in the Paradise, 1576, pp. 25-26, is written in imitation of the MS. copy, which obviously had been in circulation. Its refrain is "The happy ende exceedeth all," and in its fourth stanza it borrows also line 7 of the first MS. stanza, in its fifth, line 7 of the fourth MS. stanza. Another imitation is Thomas Howell's "The Commendation of the meane in all thinges," in Newe Sonets, and pretie Pamphlets, ca. 1568 (Poems, ed. Grosart, p. 130; cf. also p. 218), which ends:

Which prooves what change or chaunce do fall,
 Contented meane exceedeth all.

169. 13 (No. 217) Against an vnstedfast woman. In every edition (No. [187] in B-I, sigs. T2 in BC, K2 in D G, K2^v in H, I6^v in I). A copy signed "L Vawse" (Lord Thomas Vaux) is in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 139^v), with the following variants:

169. 15 that delights] delighting
 16 tottryng] tossing
 17 iestres depraueres] gesters depravers: swete] all 18 whence] wheare
 19 enuironned] envenomyd: dispite] spight
 20 doest] will

17 iestres depraueres. These are feminine nouns, as is also tauntres in line 15.

169. 19 serpent enuironned wth dispite. The reading of the MS., envenomyd, must be adopted.

21 (No. 218) A praise of Petrarke, &c. In every edition (No. [188] in B-I, sigs. T2-T2^v in BC, K2-K2^v in D-G, K2^v in H, I6^v in I).

170. 5 (No. 219) That petrark cannot be passed, &c. In every edition (No. [189] in B-I, sigs. T2^v in BC, K2^v in D-G, K2^v-K3 in H, I6^v-I7 in I). This sonnet has the rather odd rhyme-scheme abba caac deed ff. There is another copy of it, with no variant readings, in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 36^v).

22 (No. 220) Against a cruell woman. In every edition (No. [190] in B-I, sigs. T2^v-T3 in BC, K2^v-K3 in D-G, K3-K3^v in H, I7 in I).

30 causels. Read causeles.

171. 4 Slipper and secrete, &c. This line should have been indented in A. 15-16 Knowest thou . . . From out my hart that could haue the bereft. "You know, unkind, that nothing could happen that would tear you from my heart." A line has been omitted after 16, as the faulty ottava rima shows. The printer may have failed to observe the omission because of the defective stanza-indentation.

19 (No. 221) The louer sheweth what he would haue, &c. In every edition (No. [191] in B-I, sigs. T3-T3^v in BC, K3-K3^v in D-G, K3^v-K4 in H, I7^v in I).

172. 22 (No. 222) The lady forsaken of her louer, &c. In every edition (No. [192] in B-I, sigs. T3^v-T4^v in BC, K3^v-K4^v in D-G, K4-K4^v in H, I8-I8^v in I).

36 A very lyfe here must I passe. For six new lines added here in B+ see the Variant Readings.

173. 23-28 But since it will not better be, &c. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 203, these lines are quoted because they "very pretily" use the figure of "Hyperbole. or the Ouer reacher, otherwise called the loud lyer."

35 (No. 223) The louer yelden, &c. In every edition (No. [193] in B-I, sigs. T4^v-V in BC, K4^v-K5 in D-H, I8^v-K in I).

174. 30 (No. 224) That nature which worketh, &c. In every edition (No. [194] in B-I, sigs. V-V^v in BC, K5-K5^v in D-H, K-K^v in I).

175. 16-17 The sters . . . to the mariner, &c. On this commonplace see 4. 8 n.

34 (No. 225) when aduersitie is once fallen, &c. In every edition (No. [195] in B-I, sigs. V^v in BC, K5^v in D-G, K5^v-K6 in H, K^v in I). On the anagram (T-A-W-I-T) of Wyatt formed by the initial letters of the stanzas see the notes to 230. 22.

Other copies are in (1) MS. Ashmole 48, ca. 1555-1565 (Songs and Ballads, pp. 1-2, ed. Wright, Roxburghe Club, 1860), and (2) MS. Additional 17492, fols. 42-42^v. In the former the order of stanzas — each ending with the refrain "So often warnd" — is 2, 4, 6 (not in A-I), 3, 5, 1. The new stanza runs thus:

He is in welth that feleth no woe;
 But I maye syng and thus reporte, Farewell my joye and plesure to,
 Thus maye I sing withought comforte;
 For sorrowe hath caught me in her sner;
 Alas! why colde I not be ware,
 So often warnd?

Other variants in the two copies are:

175. 34-35 Title, Tempore quo fodiebam (1)
 38 worketh] workes (2)
 176. 2 to 2¹ in (1, 2)
 3 that makes] whyght make (1), wych made (2): after 3, 9, 15, 21
 (2) adds so often warnd
 4 Amid] Amyddes (1), Ameds (2)
 6 without] to have (1, 2)
 9 Should] Wolde (1): haue] A (2)
 10 wold] cold (2)
 11 bring me] have broght (2)
 12 But] For (1): feard] fearedde (1)
 13 harme] greff (2): the line in (1) is And all is com bye myne owne suyte
 14 when] wher (2)
 15 then hapt all] ther I fflownd (2): chiefe] cheffest (2): in (1) the line is Then forthwyth came all myne unreste 16 neuer] newer [?] (1)
 18 me] my (1)
 19 harme] woo and payne (1), payn (2): welth] whelt (2)
 20 There is no] was never (2)
 21 hath] had (2): cause . . . mone] hap to wayll and grown (2):
 to] Om. (1)
 23 trust no more] not to trust (2)
 24 My] For (1): bred] hathe (1), has (2): me] don (1) 25 brought] tovrned (2): the line in (1) is And tourned my welthe to great grevance
 26 whom] that (1, 2): spare] here (1)
 27 when] weane (1): his] Om. (1), our (2): (2) adds thus am I warnd

176. 28 (No. 226) Of a loue that made, &c. In every edition (No. [196] in B-I, sigs. V2-V2^v in BC, K6-K6^v in D-H, K2-K2^v in I). A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 9^v-10) presents the following variants:

176. 31 you] ye
 32 And] or: present] presentes
 34 imbrace] embrace
 35 the circumstaunce] my case more playne
 36 them selues that did auaunce] well skyld themselves did payne 38 vertues] frindshippes
 177. 4 I] than 5 none] no
 9 is] was 11 such] all

177. 12 onely that was] that was only 14 Whom riches] one richesse.
 15 to] her
 16 wordes] tearmes
 18 did enioy] had enjoyed
 19 Lord who lyv'd in so pleasant cace
 21 fowle] great
 23 the] a: none] no
 25 as no man by hymsself sett more
 26 so much was] was so moche
 27 when care had creapt in every part
 28 thought of her] frindly thought
 29 neuer care had caused] care had never caws'd
 31 Was] that: so] more 32 I toke suche care for her alone
 33 That] as
 35 to them selues] unto hym
 36 So my swete graffe] my graffed sweete: growen] growne 37 Where] that: I] is 39 transformed] transform'd: to] into 40 pleased me] pleas'd now me
 41 hart] hope 43 may] must
 178. 4 the more to] for my more
 6 ye] you

178. 8 (No. 227) Vpon the death of sir Antony Denny. In every edition (No. [197] in B-I, sigs. V2^v in BC, K6^v in D-G, K6^v-K7 in H, K2^v in I). A copy in MS. Lansdowne 98, fol. 206^v, called "An Epitaphe of S^r Anthony Denny knight," varies only in having farre to for gan farre (line 12), quite for quite (line 17). Professor Hudson kindly informed me that this poem is included in John Weever's Ancient Funeral Monuments, 1631, p. 852, as a composition of Surrey's. Of Surrey's English verses, says Weever, "take this Essay, being an Epitaph which he made to the memory of Sir Anthony Denny Knight, a Gentleman whom King Henry the eight greatly affected." The poem is then reprinted, the only variations from the text of A being that 178. 15 has knowne (with B-H) and 178. 17 quit for quite.

Sir Anthony Denny, favorite of Henry VIII, was born on January 16, 1501, and educated at St. Paul's School, London, and St. John's College, Cambridge. He was a zealous promoter of the Reformation, by which he profited financially. Henry VIII knighted him in France, September 30, 1544. Denny was appointed one of the executors of Henry VIII's will, and he served as a councilor of Edward VI, dying on October 28, 1549. He was highly praised by Roger Ascham and Sir John Cheke, as well as by the poet Surrey. "The Epitaphe of S^r A. Dennie," beginning, "As shipe escaped the powre of tytle wave and wynde," is preserved in MS. Harleian 78, fol. 25^v.

178. 22 (No. 228) A comparison of the louers paines. In every edition (No. [198] in B-I, sigs. V2^v-V3 in BC, K6^v-K7 in D-G, K7 in H, K2^v-K3 in I).

179. 2 (No. 229) Of a Rosemary braunche sente. In every edition (No. [199] in B-I, sigs. V3 in BC, K7 in D-H, K3 in I).

12 (No. 230) To his loue of his constant hart. In every edition (No. [200] in B-I, sigs. V3 in BC, K7 in D-G, K7-K7^v in H, K3 in I).

22 (No. 231) Of the token which, &c. In every edition (No. [201] in B-I, sigs. V3-V3^v in BC, K7-K7^v in D-G, K7^v in H, K3 in I). Dr. Leicester Bradner, in The Review of English Studies, IV (1928), 207-208, calls Nos. 203 and 231 "forerunners of the Spenserian stanza."

180. 2 (No. 232) Manhode auailleth not, &c. In every edition (No. [202] in B-I, sigs. V3^v in BC, K7^v in D-H, K3-K3^v in I).

4 Tho. Read The with B+.

8-11 The vnexpert . . . doth leare. Professor Kittredge paraphrases as follows: "The inexpert navigator who had never voyaged to unknown shores, but who nevertheless was not frightened by the dangers of Neptune's realm, by sailing on the trustless seas in his wandering ship hath taught the art [of such navigation] to many [persons] whom time too long doth instruct, that is, who have spent over-much time in learning the art." In other words, the lucky novice has outclassed the plodding men of experience.

18 (No. 233) That constancy of all vertues, &c. In every edition (No. [203] in B-I, sigs. V3^v-V4 in BC, K7^v-K8 in D-H, K3^v in I).

20-25 Though in the waxe a perfect picture, &c. Probably this was the source of Melbancke's remark in Philotimus, 1583, G3^v: "A picture portrayed in wax shoues as faire as one ingrauen in marble, but continewes not so long."

34 (No. 234) A comfort to . . . Thestilis. In every edition (No. [171] in B-I, sigs. R4-R4^v in BC, I4-I4^v in D-G, I4^v-I5 in H, H8^v-I in I). The poem is a reply to No. 201, which in B-I it follows.

181. 17 Hie springes may cease from swell yng, &c. Borrowed in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, sig. Y^v: "The Sun which falleth in the West with Eclipse of his lighte, riseth in the East with his fry garland: high springes may cease from swelling, but neuer drie away."

18 stormes of louers yre, do more their loue encrease. Referring to the proverbial saying (from Terence), "Amantium irae amoris redintegratio est," on which see the Paradise, pp. 214-215.

23 Thinke on Etrascus worthy loue that lasted thirty yeres. This is evidently the source of the references in the Gorgeous Gallery, 1578, p. 82, and Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, Y3. The former runs:

Itrascus too, full thyrty yeares indurde,
The panges of loue, within his boyling brest.

Melbancke's words are: "Etrascus louing thirtie yeares, could not atchieue his harts desired choise, yet at $\dot{y}$ end, found reward of his mistris." The old annotator in I (Bodleian) glosses—not very plausibly—Etrascus as "or Vlisses" and changes thirty to twentie.

181. 34 (No. 235) The vncertaine state of a louer. In every edition (No. [204] in B-I, sigs. V4–V4^v in BC, K8–K8^v in D-H, K3^v–K4 in I). This poem is reprinted as the composition of John Harington and entitled "To Isabella Markham, 1549" in Nugae Antiquae (1775, II, 256; 1779, 1792, III, 290–291). Isabella Markham became Harington's wife in 1554. The evidence of Nugae Antiquae is of little or no value.

182. 28 (No. 236) The louer in libertie, &c. In every edition (No. [205] in B-I, sigs. V4^v in BC, K8^v in D-H, K4–K4^v in I).

183. 18 (No. 237) A comparison of his loue, &c. In every edition (No. [206] in B-I, sigs. V4^v–X^v in BC, K8^v–L^v in D-G, K8^v–L2 in H, K4^v–K5^v in I).

A ballad similar to this is preserved in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 141), a reprint of which may be welcome to some readers; music for it (with the first line only, given as "When Cressed went from Troye") is in MS. Additional 30513, ca. 1560:

Whan Cressyde came from Troye in chaunge of Antenour as Troylus then did joye
so joye I at this howre and as he pleasure had to see her from hym goe in lyke cace am I glad to parte my lover froe

But yf he weare alas an wofull Trojan than
So I to in this cace am now the heaviest man and even the man I know all thoughe I be another yet in this payne and woe of right may be his brother

But sence there is no choyce
but that I must for goe whiche moste I did rejoyce and moste have loved soe
what ells remaynes in me whiche am so sad a wight but even as Troylus he to mourne my losse of right

And now for evermore to take myself for one as Troylus did before when Cresyde was once gone and all the daye to spend in playntes and lovers cryes till death shall ryd and send my spryte above the skyes.

And now and then alas
with teares of both my eyen to moyste and weete the place wheare she and I have bene
And then thus for to saye poore man thow maist well mone for two they weare to daye but now theare is but one.

But whan the skriche owle shall flye from the hollow tree whiche cry' the to Lovers all that faithfull lovers be then shall ye say thus loe hark man who flyeth about the beadell of thie woe
Calles now to have the oute.

And out I shall goe then a wath [sic] man meeke of right whiche sith the daye began have watchid for the night
In whiche I might at will my wofull lif to ridd bothe sighe and sobb my fill as wofull Troylus dyd

ffor eache brute beast I see laid downe to take my rest may be a meanes to me to thinck this in my brest
So heare eache thing rest can as kynd hath taught it soe Save thow alas poore man whiche wandrest still in woe

Whiche am as Troylus he a man in bitter payne and Troylus still will be till tyme shall come agayne and thoughe she did not mynd to come her truthe to save yet shall she me thus fynd Trew Troylus to my grave./

On the same order is the ballad called "A new Dialogue betweene Troylus and Cressida" that appears in Thomas Deloney's Strange Histories, 1612, K2^v L^v.

184. 13 Making two fountayns of his eyes. This figure is a commonplace in Italian and French sonnets. Cf., for example, Petrarch, sonetto in vita 110

(Rime, 161, p. 170), "oi occhi miei, occhi non già, ma fonti"; Du Bellay, L'Olive, lv, "O tristes yeulx, que n'estes-vous fontaines?"; De Baif, Œuvres (ed. Marty-Laveaux, 1, 160), "O mes yeux, non plus yeux, mais de pleurs deux fontaines." See also 209. 38.

185. 26 (No. 238) To leade a vertuous . . . life. In every edition (No. [207] in B-I, sigs. X2 in BC, L2 in D-H, K5^v in I). The old annotator in I (Bodleian) writes, "Mr Jo: Wyse. taken out of Chawcer." I do not understand the significance of "Mr Jo: Wyse," although most later students have observed Chaucer's authorship. Since, however, Arber failed to mention Chaucer in his edition of the miscellany, that great name seldom appears as one of the "uncertain authors." Tottel's text differs considerably from the versions given in the editions of Chaucer issued by Richard Pynson in 1526 and William Thynne in 1532, 1542, and about 1545. It agrees more closely with Thynne's than Pynson's text, however, so that I give collations below with the 1532 edition:

185. 26-27 ¶ Good counsayle of Chaucer
 28 Flee] Flye ye
 29 to thee . . . though] vnto the good if 31 Praise] Preace: blinde in] blent ouer
 32 Fauour] Sauour
 33 others well canst] other folke shal
 34 shall the] the shal
 36 hope] truste
 37 standeth] stondeth
 38 against] agayne
 39 against] with
 186. 2 first] Om.
 3, 10 shall the] the shal
 8 giue thanks to] and thanke
 9 Weane well] Weyue: honest life ay] lette thy gost the 10 So] And: shall the] the shal

In modern editions this "balade" is entitled "Truth," and is accompanied by Chaucer's "Envoy." Its indebtedness to Boethius is discussed in Skeat's Chaucer, I. 550-553.

32 Fauour, &c. The reading should be Sauour, making the line mean, "Have a relish for no more than it may behove you (to taste)" (Skeat, I, 551).

34 trouth shall the deliuer. The refrain comes from John, viii. 32.

36 her that turneth as a ball. The goddess Fortuna.

37 Great rest standeth in litle busynesse. Proverbial. See the numerous examples cited in my notes in the Paradise, 1576, p. 251.

39 Striue not as doth a croke against a wall. Skeat (I, 552) calls this "an allusion to the fable in Æsop about the earthen and brazen pots being dashed together. An earthen pot would have still less chance of escape if dashed against a wall."

186. 11 (No. 239) The wounded louer, &c. In every edition (No. [208] in B-I, sigs. X2-X2^v in BC, L2-L2^v in D-H, K5^v-K6 in I).

187. 2 (No. 240) The louer shewing of the, &c. In every edition (No. [209] in B-I, sigs. X2^v-X3 in BC, L2^v-L3 in D-H, K6-K6^v in I). The old annotator in I (Bodleian) objects to the title that "Jt semeth rather to be of one nere desperation for some evill dede or at the least sorowfull &c."

23 both play and singe. Intelligible, but both is probably a misprint for doth.

26-27 As smallest sparckes, &c. On the proverb see the Paradise, pp. 201-202.

34-37 But since the mill, &c. Borrowed by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, R4^v, "But since the Myll will needes about, the pinne whereon the Mill doth goe, I will assay to strike it out, and so the Myllne to ouerthrowe."

188. 2 (No. 241) The power of loue ouer gods them selues. In every edition (No. [210] in B-I, sigs. X3 in BC, L3 in D-H, K6^v in I). This is a strict Petrarchan sonnet, rhyming abba abba cde cde. It is of considerable interest, furthermore, because I have observed that it is a translation of Seneca's Hippolytus, lines 296-308 (first chorus):

Thessali Phoebus pecoris magister egit armentum positoque plectro impari tauros calamo vocavit.
induit formas quotiens minores ipse qui caelum nebulasque fecit:
candidas ales modo movit alas,
dulcior vocem moriente cygno;
fronte nunc torva petulans iuencus virginum stravit sua terga ludo, perque fraternos nova regna fluctus ungula lentos imitante remos pectore adverso domuit profundum, pro sua vector timidus rapina.

The merit of the translation in No. 241 can perhaps best be seen by comparing it with that of John Studley (Seneca His Tenne Tragedies, 1581, fol. 60^v):

Sir PHOEBVS vvhilome forst in Thessail Land
To Sheepeherds state ADMETVS Heirdes did driue,
His mourning Harp depriude of heauenly Hand
With ordred Pipe his Bullockes did reuiue.
Euen hee that trayles the dusky riding rack,
And wieldes the swaying Poles with swinging swift
How oft did hee faynde fourmes put on his back
And heauenly Face with baser countenance shift.
Sometime a Byrde with siluer shining wings,
He fluttering flusht, and languishing the death
With sweete melodious tuned voyce hee sings,
When silly Cygnus gaue vp gasping breath.

Sometime also wyth curled forehead grim
 A dallying Bull, he bent his stouping backe
 To maydens sport, through deepest Seas to swim
 Whyle horny houe made shift like Ore slacke
 Through waters wyld his brothers perlous cost
 Wyth forward glauncing breast the stream he brake,
 And least he should his tender pray haue lost,
 Her troublus thought did cause his heart to quake.

The general idea and the specific figures in the poem are almost identical with those of No. 281; indeed, they were poetic commonplaces. Thus Petrarch's canzone in vita 1 (the source of No. 185) concludes (Rime, p. 23):

Canzon, i' non fu' mai quel nuvol d'oro che poi discese in pretiosa pioggia, sí che 'l foco di Giove in parte spense. . . .

Compare, further, Turberville's Epitaphes, etc., 1567, p. 7:

There may you plainely see how Jove was once a swanne
 To lure faire Leda to his lust when raging loue beganne:
 Some other when a bull
 Some other time a showre
 Of golden drops, as when he coyde
 the closed Nunne in towre.

Barnabe Barnes, Parthenophil and Parthenope, 1593, sonnet 63 (Poems, ed. Grosart, p. 43), writes:

Ioue for Europaes loue tooke shape of Bull,
 And for Calisto playde Dianaes parte
 And in a golden shower, he filled full
 The lappe of Danae with cœlestiall arte.

Exactly the same illustrations appeared in two poems in The Phoenix Nest, 1593, pp. 73-74, and Lodge's Phillis, 1593, sonnet 34 (Complete Works, ed. Hunterian Club, II, v, 51), both of which, however, are translations from Ronsard's Amours (Œuvres, ed. Marty-Laveaux, I, 12).

• 188. 17 through the seas. Rhyme and sense require sea.

18 (No. 242) Of the sutteltye of craftye louers. In every edition (No. [256] in B-I, sigs. Dd^v-Dd2 in BC, O^v-O2 in D-G, O2-O2^v in H, N4-N4^v in I).

24 dogge vnto the bow. Professor Magoun points out to me similar expressions in The Canterbury Tales, D. 1369, E. 2013-2014: "For in this world nis dogge for the bowe," "he gooth as lowe As ever dide a dogge for the bowe." Skeat (Chaucer, v, 325) explains, "a dog used to accompany an archer, to follow up a stricken deer."

189. 25 (No. 243) Of the dissembling louer. In every edition (No. [27] in B-I, sigs. D^v in BC, B5^v in D-H, B5-B5^v in I). If the evidence of A-I is to be accepted, Surrey was not the author of this poem: it is a reply to his No. 26, which it follows in B-I, but the title in those editions (see the Variant Readings) carefully assigns the poem to an "uncertain author." I see no reason to dispute that assignment, even though I observe that eight lines (189. 30-37) are quoted in Sir Richard Barckley's A Discourse of the Felicitie of Man, 1598, p. 499, with the plain statement that they were written by Surrey. Barckley remarks:

those ambitious and vaine-glorious men that hunt after offices of rule and charge, without due consideration of their owne insufficiencie, and vnworthinesse to beare rule, euen in meane callings also, are aptlie reprehended by the Earle of Surrey, thus:

*For with indifferent eyes,
My selfe can well discerne,
How some in stormes to guide a ship,
Do seeke to take the sterne.
VVhose practise if t'were proued,
In calme to guide a barge,
Assuredly beleeeue it well,
It were too great a charge.
And some I see againe,
Sit still, and say but small,
VVho could do ten times more then they,
That say they can do all.
VVhose goodly gifts are such,
The more they vnderstand,
The more they seeke to learne and know,
And take lesse charge in hand.*

It seems to me almost certain that Barckley mentioned Surrey, not from any knowledge of the authorship of No. 243, but purely because Surrey's name came to his mind (as it does to that of a modern reader) when he referred to the Songs and Sonnets.

Padelford included No. 243 in his edition of Surrey (pp. 65-66), printing it from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 23). That MS. supplies the following variants:

189. 26 giltlesse] Padelford misprints glitlesse
 31 seke for] styckes [Padelford stycke] not 32 practise . . . proued] skill and conninge tryed 33 Assuredly . . . well] they wolde son shan [MS. doubtful, Padelford shaw], you shold sone see 35 could] can
 38 fletes] slyttes [Padelford flyttes]
 39 full] right
 190. 2 With] in
 3 ioynde] mett

190. 6 Eighteen lines added:

muche lyke untruth to this/ the storye doth declare wheare th' elders layd to Susans chardge/ meete matter to compare
 They did her both accuse/ and eke condempne her to and yet no reason right nor truthe/ did lead them so to do and she thus judged to dye/ toward her death went forthe ffraughted wth faith a pacient pace/ taking her wrong in worthe
 but he that dothe defend/ all those that in hym trust Did raise a Childe for her defence/ to shyeld her from th' unjust and Danyell chosen was/ then of this wrong to weete
 How, in what place and eke with whome/ she did this cryme commytt he caws'd the Elders part/ the one from th' others sight and did examyne one by one/ and chardged them bothe say right Vndr a Mvlberye trye/ it was fyrst sayd the one
 The next namde a Pomegranate trye/ whereby the truth was knowne
 Than Susan was dischargd'/ and they condempn'd to dye as right requeares and they deserve/ that fram'de so fowll a lye and he that her preserv'd/ and lett them of their lust hath me defendyd hetherto/ and will do still I trust./

As the story of Susanna and the Elders, from the apocryphal book of Daniel, was one of the most popular stories in Tudor England, it is difficult to see why the editor of A omitted the foregoing eighteen lines.

190. 7 (No. 244) The promise of a constant lover. In every edition (No. [211] in B-I, sigs. X3-X3^v in BC, L3-L3^v in D-H, K6^v-K7 in I). Perhaps the same author wrote this poem and No. 215; they are much alike in all particulars.

19 (No. 245) Against him that had slaundered, &c. In every edition (No. [212] in B-I, sigs. X3^v-X4 in BC, L3^v-L4 in D-G, L3^v-L4^v in H, K7-K7^v in I). There is a copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 108^v-109^v) with the following variants:

- 190. 24 or] and
- 25 .R.] lyer
- 29 lied] lyde
- 31 no nor neuer] nor euer did or
- 33 charge so large] over chardge
- 36 the] thee
- 37 dedes] deede
- 191. 4 Collatiue] Collatyne: wife] wyse
- 5 trayterous] Traytours
- 6 Cartage] Carthage: fordid] undid
- 7 R. so depe can auoyde] Rodapeiane mayde
- 9 crokest] crokst: agaynst] agayne
- 10 brag] cadge
- 11 voyce] foyse
- 16 shouldest] shuldst
- 21 delight] delighes
- 25 treade] leade

26 here auowe] advowe
 27 setttest] sett
 32 in] the: eke] to 42 trouth] trothe: floorist] florisht
 43 stande] stode: the] thie

192. 2 one] worme
 4 on thee may light] may light on thee

190. 25 Of her for whom thou .R., &c. The pentameter movement of the line shows that R. stands for some two-syllabled word like Robert — if, indeed, it should not be liar, as in the MS.

30–32 neuer honge the bow vpon the wall, &c. That is, the lady you have slandered has not broken her vow of chastity: a discarded bow would indicate that she had deserted Diana.

38 Lurker of kinde like serpent, &c. On this commonplace (already used at 6. 24) see my notes in the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 186.

191. 4 Of Collatiue. The proper spelling, Collatine, is in D+. "Colatine was the husband of Lucrece," Richard Robinson obligingly informs us, and in The rewarde of Wickednesse, 1574, sig. F, he tells the story.

7 the R. so depe can auoyde. A senseless remark due to a compositor who could not read his manuscript "copy." B+ and the MS. have the R(h)odopeian maid. The reference is to Phyllis, daughter of King Sithon, who, when Demophoön failed to come to marry her, hung herself and was metamorphosed into an almond tree. Her epistle in Ovid's Heroides (II. 1) begins, "Hospita, Demophoön, tua te Rhodopeia Phyllis."

15 yrkesome wormes. "Loathsome reptiles." John Studley, Medea, act IV (Seneca His Tenne Tragedies, 1581, fol. 134), speaks of "filthy byrdes of irkesome miry mud."

43 the wretched part. For the read thy with B+ and the MS.

192. 2 Hath spotted vs, &c. "All men (all of us) are disgraced because you (vile slanderer) are a man."

11 (No. 246) A praise of maistresse Ryce. In every edition (No. [213] in B-I, sigs. X₄–Y in BC, L₄–L₅ in D-G, L₄^v–L₅ in H, K₇^v–K₈^v in I). The style of this poem (see also the comments on p. 84, above) suggests Thomas Churchyard. He was fond, too, of eulogizing court-ladies, as in A Pleasant conceite penned in verse (1593).

193. 25 (No. 247) Of one vniustly defamed. In every edition (No. [214] in B-I, sigs. Y in BC, L₅ in D-G, L₅–L₅^v in H, K₈^v in I). A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 37) has only one variant — by for thy in line 35.

34 to trie. Read so trie.

35 Thus kind thy craft. For thy perhaps one should read by with C+ (cf. line 31).

194. 7 G. by name. This cloudy poem seems to be addressed to a man, not a woman. One would like to believe that he was the Gray who contributed (see p. 80, above) to the miscellany, and who is referred to as G. at 200. 33.

194. 15 (No. 248) Of the death of the late county of Penbroke. In every edition (No. [215] in B-I, sigs. Y-Y^v in BC, L⁵-L^{5v} in D-G, L^{5v} in H, K^{8v}-L in I). In B+ the word county is properly changed to countess. The lady in question was Anne Parr, whose sister Catherine was one of the numerous wives of Henry VIII. Anne married Sir William Herbert, first Earl of Pembroke, about 1534, died at Baynard's Castle, London, on February 20, 1551/2, and was buried with great state in St. Paul's Cathedral on February 28 (G. E. C., Complete Peerage, VI [1895], 216-217). The opening lines of this elegy remind one of the words with which Milton begins his lament for Lycidas.

195. 2 (No. 249) That eche thing is hurt of it selfe. In every edition (No. [216] in B-I, sigs. Y^v-Y² in BC, L^{5v}-L⁶ in D-H, L in I).

20 (No. 250) Of the choise of a wife. In every edition (No. [217] in B-I, sigs. Y² in BC, L⁶ in D-G, L⁶-L^{6v} in H, L^v in I).

23 men to heare delight. The rhyme-scheme demands men delight to heare.

196. 6-7 go, wo. This rhyme violates the scheme of the stanzas. Fate, state would fit both the rhyme-scheme and the sense.

8 (No. 251) Description of an vngodlye worlde. In every edition (No. [218] in B-I, sigs. Y²-Y³ in BC, L⁶-L⁷ in D-G, L^{6v}-L⁷ in H, L^v-L^{2v} in I).

Other copies are in (1) MS. Ashmole 48, ca. 1555-1565 (Songs and Ballads, pp. 57-59, ed. Wright, Roxburghe Club, 1860); (2) MS. Sloane 1896, fols. 35^v-38, ca. 1576; (3) MS. Additional 15225, fols. 56-58, ca. 1616. Tottel's text (A-I) has 74 lines. (1) omits six of these but adds 14 new lines. It ends with a prayer for King Philip and Queen Mary, is older than the text of A, and no doubt represents the original poem, which in A was thoroughly revised by the author or, more probably, by the editor. (2) has 72 lines; (3) has 88 lines, including all those of A in addition to the 14 new lines (slightly varied) of (1). There are an enormous number of variants which, — although they show how freely texts were "edited" in the sixteenth century, — without enthusiasm, I give to the bitter end:

196. 8-9 Title: none in (1), A Discripcion of the wickednesse of this world
 (2), A dittie most excelent for euerie man to reade/ that dothe intend for to amende & to repent with speede to the tune of a rich marchant man or John come kiss me now (3) 10 loues] lovithe (1, 3)
 11 hear] se (1, 3): semeth] sem (1, 2): wöderous] right wondrous
 (2), wondrous (3)
 12 in] and (1)
 13 harts] brestes (2)
 14 amongs] amongst (2), amonge (3): hye] he(1)
 15 deceite] deceites (3): pore] weake (1, 3)
 16 sugred] forged (3): 16-18 reduced in (1) to Suche spyte in sugeryde
tongis, which bryng men ofte to care

- 17 which] that (3): vnsplied] vnspyde (3)
 18 restlesse sute for] sute for wretles (3): sute] state (2): bringeth men] bringe men oft (3)
 19 slippry] slyppery (1-3): can we not] we cannot (1, 3)
 20 bolstryng] bolsteringe (3): of the] up of (1, 3)
 21 threatnyng] threatenynge (1)
 22 Such . . . estate] Suche clymyng to estate, suche discorde daly wraghte (1)
 23 all mixt] mixed (3): 23-36 om. in (1)
 24 prolyng] prowling (2, 3)
 25 cruell] overthwart (3): truth] plaine (3): hearde] saw (3)
 26-27 Om. in (2)
 29 foles do] follis (1)
 30 plenty] plentithe (1): so] of (3)
 31 Such . . . expresse] Howe welthe declynithe [declines 3] towarde decay, what [noe 3] tong can well expres (1, 3)
 32 markt] merkyl (1), marked (3): troubles] trobble (1, 3)
 33 were] was (1, 3): after this line (1) and (3) insert:

Such poverty abrowde, and fewe men takyth [takes 3] them in;
 Suche juels warne and [when 3] poore men want, which [that 3] ys both shame and syne;
 Suche pryntyng off [of 3] good bookys, such praychyng synn to sle [flee 3];
 Suche ronnyng hedlong into hell [Such runinge yet headlong to hell 3], it pittiethe me to se.

- 34 which] such (1): euer gapes] gapynge (1), gapeth still (3): for] after (1) 35 After this line (1) and (3) add:

Suche prolyng [prowling 3] for fate farmes, such dublyng of small rente;
 Suche heppis of golde in sum mens handes [hand 3], yete no man ys contente.
 Suche byldyng [knitting 3] of fear bowars [faire browes 3], suche longer kepte in hallis;
 Wher nydy men have fownde relyffe, nowe may the [you 3] se bar wallis.

- 36 will] wyte (1, 3): will in tender] wilfulnesse in (2)
 37 sortes] sectes (1, 3): among] amongst (2)
 38 Such . . . craft] Suche crafte in cloake of symplenes (2): falshed] reconsylyng (1, 3)
 39 sene within mens] immagynede within mans (1, in mans 3): hartes] harte (1, 3)
 197. 3 thinkes] thinkythe (1): take those goods] haue this good (3): which] that (3): must] shall (1, 3)
 4 which] that (3)
 5 breke] los (1): slepes] slepe (2)
 6 one] won (1): amanges] among (1, 3), amongst (2): hath] haue (1-3): welth and ease] ease and wealth (3)
 7 which toyleth] that toyle full (1, 3)
 8 falles] fallyth (1)
 9 Thus] and (3): pore] poware (1): fortune geues] God givith (1), god doth giue (3): the] them (1, 3)
 10 thinkes] thinketh (1)
 12 those] they (2): liue] lyves (1): are] be (1, 3)
 13 time] space (3): falles] failes (3): do] that (1), the (3): fade] vade (2)

197. 14 is] ar (1, 3): this] the (3): will] doth (1, 3) 15 may] doth (1, 3): strike] place (3): after this line (1) and (3) add:

Yf that the boughe do breake be whiche the yous [by which they vse 3] to clym;

For God doth exsalte and overthrowe [exalts & overthrowes 3] as he syeth caus [sees place 3] and tym.

The tymes apoyntyde be, and alteryde in ther kynde,

Be [by 3] Godes forsyght and provydenge, whos knowlege [iudgmentes 3] fewe can fynde.

- 16 feares] fearythe (1): full] right (3) 17 There] here (3): so] Om. (1): earth] yerth (1): . . . changeth] chaungys (1): as] lyke (1, 3) 18 pore] poware (1)
 19 haue] hathe (1)
 20 They] Ofte tymes they (2): fayre] fear (1): seke] seekes (3):
 suck] shed (2)
 21 And . . . hell] his children wishe him ofte in earth (2)
 22 The] Muche (2): the] Om. (1, 3), worldly (2): spirite] sprite (1)
 23 And] soe (3): men] doe (3): that gropeth for] which grope
 [groped 3] after (1, 3): the] Om. (3) 24 is still] ofte tymes is dedly (2): enuied] hated (2), envide (3): by] with (1): which] that (1-3)
 25 fawning] fanyde (1, 3): spech] speece [sic] (3): are] be (1, 3)
 26 fine] time (3): proue] knowe by profe (2): haue] hath (1, 3)
 27 The slepe full sownde and fearithe leaste [haue lesse feare 3] that hath [haue 3] not moche to loys (1, 3)
 28 As] The (3): time] the worlde (1), world (3): would] wyll (1, 3)
 29 lue in pore estate] be a pleane poor man (1, 3): pore] meane (2)
 30 those troblesome] thes troblous (1), these troublesome (3)
 32 our] won (1): in] to (3) 33 may we] we may (3): such] lyk (1, 3): to] and (1, 3): with him in] into the (1, 3): snare] sknare (1) 34 thinkes] thinkithe (1)
 35 wethered] withered (2, 3): that] which (1-3): cannot bide a] which can abyde no (1)
 37 playd] played (2): our] his (1, 3)
 38 Who trustes] To trust (1, 3): him] them (1, 3): then mad] men made (1)
 40 seme as] semith (1), seemed (3): are] ar very (1)
 41 Though] although (3): $\ddot{y}$] Om. (1, 3): earth] yerthe (1):
 bringes] bryng (1, 3): it beareth many] its wondrous full of (2)
 42 from mischief to] that will at all (3) 43 But . . . or] they set their mindes on worldlie cares and (3): flee the seas of] loys the seale off (1): or] and (1)
198. 2 that] so (2, 3)
 3 styrris] stirrith (1): shal] doth (1, 3): after line 3 (1) adds:

Thus hear I mak an ende, wisshing for grace and helthe;

God save Philepe our kyng and Mary our quyne, and eke the commenwelthe.

(3) adds:

Thus heere I make an end wishinge for grace and health to keepe our king [James I] from all his foes and eake the common wealth

Perhaps this tiresome poem was suggested by a long passage in Skelton's Speke, Parrot (Poetical Works, ed. Dyce, II [1843] 22-25), nearly every line of which begins with "So many" or "So myche." The two passages are identical in idea. No. 251 was registered as a ballad, under the title of its first line, on September 4, 1564 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 2949). The tunes to which it was to be sung are named in the collations to 196. 8-9, above: the music for John, come kiss me now will be found in Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, I, 147-148 (also in MS. Additional 38539, fol. 12); that for The rich merchant man in Chappell, I, 381-382.

197. 36 Though that the flood be great, the ebbe as lowe doth ronne. On this proverb see the Paradise, p. 254.

198. 4 (No. 252) The dispaireng louer lamenteth. In every edition (No. [219] in B-I, sigs. Y3-Y3^v in BC, L7-L7^v in D-G, L7^v-L8 in H, L2^v-L3 in I). Similar to this poem, and possibly suggested by it, is Raleigh's famous lyric in The Phoenix Nest, 1593, p. 72, beginning:

Calling to minde mine eie long went about,
T'entice my hart to seeke to leaue my brest,
All in a rage I thought to pull it out,
By whose deuce I liu'd in such vnrest.

199. 4 (No. 253) An epitaph of maister Henry williams. In every edition (No. [241] in B-I, sigs. Bb3-Bb3^v in BC, N3-N3^v in D-G, N3^v-N4 in H, M6 in I). Henry's father, John Williams, sheriff of Oxfordshire, was apparently knighted soon after November 15, 1538 (W. A. Shaw, The Knights of England, II [1906], 50). He was keeper of the king's jewels, M.P. for Oxfordshire during 1547-1554, an ardent supporter of Queen Mary in the Northumberland-Lady Jane Grey rebellion, and lord chamberlain of Philip II's household. He was created Baron Williams of Thame early in 1554, and appointed lord president of Wales in February, 1559. Dying at Ludlow Castle on October 14, 1559, he was buried at Thame on November 15. His first wife, Elizabeth Edmunds, widow of Andrew Edmunds of Essex, had died on October 25, 1556. Her second son, Henry, the subject of the present poem, married Anne Stafford, daughter of the first Baron Stafford, and died without issue on August 20, 1551. Sir Thomas Hoby, of The Courtier fame, had intended to travel on the Continent with him; but, this plan going awry, he met Henry and his brother Francis ("which died bothe in England the yere 51") at Padua on August 15, 1548 (Travels and Life, ed. Edgar Powell, pp. 7, 8, Camden Society, 1902). For another elegy on Williams see 237. 21 n. (No. 289).

9 feare from frendes. B+ read feare for frendes, which is probably correct. In either case the incomplete sentence means, I suppose, something like "Free us from the fear that our friends may fail or disappoint us."

34 (No. 254) Against a gentlewoman, &c. In every edition (No.

[245] in B-I, sigs. Bb4-Bb4^v in BC, N4-N4^v in D-G, N4^v-N5 in H, M7-M7^v in I. For an answer to this poem see No. 290.

200. 2-3 her bolstred name . . . Had stuffe to shew that praise did hight. "Although I once gave slight credit to what rumor said of her, believing that her puffed-up reputation stood for real praiseworthy stuff, I find I was mistaken." Cf. Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, sig. Y, "I thought their bouldstered names had stuffe to show, $\frac{y}{y}$ praise did hight."

18 she is such as geason none. The context plainly shows that the line means, "She is such as has no rarity." In G+ the phrase is changed to a geason: "she is not at all such a rarity."

29 By cocke and pye. A common oath, used also at 239. 23. Cock is a corruption of God; pie originally meant a collection of rules in the pre-Reformation church. Cf. Henry Robarts, Haigh for Devonshire, 1600, K3, "swear not so vainely: yea, and nay, Cock and Pye, are sufficient for honest dealers."

30 (No. 255) An epitaphe written by w. G., &c. In every edition (No. [239] in B-I, sigs. Bb2^v in BC, N2^v in D-G, N3-N3^v in H, M5^v in I).

A copy in MS. Lansdowne 98, fol. 206, entitled "An Epitaphe made by William Grey, lyeng on his deathe bed, and by him appointed to be set on his tombe," was printed by F. J. Furnivall in Notes and Queries, 4th series, iv (1869), 194, with the following variants:

- 200. 33 G.] Grey
- 34 Emong] Among
- 201. 2 shortnyng] shortener
- 10 may] might
- 11 this] the

Another copy, from MS. Sloane 1207, fols. 9-10, is printed in Furnivall's Ballads from Manuscripts, I, 435-437, and thence in Ernest W. Dormer's Gray of Reading, 1923, pp. 125-128. In both reprints it is mistakenly said to be from MS. Sloane 1206. This copy has no title or signature, but is preceded by a long poem (in the same hand) which has "Wm. Gray" in its title and is signed "Gray." In the Sloane MS. the present poem varies in the following particulars:

- 200. 33 lieth G.] Lyes gray
- 34 Emong] Amonge
- 35 Which] that
- 201. 5 they were but] were very
- 7 tong] tongues
- 9 here] stell
- 10 whom] ho

The following new stanzas (I follow Furnivall's text) are then added:

Yet now at the Last hathe gotten Rest
 Amonge the ffathers olde, with clottes of yerthe apon his brest,
 nott ffelynge hott nor colde,

Nor fferynge ones the porgynge plase
 Devysed by the pope,
 Bwtt in the marsy & the grase of chryst that is my hoppe.

As ffor the pardons and his mass
 Wyche wher his cheffe chase,
 Lett chryston men nott on them pass,
 thé be butt the popes draff

The holly oyle, hose consettes, his mede shall be butt smale:
 beleve nott his sacrementes,
 nor his sacrymentaule.

As ffor the Rest of popesnes — to longe now to Ressytt — Lett chryston men with qwytnes
 this pass them over qwytt,

And trwst, — in that yow shall ffynd good, yf sole helthe ye well wen, — yeven chrystes merettes, & his blud that was shed ower solles to kepe ffrom sen.

ffor that is that that allwayes moste,
 yf we well chryst attene,
 pwtt all yower conffydence & trwst
 All thenges elles ar bwtt vene.

This is the ende of grat & smaule,
 to torne as I am now:
 ffrom yerthe we cam, to yerthe we shall,
 no man knothe whan nor howe.

Yett was I once as now ar ye,
 yeven losty ffrom my berthe;
 shyche as I ame, syche shall ye be;
 all ye shall torne to yerthe.

Therffore leve hee accordingly,
 As holly wrytt dothe tell,
 And then shall god aswredly
 kepe yow ffrom dethe & hell.

To leve as on sholde allway dye,
 Yt wer a blesed trade;
 to change ower dethe ffor Lyfe so hey;
 no batter change is mayd.

ffor All the worldly thenges ar vene,
 in them ther is no trwst;
 ye se all stattes awhyle Remenethe,
 and then thé torne to dwst.

Yf Lwst & Lykynge myght be bowght ffor sylluer or ffor golde, still to Indever yt wolde be sowght:
 what kynges wolde then be olde?

Bwtt all shall pass & ffoulou me, —
 this is most sertin trwthe, — bothe hyghe & Lowe, & Ieche degre, the age and Ieke the youthe.

Yf yow be ffound mett or vn-mett
 Agynst the dredffull ower,
 As ye be ffound, so shall the swettar be served with the sower.

All this is sayd to mend ower harthis,
 that shall [it] her or sey,
 And then Acordinge to yower partis
 to ffoulow dethe with me.

As in the case of No. 125, the editor of A prudently omitted the author's attacks on Roman Catholicism.

It will be observed that both in the Lansdowne MS. and in B+ Gray is said to have written the poem on his death-bed; but not much faith is to be put in that statement. Thus Lord Vaux was said to have written No. 212 as he was dying, but George Gascoigne ridiculed the simple people who believed that report (see above, 165. 16 n.). Thus, too, in various editions of the Paradise, pp. 95-96, 251-253, the Earl of Essex was named as the "death-bed author" of a poem that actually came from the pen of Francis Kinwelmarsh. It is interesting, however, that the last four stanzas of the Sloane MS. version of No. 255 are (with slight changes) chiseled on a stone slab beneath an old mural monument in the parish church of Sonning. That fact is chronicled by Dormer (pp. 55-56), who with great seriousness vindicates Mrs. Gray from the aspersions cast upon her by the poem. He shows, also (pp. 59-62), that she had been married twice before she became Mrs. Gray, and was married once after Gray's death. She died as Mrs. Agnes Ockham, perhaps on February 28, 1579 (1579/80?). See No. 256.

201. 12 (No. 256) An aunswere. In every edition (No. [240] in B-I, sigs. Bb3 in BC, N3 in D-G, N3^v in H, M5^v-M6 in I). The poem is a reply to No. 255. Dormer, p. 129, reprints it (somewhat inexactly) from Arber's edition as the composition of Gray. Of Gray's authorship there is no proof at all: the probabilities are against it, even if No. 255 was not a death-bed production. A copy in MS. Lansdowne 98, fol. 206, as printed by Furnivall in Notes and Queries, 4th series, IV (1869), 194, has the following variants:

201. 17 causelesse cause thee] cause the causeles
 20 blist] bleste: to] now to 32 can not] in no case can

201. 33 (No. 257) Against women either good or badde. In every edition (No. [243] in B-I, sigs. Bb3^v-Bb4 in BC, N3^v-N4 in D-G, N4-N4^v in H, M6^v in I). Arbitrarily attributed to Gray by Dormer, who reprinted it (following Arber's text) in his Gray of Reading, p. 130. In MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fol. 80^v, there is a copy with the signature of (Thomas) Norton. These variants occur:

202. 4 age] tim
6 good] greate
11 Sith] bothe
12 Bring] Worke

35-36 A Man may liue thrise Nestors life, &c. Imitated by Kendall, Flowers of Epigrammes, 1577, C4^v (Spenser Society ed., p. 56), "Then, then, full often wouldst thou wishe thrice Nestors yeares to liue"; and by Melbancke, Philotimus, 1583, D3^v, "A man may liue thrice Nestors yeares, thrice wander out Vlisses race, ere he gaine that by seruice, that sometime hath bene a common pencion."

202. 14 (No. 258) An answer. In every edition (No. [244] in B-I, sigs. Bb4 in BC, N4 in D-G, N4^v in H, M6^v-M7 in I). This reply to No. 257 is arbitrarily assigned to Gray by Dormer, who reprints it from Arber in Gray of Reading, p. 131.

32 (No. 259) The louer praieth his seruice, &c. In every edition (No. [220] in B-I, sigs. Y3^v-Y4 in BC, L7^v-L8 in D-H, L3-L3^v in I).

203. 2 Procryn that some tyme serued Cephalus. Evidently written with Ovid's Metamorphoses (vii. 794-862) in mind. Later (about 1568) Thomas Howell wrote "The lamentable historie of Sephalus with the Vnfortunat end of Procris. To the tune of Appelles," a poem included in his Newe Sonets, and pretie Pamphlets (Poems, ed. Grosart, pp. 146-149); and in 1595 Thomas Edwards published his Cephalus and Procris (ed. Roxburghe Club, 1882).

13 after pray. In lines 11-17 of the second stanza the rhyme-scheme is confused. The poem is in three nine-line stanzas, so that the paragraph-divisions should come at lines 11 and 20 but not at line 17.

29 (No. 260) Description and praise of his loue. In every edition (No. [221] in B-I, sigs. Y4-Y4^v in BC, L8-L8^v in D-H, L3^v in I). This poem of twenty-seven lines is written in three rhymes (some of them faulty according to modern pronunciation), the third appearing only in the final couplet.

31-32 Lyke the Phenix . . . With golde and purple. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in morte 53 (Rime, 321, p. 299),

È questo 'l nido in che la mia fenice mise l'aurate et le purpuree penne?

and canzone in morte 3, stanza 5 (Rime, 323, p. 303),

Una strania fenice, ambedue l' ale di porpora vestita e 'l capo d' oro.

204. 23 (No. 261) An answer to a song, &c. In every edition (No. [248] in B-I, sigs. Cc2 in BC, N6 in D G, N6^v-N7 in H, M8^v-N in I). The poem is a reply to No. 178, which (with a shortened title) it follows in B-I.

205. 3-4 Oft malice makes the minde, &c. Quoted in Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600 (ed. Crawford, no. 392), over the initials T. W., which may mean either Thomas Watson or Sir Thomas Wyatt, but which, as the following note shows, are not to be trusted.

5-6 Oft craft can cause the man, &c. These lines (with distreined as distaind, did as doth) are quoted in England's Parnassus, no. 191 (cf. the foregoing note), over the initials S. T. B. Perhaps these letters are a misprint for S. F. B., — that is, Sir Francis Bryan, who is known to have been a contributor to the miscellany; but, since Allot assigned lines 3-4 to T. W., he cannot be trusted here, especially in view of his errors in regard to the authorship of Nos. 133, 149, 171, 270, 278.

206. 3 (No. 262) The constant louer lamenteth. In every edition (No. [28] in B-I, sigs. D^v-D2 in BC, B5^v-B6 in D-H, B5^v in I). Padelford (p. 57) reprints the poem from A, with the following variations:

206. 6 Wherin] Wherein 26 hote] hot

11 Spite draue me into Borias raigne. "This probably alludes to the military expedition to Scotland on which Surrey accompanied his father in the early autumn of 1542, shortly after his imprisonment in the Fleet for quarreling with John a Leigh" (Padelford, p. 185).

19-20 His beames in brightnesse, &c. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in morte 87, lines 1-2 (Rime, 352, p. 330):

Spirto felice che sí dolcemente volgei quelli occhi piú chiari che 'l sole.

26 the hote desire. Cf. Petrarch, sonetto in vita 180, line 5 (Rime, 236, p. 228), "il mio caldo desire."

29 (No. 263) A praise of sir Thomas wyate, &c. In every edition (No. [36] in B-I, sigs. E-E^v in BC, C-C^v in D-G, C^v in H, C in I). Padelford (p. 80) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 36529), with the following variants:

206. 31 knowledge] scyence: not] not so 32 were that] where they 33 conuert] reverte
34 Wende] Wan
35 no voyde] in no
207. 8 we . . . traine] deserve they monnis blame
9 their brestes] thy brest
10 they do] doo the

As may be seen from the foregoing collations, the text of A is corrupt. Possibly it has some such meaning as this: "If, in the rude and ignorant age, Jove in Crete and others — who taught the arts of humanity for our advantage — thought (without reason) that their temples would be (gratefully) honored after their death; if virtue, even in barren ungrateful times, never lacked some to praise her endless fame — a goodly means both to deter us from sin and to inspire us to follow her steps; then shall not, at the present day, Wyatt's friends lament — the only debt the dead may claim of the living — the extinction of the rare wisdom he employed for our advantage, teaching us of Christ and leading us to the company of virtue? When he lived, his face angered envious people; even now (that he is dead) with envy they attack his dead body (cinders)."

207. II (No. 264) ¶ A song written by the earle of Surrey, &c. In every edition (No. [29] in B-I, sigs. D2-D3 in BC, B6-B7 in D-H, B5^v-B6^v in I). Padelford (pp. 73-75) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), with the following variants:

207. 15 can] to 16 late] theare
 18 the] this: pleased] lyked
 19 he] it: well] me
 22 whales] whale his 23 of] a
 24 coy] fearce
 25 Vnto] Toward
 30 With that] Wheare with 32 hadst] hadest: before] beforne
 33 nor] and: forlore] forlorne
 35 Go] But: where] Om.: finde] seeke oute
 36 With that] Forthwith: began] begounne
 38 wrath] rage
208. 4 ye] you
 10 haue heard] dothe know
 12 strong] both strong 14 whom] who 15 lese his life] seeke his death
 16 liues doe] lyfe, to 17 willes] will: ar] is: died] dyed right
 18 now I doe] well I may: moueth] movid
 21 other] others: ye] you
 22 our kyndes] my kynd
 24 fled] fedd: slay] flee
 27 on] of 28 coyed] coy
 29 trapt] traynd: with] bye
 30 lust] list: loue] bow
 31 of currant sort] a currant fawne 35 nor ¹] or: nor ²] that 38 ruse] rew

208. 39 This] Thus: ne] no
 40 And for reuenge therof] In the revendge wherof 41 I] A 42 luck] happ
 209. 2 and bow] to low
 3 ye] you: sailes] saile
 4 Sith] Syns
 5 go . . . shepe] of symple sheepe go slake your wrath
 8 aucthor] awthour: the] this 9 for] by

In Englands Heroicall Epistles, 1598 (Surrey to Geraldine), Drayton has Surrey mention "beauteous Stanhope, whom all tongues report, To be the glory of the English Court." In his notes (N₃^v) Drayton writes: "Of the beauty of that Lady, hee [Surrey] himselfe testifies in an Elegie which he writ of her, refusing to daunce with him, which hee seemeth to alegorize vnder a lyon & a wolfe. As of himselfe he saieith

A Lyon saw I late, as white as any snow.

And of her [207. 22-24 quoted]." Earlier Drayton explained that the white lion was on one of the Howard badges. There is little doubt that Surrey wrote the poem against Lady Anne Stanhope, who later became the wife of Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford and Duke of Somerset; and Bapst (Deux gentils-hommes-poètes, pp. 370-371) presents evidence to date it in August, 1542. Nott, as always, drags the Fair Geraldine into the poem by the hair of the head, explaining that her refusal to dance with Surrey brought about the final rupture in their relations. See p. 74, above.

207. 12 by a lady. Only D has the correct reading, to a lady.

16 A Lion. The heraldic emblem of the Howard family; hence Surrey himself.

23 A fairer beast of fresher hue, &c. In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 136, this line is quoted as a good example of "monosyllables and bissyllables enterlaced." See another example in the notes to No. 16.

208. 5 with his pawes a crowned king deuoured. A reference to the poet's grandfather, Thomas Howard, who defeated James IV of Scotland in the battle of Flodden Field (1513).

11-15 for loue one of the race did end his life, &c. Referring to Thomas Howard, son of the Duke of Norfolk and the poet's half-uncle, who was committed to the Tower in June, 1536, for having become engaged to Lady Margaret Douglas, Henry VIII's niece, without that monarch's knowledge or consent. He died in prison about two years later.

14 This gentle beast likewise. In B+ likewise is needlessly changed to so dyed to agree with the context.

20-21 lure me to the trade, &c. "Lure me to follow the course which for many years you craftily made others trace (follow)."

208. 25 I can deuour no yelding pray, &c. Cf. 60. 33 n. and 208. 32-33. Turbervile, Tragical Tales [ca. 1574] 1587 (1837 reprint, p. 300), remarks, "The noble minded Lion kills no yeelding beast by crueltie"; Willobie His Avisa, 1594 (ed. G. B. Harrison, 1926, p. 125), "The raging Lyon neuer rendes The yeelding pray, that prostrate lyes." This characteristic of the lion is vouched for also in Pliny's Natural History, viii. 19, and in Topsell's The Historie of Foure-Footed Beastes, 1607, p. 467.

31 to such beasts of currant sort, &c. The MS. reading (see above) is not explained by Padelford. Nott holds it to be "preferable to that of the printed copies, though the passage is not intelligible even as it now stands." He suggests that the line should read, "And to such beasts accouchant fawn, as should seek travail bright." The old annotator in I (Bodleian) emended the line to read, "And to such beasts of cravan sort theie will their travell hight."

38 shal ruse. Evidently ruse is a misprint for rue, the reading in B+ and the MS.

41 I thousand. Read A thousand with B+ and the MS.

209. 10 (No. 265) The faithfull louer declareth, &c. In every edition (No. [30] in B-I, sigs. D3-D3^v in BC, B7-B7^v in D-G, B7-B8 in H, B6^v-B7^v in I). Padelford (pp. 66-67) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

- 209. 36 doe] do
- 38 $\frac{y}{y}$] yat
- 210. 15 forgetfulness] forgetfulness
- 24 delay] delaye

There are other copies in MS. Ashmole 176, fols. 97-97^v; with music in The Melvill Book of Roundels, 1612, ed. Bantock and Anderton, pp. 47-48, 199-200, Roxburghe Club, 1916 (forty short lines corresponding, with considerable changes, to 209. 15-28, 33-34, 31-32, 35-36); and with music in John Forbes's Cantus, Songs and Fancies, song 1 (1666, 1682, differing in many details from A, especially in the last half of the poem). A manuscript of "Scottish Musick" once owned by Dr. Burney and dated 1627-1629 (see The Gentleman's Magazine, xciii [1823], 122) contained the music for "Give caire does cause men cry." No. 265 was registered for publication as a ballad, "yf Care may Cause men crye," in 1557-58; and an imitation or moralization called "Care Causethe men to Crye newly altered" was registered in 1562-63 (Rollins, Analytical Index, nos. 262, 1213). It is apparently imitated in No. 210. But Surrey himself seems to refer in his opening line to a poem by Wyatt (Foxwell, 1, 129-130) beginning,

Hevyn and erth and all that here me plain,
Do well perceve what care doeth cause me cry.

19-21 For all thynges hauing life, &c. A similar idea is expressed in the six opening lines of Petrarch's sestina in vita 1 (Rime, 22, p. 15):

A qualunque animale alberga in terra, se non se alquanti ch' ànno in odio il sole,
 tempo da travagliare è quanto è 'l giorno;
 ma poi che 'l ciel accende le sue stelle,
 qual torna a casa et qual s'anida in selva, per aver posa almeno infin a l'alba.

Petrarch and Surrey made these expressions a commonplace in Elizabethan poetry. They are repeated at 163. 5-8.

209. 35-36 Then as the stricken dere, &c. Perhaps the source of Melbancke's remark in Philotimus, 1583, Y2^v: "The stricken Deare withdrawes himself to die, and so will I." See also 163. 9, and cf. Sackville, in The Mirror for Magistrates, 1563 (ed. Haslewood, II, 342), "Like to the dere that stricken with the dart, Withdrawes himselfe into some secret place," and Hamlet, III. ii. 282, "let the stricken deer go weep." Lines 35-36 and 210. 24-25 are quoted in The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 248, as examples of "generall resemblance, or bare similitude."

38 the streemes of those two welles. Cf. 184. 13 n.

210. 32 to serue untill my brethe. This apparently means, "to serve until my final breath"; but (as Nott suggests) brethe may be an error for death, the subject discussed in lines 33-37.

37 I do bequeth my weried ghost to serue her afterwarde. Cf. Chaucer, Troilus and Criseyde, IV. 319-322, but when myn herte dyeth,

 My spirit, which that so un-to yow hyeth,
 Receyve in gree, for that shal ay yow serve;
 For-thy no fors is, though the body sterue;

and The Knight's Tale (A. 2768-2770),

But I biquethe the service of my gost
 To yow aboven every creature,
 Sin that my lyf may no lenger dure.

211. 4 (No. 266) Of his loue called Anna. In every edition (No. [118] in B-I, sigs. L2 in BC, F2 in D-H, E8 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 48) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

211. 8 Anna] aunswer
 9 The only] And eke the 10 My loue that medeth] A love rewardeth
 11 will you] would ye 12 salue, and eke] helth eke and

For other riddles see Nos. 115 and 268. Nott (Wyatt, p. 560) suggests that No. 266 may have been an early poem written on Anne Boleyn.

6 What word is that, that changeth not. The word Anna is a palindrome. John Taylor, in The Nipping or Snipping of Abuses (Works, 1630, Spenser Society ed., p. 404) says: "This line is the same backward, as it is forward, and I will giue any man five shillings apiece for as many as they can make in English:

Lewd did I liue, & euil did I dwell."

211. 13 (No. 267) That pleasure is mixed with euery paine. In every edition (No. [119] in B-I, sigs. L2^v in BC, F2^v in D-G, F2 in H, E8 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 54) prints the poem from MS. Egerton 2711, with the following variants:

211. 16 Sometye ber flowers fayre and fresh of hue 17 is also] offtyme is 18 And causith helth in man for to renue
 19 Ffire that purgith allthing that is unclene
 20 hurt . . . be] hele and hurt: and if thes bene
 22 euery] evry

The source of No. 267 is Serafino's strambotto (Opere, 1516, fol. 117; also in Poliziano's Le Stanze, etc., ed. Carducci, 1912, p. 606):

Ogni pungente & uenenosa spina
 Se uede à qualche tempo esser fiorita,
 Crudel ueneno posto in medicina,
 Più uolte torna lhom da morte uita,
 El foco che ogni cosa arde & ruina,
 Spesso risana una mortal ferita,
 Così spero el mio mal me fia salute,
 Chogni cosa che noce há pur uirtute.

17 Poison is also put in medicine. Compare with this line and with the thought of the entire poem Thomas Norton's verses prefixed to William Turner's A perseruatiue or triacle, agaynst the poyson of Pelagius, 1551, which begin:

And euen as lerned leches do oftentymes
 (Triall techeth dayly tofore our eyes)
 Put in poyson, to make for medicines:
 So make their bale thy boote.

23 (No. 268) A riddle of a gift geuen by a Ladie. In every edition (No. [120] in B-I, sigs. L2^v in BC, F2^v in D-G, F2 in H, E8 in I). Miss Foxwell (I, 49) prints the poem from a Harington MS. (Additional 28635), with a single variant — the omission of which (line 26). A copy (not known to her) in MS. Rawlinson Poet. 172, fol. 3^v, has the same title as in A but presents the following variant readings:

211. 29 giue] gaue
 30 And] Om.: it] Om.
 31 this is] is this

In the margin of I (Bodleian) the second and later annotator wrote, "I think it is a Kysse." For other riddles see the notes to No. 266. George Gascoigne imitated No. 268 in his Posies, 1575 (Complete Poems, ed. Hazlitt, 1, 365):

A Riddle.

A Lady once did aske of me
This preatie thing in priuitie:
Good sir (quod she) faine would I craue
One thing which you your selfe not haue;
Nor neuer had yet in times past,
Nor neuer shall while life doth last.
And if you seeke to find it out,
You loose your labour out of doubt:
Yet if you loue me as you say,
Then giue it me, for sure you may.
Meritum petere, graue.

In The Gentleman's Journal, July, 1692, p. 20, Peter Motteux tells his readers: "I shall be obliged to you, if you give me a Solution of that ['Ænigma'] which follows. It was written by the Earl of Surrey, about 130 Years ago. I have been desired to explain it, but shall be glad to find your Thoughts concur with mine, before I disclose them." He then reprints Wyatt's "Riddle" (with slight variations of diction). In his next issue (August, p. 24) Motteux remarks: "I have received several Explications of the Earl of Surrey's Riddle in my last; some think it one thing, some another; for my part, I must own my self partly of the sentiment of an honourable Person, who believes that it refers much to Mr. Cowley's Verses."

*"Thou thing of subtile slippery kind,
Which Women lose, and yet no Man can find."*

"And as the Lady had it not to give, I suppose that she pretended at least to give it him to make the blessing the greater."

212. 2 (No. 269) That speaking or profering, &c. In every edition (No. [121] in B-I, sigs. L2^v in BC, F2^v in D-G, F2-F2^v in H, E8-E8^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 386) reprints the poem from A, misprinting dothe (line 6) as doth.

11 (No. 270) He ruleth not though he raigne, &c. In every edition (No. [122] in B-I, sigs. L3 in BC, F3 in D-G, F2^v in H, E8^v in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 387) reprints the poem from A, with the following errors:

212. 17	empyre]	Empyre:	Indian]	Inlian
21	minde]	mind
25	the]	thee:	workyng]	working
26	bee]	be
27	foule]	foul:	conquere]	conquer
28	golde]	gold
31	selfe]	self

The poem is based on Boethius (as Nott points out in his Wyatt volume, p. 551), probably on Chaucer's translation: stanza 1 corresponds to Boethius,

III, meter 5; stanza 2 to III, meter 6; stanza 3 to III, meter 3. The first stanza of No. 270 is quoted in Allot's England's Parnassus, 1600 (ed. Crawford, no. 877) over Surrey's name, which in the notes (p. 443) Crawford corrects to Wyatt's. Crawford adds that "the style of this poem is remarkably like that of a poem in Sir Thomas Elyot's Governour," beginning, "Though that thy power stretcheth both far and large." For the numerous blunders Allot makes in the ascriptions of the passages he quotes, see England's Parnassus, pp. 543-544, and above, 205. 5-6 n.

212. 32-34 thy couitise And busye bytyng . . . do thy death profet. "Your covetousness and sharp corroding desire yet would never cease, nor your death be any profit to your wretched life." Chaucer's words are: "never ne shal his bytyng bisnesse for-leten him whyl he liveth, ne the lighte richesnes ne sholle nat beren him compaignie whan he is ded."

213. 2 (No. 271) whether libertie by losse of life, &c. In every edition (No. [123] in B-I, sigs. L₃-L₃^v in BC, F₃-F₃^v in D-G, F₂^v-F₃ in H, E₈^v-F in I). Miss Foxwell (1, 364-365) prints the poem from a Corpus Christi College (Cambridge) MS., with the following variants.

213. 6 within] in
 7 her foe] and 10 Lo] Certes: seke] do seke
 14 is] is the: but] Om.
 15 better to] oute of daunger yet to 16 Than bide in] Rather than with 17 For small pleasure moche payne to suffer
 18 Rather] Soner: thinketh] thincketh it
 20 By lengthe of lyff yet shulde I suffer
 21 I do but wait a] Adwayting 22 Oft] Om.: do] Om.: in one] within an 23 oppressed me now] me oppressed
 25 wholly] utterlye
 27 where] in: lengthes] lengthe of 28 these] Om.: euyls] ylles
 29 that here dothe] you that here her 30 What saye ye] Your advise you: the] Om.
 31 cage] cage in: the] Om.: opprest] to be opprest
 32 to] for to

With this poem — which belongs to the "lover's-dilemma type" favored by the troubadours — compare the moral of John Lydgate's Here foloweth the Churle and the byrde (Mychel's ed., 1550?), B₄^v, where the bird says,

For better is fredome/ with lytel in gladnesse
 Than to be thrall/ with all worldly rychesse.

No. 271, as Professor J. N. D. Bush points out in The Philological Quarterly, v (1926), 327, is imitated in the following passage from George Pettie's A Petite Pallace of Pettie his Pleasure, 1576 (ed. Gollancz, 1, 123-124): "And as the bird enclosed in cage, the cage door being set open, and the hawk her enemy sitting without watching for her, between death and prison piteously oppressed standeth in doubt whether it be better still to remain in prison, or to go forth to be a prey for the hawk, so stand I in doubt whether it be better by losing life to get liberty, or by living to become thrall and bond, and live in continual torment and vexation of mind."

213. 28 chuse the best. The proverb demands the reading lest, that is, least (cf. also line 30).

217. 2 (No. 272) The louer declareth his paines, &c. Not in A (No. [222] in B-I, sigs. Y^v-Z in BC, L^{8v}-M in D-H, L^{3v}-L⁴ in I). A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 117-117^v) presents the following variants:

217. 2 The louer, &c.] Of purgation
 10 boile] boylde: leade againe] skalding lead
 12 with deadly paine] from foote to head 15 their] theise
 23 be] are: kept] put 24 are aungels] Angells be 25 know I] I know
 218. 3 thousand] thousandt
 12 So that I know] syth I know not 18 And as I am] Beholding heare this

218. 22 (No. 273) Of the death of sir Thomas wiate, &c. Not in A (No. [223] in B-I, sigs. Z in BC, M in D-G, M-M^v in H, L^{4v} in I). A copy in MS. Harleian 78, fol. 15, runs as follows:

S^r Antonie Sentlenger of S^r T.W.

Thus lyvethe the deade that whilome lived here
 Emonge the deade that quick go on the grownde Thoughe he be deade yet dothe he quicke appere by immortall fame † deathe cane not confounde his lyf for aye his fame in trompe shall sounde thoughe he be deade yet is he thus alive no deathe cane † lyf from Wiatter lyf deprive

With various unauthorized changes, the foregoing verses (the final word in which was first written as depart and then corrected to deprive) were printed in the unpublished Percy-Steevens edition of C (II, 112), in the 1831 edition of Wyatt and Surrey (II, 238), and elsewhere. "Sir Anthony Sentlyger, deputie of Irelande," says The Firste Parte of Churchyardes Chippes, 1575 (Collier's reprint, p. 128), was "a wyes and noble knight," as well as a personal benefactor to Churchyard.

31 (No. 274) That length of time, &c. Not in A (No. [224] in B-I, sigs. Z-Z^v in BC, M-M^v in D-G, M^v in H, L^{4v} in I).

34 softe. Read oft with D+.

219. 6 (No. 275) The beginning of the epistle of Penelope, &c. Not in A (No. [225] in B-I, sigs. Z^v in BC, M^v in D-H, L^{4v} in I). These Alexandrines are a translation of Ovid's Heroides, I. 1-12, beginning,

Haec tua Penelope lento tibi mittit, Ulixē;
Nil mihi rescribas ut tamen; ipse veni!

In Turbervile's translation of the Heroides, 1567, sig. A, the corresponding lines run thus:

To thee that lingrest all too long,
thy Wyfe (Vlysses) sendes:
Gayne write not, but by quick returne for absence make amendes.
To Greekish Nymphes that hatefull Troie is now to ruine brought:
Scarce mought the King and all his wealth
requite the wrong they wrought.
O that the surging Seas had drencht that lustfull Lecher tho:
When he to Lacedemon came imbarckt, and wrought our wo.
Then should I not haue layde my limmes
in desert couth alone:
Ne made complaint that Phæbus steades to slowe to glade had gone.
Then should no Beldames distaffe made,
my Wydowish hande so faynt:
Whilst I to waste the wearie night,
with spinning was attaynt.
When stooode I not in worser awe
in deede than was befell?
Aye loue is passing full of feare, though euery thing be well.

219. 21 (No. 276) The louer asketh pardon, &c. Not in A (No. [226] in B-I, sigs. Z^v in BC, M^v in D-G, M^v-M² in H, L₅ in I). Koeppel (Studien, p. 88) shows this poem to be a translation of Petrarch, sonetto in vita 1 (Rime, I, p. 1):

Voi ch'ascoltate in rime sparse il suono di quei sospiri ond' io nudriva 'l core in sul mio primo giovenile errore, quand' era in parte altr' uom da quel ch' i' sono;
del vario stile in ch' io piango et ragiono,
fra le vane speranze e 'l van dolore,
ove sia chi per prova intenda amore,
spero trovar pietà non che perdono.
Ma ben veggio or sí come al popol tutto favola fui gran tempo; onde sovente di me medesimo meco mi vergogno:
et del mio vaneggiar vergogna è 'l frutto,
e 'l pentersi, e 'l conoscer chiaramente che quanto piace al mondo è breve sogno.

Like No. 277, No. 276 is apparently an attempt to write a sonnet, though it is in septenary couplets.

An entirely different translation in a Harington MS. (Additional 36529, fol. 45) runs thus:

You that in rime dispersed here the sownd of wonted sighes that whylome eas'd my hart in my greene yeares whilest youthe tooke errours part whan I strayd farr from that course synce I fownd of the sere sort wheare in I plead and plaine somytyme w̄ hope somtyme w̄ heuy mynd at you I say whear youth did euer raine
pitie I troust as well as pardon fynde howb' it I know what brewts ther haue ben bred abrode of me long tyme, wherby not seeld euin at my self shame staynes my cheeks w̄ red such ar the frewts which those uain coourses yeeld repentance eke, and knowledge printed deepe that eache worlds Joy is but a slombring sleepe.

220. 2 (No. 277) The louer sheweth, &c. Not in A (No. [227] in B-I, sigs. Z2 in BC, M2 in D-H, L5 in I). A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fol. 37) has the following variants:

220. 6 mine] my
9 none] no
10 plight] flight
12 vewed] vew'd: approcht] approche
16 which fleest] that flyeste
17 vnweaponed] vnweap'nyd

Koeppel (Studien, p. 88) shows this poem to be a translation of Petrarch, sonetto in vita 3 (Rime, 3, p. 2):

Era il giorno ch'al sol si scoloraro per la pietà del suo fattore i rai;
quando i' fui preso, et non me ne guardai,
che i be' vostr' occhi, Donna, mi legaro.
Tempo non mi pareo da far riparo contra colpi d'Amor; però m'andai secur, senza sospetto: onde i miei guai nel commune dolor s'incominciaro.
Trovommi Amor del tutto disarmato, et aperta la via per gli occhi al core,
che di lagrime son fatti uscio et varco.
Però, al mio parer, non li fu honore
ferir me de saetta in quello stato, a voi armata non mostrar pur l'arco.

Like the foregoing poem (No. 276), No. 277 is a "sonnet" in septenary couplets.

18 (No. 278) The louer describeth, &c. Not in A (No. [228] in B-I, sigs. Z2-Aa^v in BC, M2-M5^v in D-G, M2-M6 in H, L5-L8^v in I). In his Epitaphes, etc., 1567 (p. 192), Turbervile has a poem beginning, Though noble Surrey sayde that absence woonders frame,

And makes things out of sight forgot,
and thereof takes his name.

This is a reference to 224. 26, and Nott accordingly printed the poem in his edition of Surrey. Turbervile's loose statement is not worth taking seriously. He merely had one of the poems of the Songs and Sonnets in mind and attributed it to Surrey because Surrey's name instinctively came to him.

In The Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 186, 225. 22-25, 28-29, are quoted as examples of "Polisindeton, or the Coople clause," so-called "for that euery clause is knit and coupled together with a coniunctiue."

220. 28 And laughes vpon the earth anone. Nott suggests that the author had in mind Lucretius, De Rerum Natura, III. 21-22, "semperque innubilis aether integit, et large diffuso lumine ridet."

30 the teares of her own kinde. That is, dew.

221. 40 Saue I alas. The phrase recurs at 3. 29 and 209. 23.

222. 11 That lacke the thing should comfort me. The same idea is expressed at 10. 29.

29 As nay. Read as may with C+.

224. 4 old pamphlets. Not dry prose tracts, but poetical verses. See Thomas Proctor's use of the word in the Gorgeous Gallery, p. 79.

225. 30-34 On thee she speakes, &c. Nott suggests a borrowing from Terence's Eunuch, I. 191, 193-196:

egone quid velim?

.
dies noctisque me ames, me desideres,
me somnies, me exspectes, de me cogites,
me speres, me te oblectes, mecum tota sis:
meus fac sis postremo animus quando ego sum tuos.

227. 20 (No. 279) Of the troubled comon welth, &c. Not in A (No. [229] in B-I, sigs. Aa^v-Aa2^v in BC, M5^v-M6^v in D-G, M6-M7 in H, L8^v-M^v in I). A copy in a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 138^v-139^v) has the following variants:

227. 28 set] did sett
228. 13 sad] Om.
17 demed] deemde
19 stroied Troians] Troyans stroyed
24 of²] eke of 34 cloke] clooke
37 oreturneth] over turneth
42 midst] myddes: this] his
229. 6 welth] health
18 ease] case

The poem was probably written about the rebellion of Sir Thomas Wyatt the younger (son of the poet), which began on the official announcement, January 15, 1554, of Queen Mary's marriage to Philip II, and ended with his surrender on February 8. Wyatt was executed on April 11, and the poem must have been written shortly afterwards. But 228. 31 may perhaps indicate that Lady Jane Grey's rebellion is aimed at. Many of the details about Troy sound as if they were borrowed from Surrey's translation of the second book of the Aeneid.

227. 40 Treason in Anthenor and Eneas. According to some accounts, Aeneas was led by his hatred of Paris into betraying Troy to the Greeks: Antenor, when sent on a mission to negotiate peace with Agamemnon, arranged with that king and Odysseus to deliver the city into their hands.

228. 12-13 compted . . . As sad deuines in matter but of sport. "They were accounted serious diviners in matters that were merely trivial." People thought that Cassandra and Laocoön were taking matters of no import too seriously.

229. 20 (No. 280) The louer to his loue, &c. Not in A (No. [230] in B-I, sigs. Aa2^v in BC, M6^v in D-G, M7 in H, M^v-M2 in I).

31 (No. 281) The louer sheweth, &c. Not in A (No. [231] in B-I, sigs. Aa2^v-Aa3 in BC, M6^v-M7 in D-G, M7-M7^v in H, M2 in I). With the subject-matter see the notes to No. 241, and compare John Dickenson, The Shepheardes Complaynt, ca. 1595 (Prose and Verse, ed. Grosart, p. 18): "IUPITER himselfe . . . felt the force of his aspiring Nephewes fatall weapons, else would he not haue courted LEDA in the shape of a Swanne, wafted EUROPA in forme of a Bull, descended into DANAES lap like a goulden showre." Dickenson's comment is somewhat like a passage in the Octavia (lines 200-207), a play long attributed to Seneca.

230. 22 (No. 282) The louer disceiued by his loue, &c. Not in A (No. [232] in B-I, sigs. Aa3-Aa3^v in BC, M7-M7^v in D-G, M7^v-M8 in H, M2-M2^v in I). Nott (C. 60. O. 13) observes that in MS. Harleian 78, fol. 30^v, a copy of this poem has the signature H. H. and "therefore may be ascribed to the Earl of Surrey." It really has H. S. (Henry Surrey), — not an uncommon way of referring to the poet, — in the margin opposite the first line. In the same MS. No. 28 is signed H. S. Padelford accepted this poem as Surrey's, reprinting it in Anglia, xxix, 336-337, in Early Sixteenth Century Lyrics, 1907, pp. 41-42, and in his edition of Surrey, pp. 57-58. In the last work he constructed a text of his own from A and the Harleian MS. Collations with the MS. follow:

- 230. 26 finde] seeke
- 27 that] the
- 28 seke] say
- 29 case] cause
- 31 bewaile] repent
- 33 wanton, raging] Transposed
- 34 me] I

- 35 Scilla] Cillas seas
 37 hauen] heauen
 39 Much like] lyke vnto
 231. 2 her] his
 3 So] for 6 there now] Transposed
 8 as] is 9 As] that
 10-15 Om.

The initial letters of the stanzas of No. 282 (cf. Eleanor P. Hammond, "Poems 'Signed' by Sir Thomas Wyatt," Modern Language Notes, xxxvii [1922], 505-506) form the anagram I-A-W-T-T, possibly indicating that Wyatt was the author. For similar cases see Surrey's No. 16, as well as Nos. 225 and 296 by uncertain authors. What credence, if any (cf. the notes to No. 200), should be given to this type of signaling is doubtful.

230. 29-30 Since Troylus case. The author says he thought his sweetheart was a Penelope, himself a Ulysses; but he finds her false like Cressid, himself faithful and deserted like Troilus.

231. 16 (No. 283) The louer hauing enioyed his loue, &c. Not in A (No. [233] in B-I, sigs. Aa3^v-Aa4 in BC, M7^v-M8 in D-G, M8-M8^v in H, M2^v-M3 in I).

232. 18 (No. 284) Totus mundus in maligno positus. Not in A (No. [234] in B-I, sigs. Aa4-Bb in BC, M8-N in D-G, M8^v-N^v in H, M3-M4 in I). The title (which, by the way, is the legend accompanying the first emblem in Francis Quarles's Emblems, 1635) comes from the first Epistle of John, v. 19 (Vulgate), "Et mundus totus in maligno positus est." Thomas Lodge, in Wits Miserie, 1596, sig. B (Complete Works, ed. Hunterian Club, iv, 7), remarks: "that true sentence is frustrate, Totus mundus in maligno positus est, The whole world is set on mischiefe."

A copy, with the same title as in A, is in MS. Rawlinson Poet. 82, fols. 1^v-2^v; it presents only a few unimportant variants:

233. 9 gainst] against 12 are] is 32 Flattry] flatterie
 38 be we] we be

At the end of the poem is the phrase, "τῷ Θεῷ μόνῳ δοξα." Nothing else is included in the MS. except (fol. 3) the following lines:

Sir John Cheek.
 Who can persuade, where treson is aboue reson;
 and Might ruleth right; and it is had for lawful, whatsoever is lustful; and commotioners is better, then Commissioners; and common Wo is nam'd Common Welth.
 Gabriel Haruey.

The foregoing passage may indicate that Sir John Cheke wrote No. 284, and that the Rawlinson MS. is in the handwriting of Harvey. Such, at any rate, was the opinion of the compiler of the Bodleian Summary Catalogue of Western Manuscripts, III (1895), 299.

232. 30 Duty by (will not), &c. The parentheses are used where we should now use quotation-marks; the MS. has (WIL NOT). Cf. 48. 31 n.; Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, sig. T, "O let not (was) worke all delight, let (is) and (shall) haue part in pay"; and The Phoenix Nest, 1593, p. 6, "This word (was slaine) straightway did moue."

39 A wise man saith not, had I wist. Numerous examples of this proverb are cited in my notes to the Paradise, pp. 182-183.

234. 5 as chickens vnder the hen. Cf. Matthew xxiii. 37.

8 (No. 285) The wise trade of lyfe. Not in A (No. [235] in B-I, sigs. Bb in BC, N in D-G, N^v in H, M₄ in I).

12 Wit bought is of to dere a price. Referring to the proverb, "Wit's never good till it be bought," on which see my notes in the Paradise, p. 189. Cf. also Gascoigne's A Hundreth Sundrie Flowres, 1573 (ed. Ward, 1926, p. 98), "Bought wytte is deare."

24 (No. 286) That few wordes shew wisdom, &c. Not in A (No. [236] in B-I, sigs. Bb-Bb^v in BC, N-N^v in D-G, N^v-N₂ in H, M₄-M₄^v in I). The opening line suggests a possible connection between this poem and the ballad of "who lest to leave at Ease and lede a quyett lyf &c." that was registered for publication in 1566-67 (Rollins, Analytical Index, no. 2947). In MS. Additional 38813, fols. 1-2 (in J. P. Collier's handwriting, however), there is a ballad on the same theme as No. 286. It is said to be copied from "a contemp: MS. in the possession of Mr. Bright," is signed "master Knight," and begins,

It hath beene ofte both sayde & soonge
Take heede what woords do pas the toonge.

No. 286 has borrowings from Proverbs (compare especially 235. 20-21 with Proverbs xvii. 28) and possibly from Cato's Disticha de Moribus, I. 3,

Virtutem primam esse puta compescere linguam:
Proximus ille deo est, qui scit ratione tacere.

31 bestrow them well. This may mean bestrew, but C+ read bestow.

235. 4-5 Two eares, one tong onely, &c. Edmund Tilney, in The Flower of Friendship, 1568, C3-C3^v, remarks: "Xenophon sayeth, that nature gaue vs two eares, and but one mouth, to the intent we should heare more, than we ought to speake." He is echoed by Howell, in The Arbor of Amitie, 1568 (Poems, ed. Grosart, p. 5): "that siluer sentence of the Philosopher Zeno . . . that nature had giuen vs two eares and one mouth, to the entent, that we should heare more than we vtter in wordes." In Plutarch's Morals ("On Listening to Lectures," §3) we read: "It is a common saying that Nature has given each of us two ears and one tongue, because we should do less talking than listening." Cf. also Thomas Lodge, Wits Miserie, 1596, M₄ (Complete Works, ed. Hunterian Club, IV, 87), "It was noted by AESCHILUS the Tragedian, that God in our bodies hath planted two eies, two eares, two nostrils, and the braine about the tongue, to giues [sic] vs to vnderstād, that we ought rather see, hear, and conceiue, then speake"; and Gabriel Harvey, The Trimming of Thomas Nashe, 1597 (Works, ed. Grosart, III, 60), "Nature gaue thee two eares and but one tongue, because thou shouldest heare more then thou shouldest speake."

235. 10 Words wisely set are worth much gold. Cf. Proverbs xxv. 11.

26 (No. 287) The complaint of a hot woer, &c. Not in A (No. [237] in B-I, sigs. Bb^v-Bb² in BC, N^v-N² in D-G, N²-N^{2v} in H, M₄-M₅ in I).

29 A Kinde of coale, &c. Similar natural phenomena are mentioned in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, B₄^v, L₃^v, T₂: "In Fraunce, there is a Well of such chilling coldnes, that it wil conuert wood into stone, and yet oftentimes, flakes of flaming fier haue bene sene to issue from it"; "the wels which be in Norwaye, whose licour is so grose, and extreme could, that if wood be cast in them they turne it to yron"; "There are found certeine stones in a riuer in Pontus, which thē take on fire, when ŷ wind is greatest, and by how muche ŷ more they are couered in water, by so muche the fearcer and brighter they burne." In Willobie His Avisa, 1594 (ed. G. B. Harrison, 1926, p. 89), we read of "canal cole,"

There is a cole that burnes the more,
The more ye cast colde water neare.

See also Pliny's Natural History, II, 107-110.

236. 31 (No. 288) The answer. Not in A (No. [238] in B-I, sigs. Bb²-Bb^{2v} in BC, N²-N^{2v} in D-G, N^{2v}-N³ in H, M₅-M_{5v} in I).

237. 10 the bauen blase. Bauen, meaning brushwood (hence, quickly dying out), is used also by Turbervile (Ovid's Heroides, 1567, I^{8v}), "kindeled Torches shone With Bauen blase"; by Francis Meres (Palladis Tamia, 1598, fol. 150^v), "As the Bauin is but a blaze: so beautie"; and in The Play of Dicke of Devonshire, ca. 1626 (A. H. Bullen, A Collection of Old English Plays, II, 35), "our Spanish ovens are not heated with one Bavyn." Many other examples are cited in M. P. Tilley's Elizabethan Proverb Lore (1926), p. 69.

21 (No. 289) An other of the same. Not in A (No. [242] in B-I, sigs. Bb₃^v in BC, N₃^v in D-G, N₄ in H, M₆^v in I). The title is explained by the fact that in B-I the poem follows No. 253. There are other copies of this elegy in (1) a Harington MS. (Additional 28635, fols. 139^v 140) and (2) MS. Cotton Titus A. xxiv, fol. 79^v. The latter is signed "finis. norton." Collations follow:

237. 23 lore] love (1)
 24 we] they (1), the (2): hye] gye (2)
 25 and] to (1, 2)
 26 that] the (1)

237. 27 and] withe (2): worldly] wordly (2)
 28 withstand] resist (1, 2)
 30 me] my (1)
 35 on] in (2)
 40 will] shall (1, 2): for] of (1, 2)
 41 Now] thus (2)

238. 2 (No. 290) The answer. Not in A (No. [246] in B-I, sigs. Bb4^v-Cc^v in BC, N4^v-N5^v in D-G, N5-N6 in H, M7^v-M8 in I). The poem is an answer to No. 254, which it follows in B-I.

7 No minde of meane. "No moderate, well-balanced mind," that is, no mind that kept the golden mean. The phrase is opposed to heat of braine (G. L. K.).

10-11 Fansy forced . . . light to get. "Love (desire) impelled by the false report that she was easy to win."

19 This laud had lied if you had sped. "This praise (of the lady's chastity) would have been falsified if you had succeeded (in winning her)."

26 you blame brute of brutish traine. "It is brutish (stupid) of you to blame report (which declared that she was virtuous), when it turns out that the report was true."

239. 3-4 Good should by geason, &c. "Good should win no place because of its rarity, nor should that which is good be not esteemed (made nought) if it is common instead of rare."

12-13 Ye will repent, and right for done. Ye . . . shame. "You will repent, and rightly; for you have done a deed that deserves shame." There should be no punctuation after done (G. L. K.).

19 your thrall. Read you thrall with D+.

24 (No. 291) The louer complaineth, &c. Not in A (No. [249] in B-I, sigs. Cc2-Cc3 in BC, N6-N7 in D-G, N7-N7^v in H, N-N^v in I).

241. 4 (No. 292) The louer wounded of Cupide, &c. Not in A (No. [250] in B-I, sigs. Cc3-Cc4 in BC, N7-N8 in D-G, N7^v-N8^v in H, N^v-N2^v in I).

243. 8 (No. 293) Of womens changeable will. Not in A (No. [251] in B-I, sigs. Cc4 in BC, N8 in D-G, N8^v in H, N2^v in I).

19 To make death surgeant for my sore. Borrowed in Melbancke's Philotimus, 1583, Y2^v: "no remedie remaines, but death must be surgeon of thy sore." Cf. also 1 Henry VI, II. iv. 53, "Opinion shall be surgeon to my hurt."

22 (No. 294) The louer complayneth, &c. Not in A (No. [252] in B-I, sigs. Cc4-Cc4^v in BC, N8-N8^v in D-G, N8^v-O in H, N2^v-N3 in I). The rhyme-scheme (aaaa baba caca baba dada) is peculiar.

29 My mouthes of mirth. For mouthes read months with D-G.

30 My times. For times we should expect tunes. The two words are so much alike in manuscript that the printer may have misread his copy.

244. 6 Hath rest my dame. For rest read reft (taken away by death).

244. 8 (No. 295) Of the golden meane. Not in A (No. [253] in B-I, sigs. Cc4^v in BC, N8^v in D-G, O-O^v in H, N₃ in I). It is, like Nos. 28 and 194, a translation of Horace's Carmina, II. 10 (given on pp. 152-153, above).

18 Of lofty ruing towers the fals the feller be. Obviously ruing is a printer's error for rising, since the poet was translating Horace's "*celsae . . . turre*s." He means, "the falling of lofty-rising towers is more terrible (than the falling of low towers)."

28 Ceast siluer sound, &c. For the meaning of this line see the translations at 26. 37-38 and 151. 22-23, as well as the Latin quoted in a note to the latter passage.

33 (No. 296) The praise of a true frende. Not in A (No. [254] in B-I, sigs. Cc4^v-Dd in BC, N8^v-O in D-G, O^v-O₂ in H, N₃-N₃^v in I). There is a copy in MS. Sloane 1896, fols. 40^v-42, with the following variants:

244. 33 Title: A true freind is a rare Juell
 35 that] doth: weyes] wey
 36 by . . . rise] is worthy to aryse
 245. 5 to forgo] for to goe
 11 alayde] alayed
 13 thy] thine
 20 loues] loueth
 24 haue] fynde
 25 that thou can craue] thou doe it mynde
 29 sayth] sayeth

The old annotator in I (Bodleian) notes, "Taken out of Tullye," referring, I suppose, to Cicero's De Amicitia. Many of the phrases, too, could well have been taken from "Of a Happy Life," chapter XVIII, in Seneca's Morals. On the anagram (W-W-I-T-A) of Wyatt formed by the initial letters of the first five stanzas see the notes to 230. 22 n.

245. 29 Such man to man a God, &c. I have found no examples of this proverb, though Professor Kittredge reminds me of a similar statement in Virgil's Eclogues, I. 7, "erit ille mihi semper deus." As an other self to thee in line 28 proves, the author had in mind the De Amicitia, XXI, 80: "quod nisi idem in amicitiam transferetur, verus amicus numquam reperietur: est enim is qui est tamquam alter idem."

34 (No. 297) Of the vanitie of mans lyfe. Not in A (No. [257] in B-I, sigs. Dd2-Dd2^v in BC, O₂-O₂^v in D-G, O₂^v-O₃ in H, N₄^v in I). A copy in MS. Sloane 1896, fol. 42, has the following variants:

245. 37 Whereon] whervpon
 40 elde] age
 246. 2 vnto] into
 5 whylome] sometymes
 11 rasde] rased: adowne] doune
 13 caryon] body

246. 16 (No. 298) The louer not regarded, Æc. Not in A (No. [258] in B-I, sigs. Dd2^v-Dd3 in BC, O2^v-O3 in D-G, O3-O3^v in H, N5 in I).

247. 11 With cost. Read Which cost with D-G.

15 derst you brake. For durst read erst with C+.

17 (No. 299) The complaint of a woman, Æc. Not in A (No. [259] in B-I, sigs. Dd3 in BC, O3 in D-G, O3^v in H, N5-N5^v in I).

35 (No. 300) The louer being made thrall, Æc. Not in A (No. [260] in B-I, sigs. Dd3-Dd3^v in BC, O3-O3^v in D-G, O4 in H, N5^v in I).

248. 16 (No. 301) The diuers and contrarie passions, Æc. Not in A (No. [261] in B-I, sigs. Dd3^v in BC, O3^v in D-G, O4 in H, N5^v-N6 in I). The poem is an imitation of the Petrarchan sonnet that Wyatt translated in No. 49, or perhaps of No. 49 itself.

34 (No. 302) The testament of the hawthorne. Not in A (No. [262] in B-I, sigs. Dd3^v-Dd4^v in BC, O3^v-O4^v in D-G, O4-O5 in H, N6-N7 in I). Tottel or his editor gave this poem its title from the first line, interpreting haw as hawthorn. With that interpretation the N. E. D. agrees, though it has no further example before 1821. But (as Berdan, Early Tudor Poetry, p. 434 n., observes) the poem has no connection whatever with a hawthorn, and "I Sely Haw" evidently means something like "I, unfortunate worthless man." The testament-form suggests, ultimately, French influence. For a genuine tree-testament, this time of a "pore crabbe-tre," see Thomas Wright's Songs and Ballads, pp. 169-171 (Roxburghe Club, 1860).

249. 24 she will withsaue. That is, vouchsafe, as in Hall's The Courte of Vertue, 1565, F5^v, K6 ("O lorde witsafe my voyce to here," "If thou witsafe nowe me to save"), and Whetstone's The Honorable Reputation of a Souldier, 1585, A4^v ("And if this Booke, you do witsafe to reade").

250. 36 (No. 303) The louer in dispeire, Æc. Not in A (No. [263] in B-I, sigs. Dd4^v-Ee in BC, O4^v-O5 in D-G, O5^v in H, N7 in I).

39 how do ye washe? Rhyme demands waste.

251. 29 (No. 304) Of his maistresse .m. B. Not in A (No. [264] in B-I, sigs. Ee-Ee2 in BC, O5-O6 in D-G, O5^v-O6^v in H, N7-N8 in I). The lady's name was apparently Bays. An imitation of this poem, also on a Mistress Bays, will be found in the Paradise, pp. 60-61.

253. 14 (No. 305) The louer complaineth, Æc. Not in A (No. [265] in B-I, sigs. Ee2-Ee2^v in BC, O6-O6^v in D-G, O6^v-O7 in H, N8-N8^v in I).

16 the serpent is, of course, Python, in memory of his conquest over which Phoebus Apollo founded the Pythian games.

19 The story of Apollo and Daphne is that told in Ovid's Metamorphoses, l. 452-567.

22 This Cupide hath a shaft of kinde. Cf. 6.6-7 n., and Thomas Watson, The Hekatompathia, 1582, sonnet 63 (ed. Arber, p. 99):

Loue hath two shaftes, the one of beaten gold,
By stroake wherof a sweete effect is wrought:
The other is of lumpishe leaden mould,
And worketh none effect, but what is nought.

253. 36 He burnt with heat, she felt no fire. Cf. Turbervile, Tragical Tales [ca. 1574], 1587 (1837 reprint, p. 20), "She felt no flame, when he, good man, did burne."

37, 39 fro, so. These words violate the rhyme-scheme, which is abacbc.

254. 14 (No. 306) A praise of .m. M. Not in A (No. [266] in B-I, sigs. Ee2^v-Ee3 in BC, O6^v-O7 in D-G, O7-O7^v in H, N8^v-O in I). Perhaps this poem suggested that called "In the prayse of a beautifull and vertuous Virgin, whose name begins with M.", in the Gorgeous Gallery, 1578, pp. 56-57. Nott (C. 60. O. 13) wrote: "Why not M:^{rs} Markham. The name would suit the metre: In w:^{ch} case this piece would belong to John Harington. The harmony of the versification, and the delicate taste of some of the thoughts and expressions might justify the conjecture." The conjecture seems to me good, though Nott himself later crossed out the note.

16 Of right my thought. The reading should be Of right methought, as in C+.

27 to seme. Rhyme and sense require to seen (that is, to be seen).

40 As rage of flame not Nilus stremes, Esc. Professor Kittredge comments: "For not read nor: 'Her looks would impress in hearts of flint such feelings as neither the rage of fire nor the streams of the Nile could increase in as many years as Nestor's.' This is merely hyperbole for the maximum of such feelings, which are so intense that the most powerful agencies could never intensify them further."

255. 6 (No. 307) An old louer, Esc. Not in A (No. [267] in B-I, sigs. Ee3 in BC, O7 in D-G, O7^v-O8 in H, O in I).

12-15 But trill the ball before my face, Esc. Evidently imitated by Melbancke in Philotimus, 1583, C2^v: "What trylle the ball againe my Iacke, and be contente to make some play, and I will lulle the on my lappe, with hey be bird now say not nay."

38 Is like to bring a foole to bed. Proverbial, as in Breton's Pasquils Mistresse, 1600, B3^v, "if her beautie . . . like a glasse, be euery woodcockes gaze, By fond affectes to bring a foole to bed."

256. 2 (No. 308) The louer forsaketh, Esc. Not in A (No. [268] in B-I, sigs. Ee3^v in BC, O7^v in D-G, O8-O8^v in H, O-O^v in I). The poem is based largely on proverbs and hawking-terms.

38 (No. 309) The louer preferreth his lady, Esc. Not in A (No. [269] in B-I, sigs. Ee3^v-Ee4 in BC, O7^v-O8 in D-G, O8^v-P in H, O^v-O2 in I). A court lady named Arundell is mentioned in a poem attributed to Richard Edwards. She appears as a maid of honor in the expense-account of Mary I's funeral (see Leicester Bradner, The Life and Poems of Richard Edwards, 1927, p. 95), and was perhaps Mary, daughter of the Earl of Arundel, later the wife of Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk. She may have been the Arundel referred to in No. 309; but compare Turbervile's praise of Elizabeth Arundel in his Epitaphes, 1567, pp. 14-15.

257. 10 Priams sonnes should probably read Priams sonne, as the reference seems to be to Paris (and Helen).

258. 2 (No. 310) The louer lamenteth, &c. Not in A (No. [270] in B-I, sigs. Ee4^v-Ff in BC, O8^v-P in D-G, P-P^v in H, O2-O2^v in I).

38 Let dead care for the dead. Cf. Matthew viii. 22, Luke ix. 60.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

References like 9 (8) or 112 (32) are to pages and lines of the text in volume I; if followed by an "n.," as 9 (8) n., 112 (32) n., a note on the word, or words, in question will be found in the present volume. References not followed by a figure, or figures, in parentheses are to pages of volume II. Initial i and j, u and v, are treated respectively as the same letter.

The glossary has been prepared with the idea of making readily accessible a large amount of lexicographical material (most of which, to be sure, offers no difficulties to any educated person) and of serving somewhat the same function as a concordance to the text of the miscellany.

- A, interj., ah, 112 (38)
a, prep., on (in), 118 (26), 138 (43), 139 (12), 161 (10)
A., D., Mistress, poems addressed to, 100 (23) n., 101 (17) n., 103 (9) n.
aback, hold, v. phr., restrain, 163 (32); put aback, rejected, 145 (29)
abate, v., subtract, 114 (32) abbreviations, explanation of those, used, 127 ff.
abode, v., suffered, 19 (18)
abuse, the figure of: see catachresis Acca Laurentia, 111 (35) n.
accited, v., summoned, 45 (6)
accompt, s., v., account, 13 (42), 22 (37), 150 (17), 229 (18), etc.
accumbred, pp. adj., encumbered, 72 (42)
Achilles, 47 (10) n., 106 (35) n., 113 (23), 181 (12)
acold, adj., 113 (10), 161 (10) across, adv., embracing (arms), 15 (28), 85 (16)
acrostic or anagram poems, examples of, 157 (2) n., 175 (34) n., 323 Actaeon, 94 (18)
adawth, v., subdueth, 151 (16) (the first example in the N.E.D.)
adieu, interj., 250 (38)
Admetus, king of Thessaly, and his (supposed) daughter, referred to, 188 (5)
Adonis ('Adone'), 95 (8)
adown, adv., down, 14 (21), 246 (11)
adrad, pp., afraid, 108 (5) Adrianus, 168 (11) n. adversair, s., adversary, 46 (36)
advertisement, s., warning, 31 (5)
Aeneas ('Ene,' 'Eneas'), 90 (17), 113 (24), 173 (13), 227 (40) n., 244
Aeneid, the: see Virgil
Aesop, fable of the pots by, 185 (39) n.
affect, affects, s., love, passion, 28 (23), 84 (42), 194 (2), 254 (39) afore, adv., before, 92 (3), 142 (22), 205 (19)
afore, prep., 45 (6)
after, prep., according to, 105 (12)
afterdays, s., 114 (15)
afterfall, s., later happening, 111 (5) afterweal, s., future good fortune, 210 (27) against, prep., before, 191 (9). See ainst Agamemnon's daughter, Iphigenia, 14 (22) agazed, pp., amazed, 4 (11)
agilted: see aguilted
agrieved ('agreued'), pp., distressed, 8 (19), 32 (22)
Agrippa, Cornelius, 71
aguilted ('agilted'), pp., made accessory to (Latin consciis), 94 (31)
aie: see ay aim, s., (by) design, 6 (9) ainst, prep., against, 60 (32)
aknow, v., recognize, 118 (38)
Alamanni, Luigi, 105, 219, 237; poem by, translated, 216 ff.
Albertus Magnus, 133
Alcilia: see C. (J.)
Aldine editions, the, of Wyatt and Surrey, 53 f., 57, 103 n. 1
Alexander (Alisander) the Great, 27 (7), 86 (28), 116 (33), 117 (38), 153 f., 165;
Zoroas and, a poem, 115 (8) n.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

Alexandreis: see Gualterus

a lives, adj., a living, 147 (20), 151 (33)

all, adv., entirely, 46 (14)

all, conj., although, 212 (28)

all and some ('summe'), s. phr., adv., the sum total, entirely, 8 (14), 85 (9), 153 (7), 236 (14)

all to bad, adv. phr., wholly bad, 197 (39)

all to break, v., break in pieces, 53 (12)

all to coy, adj. phr., 133 (8)

all to dear, adv. phr., 134 (37)

all to faint, adj. phr., 121 (11)

all to fret, pp., devoured, 195 (11)

all to late, adv. phr., 5 (28), 176 (2), 247 (16)

all to long, adv. phr., 4 (19), 25 (18), 228 (2)

all to much, adv. phr., 161 (39)

all to nigh ('nye'), adv. phr., 105 (22)

all to rathe: see rathe

alltoren, v., torn all to pieces, 131 (29)

all to shaken, v., 10 (13)

alltotorn, v., 173 (20)

all to wry, 56 (15): see wry

Allot, Robert: see England's Parnassus

allow ('alow'), v., praise, 86 (17)

almight, adj., 153 (33)

aloes, s., 45 (26)

alone, adj., having no equal, 73 (21)

alow, adv., 250 (10)

alow: see allow

Alps, the, 44 (29), 68 (5)

Alscher, Rudolf, 103 n.1

amazed ('amazde'), v. i., was amazed (Latin mirari), 119 (3) amends, s., betterment, favorable change of fortune, 26 (34) (an earlier example than any in the N.E.D.)

American Bibliopoli, The, 37 n.3

amidde, ammidde, prep., 22 (15), 31 (21)

among, adv., meanwhile, 142 (27)

among, prep., amongst, 196 (14), 197 (6)

amoved, pp., moved (Latin motus), 117 (3)

Amphinomus and Anapus, 111 (27) n.

Amyot, Jacques, 273

an, conj., and, 210 (22)

anagrams: see acrostic

Anapus: see Amphinomus

Anchises, father of Aeneas, 95 (33)

and, conj., an, if, 88 (32) n., 122 (35)

Anderson, Robert, edition by, of the miscellany, 43, 46

Anderton, H. O., 260, 313

Anglia, 49 n., 51 n.5, 96 n.4, 188, 322

a nightes, adv., in the nights, 138 (43)

Ann, i. e., Anna, the prophetess of Luke ii. 36, or St. Anna, 102 (33)

Anna, Wyatt's poem to, 211 (4) n.

Annes, 111 (13), 244

annoy ('anoy'), s., trouble, 16 (4), 68 (35), 125 (16), 179 (30), 183 (24), 199 (19), 245 (13) answering, pres. p., correspondent to, in harmony with, 254 (35) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1801)

antarctic ('Antartike'), adj., 90 (40)

Antenor ('Anthenor') of Troy, 227 (40) n.

anthologies, reprints of the miscellany poems in, 122 ff.

Antipater, 209

Antonius, Marcus, 105 (4), 118 (33) n., 119 (27), 120 (2, 16)

apaid ('apayd'), v., rewarded, 226 (25), 236 (35) apaled, v., appalled, made pale, 180 (9) (Cf. James Bell, 1565, in Ethel Seaton's Queen Elizabeth and a Swedish Princess, 1926, p. 65: "Her colour that was a Litle before altogether apalled wanne and deade.")

apease: see appease

Apelles, Greek painter, 99 (8)

Apollo, 73 (17), 86 (29), 93 (18), 94 (11), 101 (24), 116 (41), 188 (4). See Cynthia, Phoebus appair ('appayre'), v., deteriorate, 113 (20), 137 (3) appearance, s., appearance, 33 (13)

appease ('apease'), v., 79 (23), 84 (32), 130 (6), 149 (25), 210 (4)

apply ('applie'), v., directed, instructed, 113 (16); make suit of love to, 96 (28); work assiduously for, 86 (22), 145 (31)

araced, pp., removed, 45 (30)

aray: see array

Arbaces ('Arbactus'), 157

Arber, Edward, 3, 14 n.1, 19, 62 f., 71 n.2, 77 n.2, 84 n.4, 92, 120 notes, 130, 146, 168, 247, 260 f., 308 f., 328; edition by, of the miscellany, 59 ff.; editor of the miscellany, on the, 86; relationship of B and C, on the, 12 f.; uncertain authors, on the, 79 f., 277, 296; Wyatt-Surrey anthology by, the, 123

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Arbor of Amorous Devices, The* (by Breton [q.v.] and others), 109; borrowings of, from the miscellany, 256 f., 264 f.
- Archaeologia*, 220
- Archilaus, Duke, and Hero, 113
- arctic ('Artike'), adj., 90 (40)
- areard, pp., erected, 113 (18)
- Aretino, Pietro, 76, 95
- Arge, i. e., Argos, or Greece, 111 (30)
- Ariosto, 132, 136, 172, 175 f.
- ark, s., chest, 27 (9)
- Armin, Robert, 221, 227
- armonie, s., harmony, 221 (22)
- arow, adv., in order, 192 (19)
- array ('aray'), s., military order, 152 (32), 164 (9)
- art, s., business, craft, 46 (40)
- Art of English Poesie, The* (attributed to Puttenham), 120, 127; pronouncements of, on the miscellany, 137, 140, 142, 144, 146, 154, 164, 167, 169, 175, 179, 184 f., 188, 193, 198 f., 255, 261, 267, 272, 283, 287, 290, 312, 314, 321
- Artike: see arctic
- Arundel, Earl of: see Fitzalan
- Arundel, Elizabeth, 330
- Arundel (Arundell), Mistress, poem on, 257 (24), 329
- as, conj. adv., when, 16 (16)
- as, conj., as if, 16 (19), 125 (4), 166 (19)
- a scance: see askance
- Ascham, Roger, 38 n.3, 120, 245, 292
- Asia ('Asie'), 27 (8)
- askance ('a scance'), adv., 83 (42)
- Aske, James, 45
- aslake, v., suppress, drive away, 244 (24)
- aspects, s., beneficent influence (of planets), 226 (34)
- assemble, s., assembly, 192 (19)
- assembly, s., 100 (4) n.
- assinde (assigned), pp., 70 (12), 77 (34), 78 (4), 79 (3)
- assuage ('asswage'), v., pass away, 30 (9)
- Assyrian, 29 (5), 157
- astart, v., escape, 44 (2)
- astate, s., estate, 80 (30), 171 (25), 244 (15)
- astoned, pp., astonished, 254 (33)
- astronomy, Wyatt and, 222
- at, prep., from, by the example of, 89 (12)
- atcheue (achieve), v., 181 (24)
- Athenaeum, The*, 57 n., 58 notes, 133
- Atlas, 90 (19) n.
- Atride, i. e., Agamemnon, 47 (8)
- attaint, v., harm, impair, 16 (21), 98 (21)
- Atticus, Titus Pomponius, 107 (4) n.
- atween, prep., between, 104 (34)
- atwixt, prep., between, 19 (6)
- auctoritie, s., authority, 69 (12)
- Audley, Thomas, Baron Audley, 280.
See Touchet
- Audley ('Awdeleye'), Thomas, Captain, elegy on, 159 (33) n. See Awdley
- ought, v., owed, 162 (18)
- augur, s., seer, 119 (25)
- August: see Caesar
- Ault, Norman, 123
- Ausonius, Decimus Magnus, 76, 209, 237; poem by, translated, 97 (4) n.
- avail, s., safety, benefit, 15 (20), 103 (6) (The N.E.D. explains 15 (20) as avale, disembarkation, but is clearly wrong. Surrey's "swete port of his auail" is a translation of Petrarch's Rime, 14, line 7, "al dolce porto de la lor salute.")
- availed, pp., slackened, 13 (26)
- avale ('auayl'), v., flow down, 27 (35)
- avance, avaunce, v., advance, 22 (12), 28 (28), 50 (14), 89 (36), 129 (19), 150 (34), 176 (36)
- avaunt, interj., 94 (17)
- avaunt, s., v., boast, 58 (11), 60 (20)
- Avern (Hades), 117 (15)
- avising ('auisynge'), pres. p., gazing at (Italian mirando), 38 (32)
- avow ('auowe') v., declare, swear, 191 (26), 226 (22), 231 (17)
- Awdeley, John, printer, 151, 283
- Awdley (Audley), Damascene, poems to, 100 (23) n., 101 (17) n., 103 (9) n. See Audley
- awe, under, prep. phr., 8 (6), 85 (24)
- awry, adv., obliquely, 72 (10)
- axith, v., asketh, 186 (5)
- ay ('aie'), adv., 26 (23, 36), 44 (32), 65 (13), 66 (28), 244 (14), etc.
- ayelife, s., life forever, 93 (30) (not in the N.E.D.)
- ayen (again), adv., 48 (20); (spoke) in reply, 117 (4)
- B., G., Ludus Scacchiae, 147
- B., M., Mistress, poem on, 251 (29) n.
- B., S. F., 310

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- B., S.T., 310
 Bacchus, 86 (3), 156 (20). See Lyaeus bace: see bass
 bachelor, s., 100 (22)
 Bacon, Francis, Baron Verulam, Viscount
 St. Albans, 237, 273
 badder, adj., 201 (32)
 Baif, J. A. de, 237, 296
 bain ('bayne'), v., bathe, bedew, 5 (16) bait, s., temptation, 98 (6) bait, v., attract, 13 (12)
 balades, s., songs, 243 (33)
 balance, s., scales, 6 (9) Baldwin, William, prints one of Surrey's poems, 150
 bale, s., destruction, 4 (37); distress, 254 (20)
 Bale, John, Bishop, 84, 87
 ballads, broadside, in the miscellany, 107, 109 f., 142, 144, 259, 262, 264 ff., 270, 276, 283, 285, 305, 313, 324; imitating its poems, 142 f. See Collection, moralizizations
 Ballard, George, 262
 Balthorp, Nicholas, 142
 ban ('banne'), v., curse, 89 (28) n., 182 (35)
 band, s., bond, chain, 57 (36), 157 (36), 253 (8, 25); bond, vow, 17 (30), 121 (28);
 power, 153 (38), 174 (16); restraint, 178 (26, 30)
 bane, s., death, 14 (27), 105 (9), 219 (13)
 Bang, Willy, 6 n., 84 n.5
 Bannatyne Club, 266
 banquets ('bankets'), s., 81 (11)
 Bantock, Granville, 260, 313
 Bapst, Edmond, 74, 83, 159, 312 barbed, pp., armed with a barb, 125 (35)
 Barckley, Richard, Sir, 157; on Surrey's authorship of a miscellany poem, 68, 299
 Barclay, Alexander, 181
 bare feet, seek on thy, 89 (7) n.
 bare thee but in hand: see bear bark and rind, 70 (37), 154 (21) n.
 Barnes, Barnabe, 298
 Bartlett, Henrietta C., 35
 bash, v., be abashed, 191 (36), 248 (15) Baskervill, C. R., 78 n., 87 n.5 bass ('bace'), s., 233 (32) bate, s., debate, strife, 105 (15)
 bate, v., abate, decrease, 72 (33), 115 (21)
 Batman, Stephen, 165, 266
 batrid (battered), pp., 151 (6)
 battery ('batrye'), s., 189 (17)
 bavin-blaze ('bauen blase'), s. phr., brushwood fire, 237 (10) n.
 Baxter, Nathaniel, 154 bay tree, 251 (30 ff.)
 bayne: see bain
 Bays, Mistress, poem on, 251 (29) n.
 be ('bee'), pp., been, 16 (33), 112 (10), 133 (28), 190 (6), 219 (31). See been be, v., are, 26 (5), 102 (3), 107 (20 f.), 165 (23)
 beak: see beek beams, s., glances, 23 (17), 38 (32), 73 (19), 254 (34)
 bear in hand, v. phr., deceive, 21 (33); pre- tend, profess, 17 (29), 227 (5) bearing ('bering'), pres. p. adj., burden- carrying, 209 (20) bearing in hand, s. phr., the deceptions (of one's lover), 69 (31)
 beat, v., sail, 26 (23)
 Beatrice and Dante (q.v.), 72
 Beaumont, John, Sir, 237
 bebled, v., bedewed with blood, 115 (21), 247 (20)
 beck, s., gesture of command, 135 (38);
 nod, 8 (10), 40 (6), 207 (26); sea, 104 (24)
 becom (become), v., 95 (32) bed, a lover to his, a poem, 44 (4) beek ('beak'), v., warm, bask, 105 (28) been ('ben,' 'bene'), v., are, 43 (3, 18), 91
 (6 f.), 135 (3), 151 (6, 21), 203 (17), 232
 (22), 234 (17). See be beetle-bee ('betell bee'), s., 256 (13)
 begilde, inf., beguile, 256 (28) begins ('begynns'), s., beginnings, 116 (14)
 (the only example in the N.E.D. is dated 1596)
 begone, pp., begun, 134 (5)
 begoon, v., began, 150 (14), 193 (4) beguile ('begyle'), v., make pass away, 26 (17), 83 (7)
 behest, s., promise, 58 (39), 143 (9), 173 (5) behove, s., behoof, 165 (20) behove, v., 185 (32)
 beknow, v., 109 (4)
 belike ('bylike'), adv., 238 (11, 29)
 Bell, Robert, edition by, of Wyatt and Surrey, 43 n.2, 99, described, 55 f.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Bellona, goddess, 115 (29)
ben: see been bend, v., pass away, 72 (6)
bended, bent, pp. adj., crescent (moon), 81 (32), 91 (41)
bene: see been Bensley, T., 50 f.
bent, s., curve, 204 (3). See bended
berain ('berayne'), v., wet (with tears), 13 (38) Berdan, J. M., 86 n.2, 87 n.4, 152, 176, 328 bereft, v., deprived of (by death), 243 (25); killed, 109 (28), 125 (31); pulled, 168 (30), 171 (16); snatched away (by death), 194 (34)
berent, v., rend, tear, 157 (34)
Bergk, Theodorus, 230 bering: see bearing berive (bereave), v., 199 (14)
berne ('beurn'), s., warrior, 116 (30) beset, v., set with (pearls), 100 (34); surrounded with, 249 (40) beside ('byside'), adv., in addition to, 239 (7) besprent, pp., sprinkled, suffused, 44 (13, 20), 133 (33), 164 (11) bestrow, v., bestrew, 234 (31) n.
bet (beat), v., 28 (8), 207 (36)
betell bee: see beetle-bee Betham, Peter, 156
betide ('betyd'), v., happened to 203 (4) betimes, adv., 57 (25)
beurn: see berne
bewedded, pp., 107 (29)
bewrapt, pp., 110 (23)
bewray, v., reveal, 5 (14), 72 (41), 151 (37), 159 (2), 230 (19), 247 (27)
Beza (Bèze), Theodore de, 88; poems by, translated by Grimald, 93 (21) n., 94 (34) n., 95 (38) n., 96 (22) n., 103 (9) n., 104 (7) n., 104 (17) n., 108 (18) n., 115 (2) n., 118 (9) n., 120 (17) n.
Bible, uses of the, in the miscellany, 88 (24) n., 156, 159, 230, 259, 267, 281, 283, 286, 296, 300, 323 ff., 330. See Psalms Bibliographica, 5n.
Bibliographical Society, England, Transactions, 5n., 6 n. See Library biden, v., remain (constant), 225 (6); 'bydeth,' lives, 51 (22)
bind, wood doth, v. phr., Italian legni lega, 52 (35)
Birch, Thomas, 46
Biton: see Cleobis
Blackwood, G., poem addressed to, 95 (38) n.; supposed author of a miscellany poem, 96 (22) n., 77 blank verse, the effect of, 108; Grimald's, 79, 104, rhymes in, 115 (12) n.; Surrey's, date of its publication, 70, 79 n.2
blase, blaser: see blaze(r) blast, s., a blasted (withered) condition, 173 (4); musical sound, 97 (23); slander, 145 (13); storm, 190 (17)
blast, v., sound (as on a trumpet), 207 (2) blaze ('blase') ill, v. phr., spread scandal abroad, 238 (37) blazer ('blaser'), s., one who proclaims lies, 191 (36) blear one's eye, v. phr., hoodwink, 126 (19), 255 (11) blee, s., looks (Latin forma), 96 (31)
bleew: see blue blend, pp., blinded, 193 (39) blent, pp., blended, 100 (31), 102 (26); blinded, 242 (43) blin ('blyn'), v., cease, 173 (24) blind maze, s. phr., a labyrinth, 68 (25)
Bliss, Philip, 36, 50, 72 n.1
blist, pp., blessed, 179 (31), 201 (20)
blome (bloom), v., 254 (24)
blontly: see bluntly Blount, Elizabeth, 142
blue ('bleew'), adj., s., livid ("black and blue"), 94 (9); a sign of true love, 18 (14) n.
Blundeston, L., 77 n. 2 bluntly ('blontly'), adv., stupidly, 130 (28) (the first example in the N.E.D.), 255 (36). (Cf. Churchyard's Charge, 1580 [Collier's reprint, p. 47]: "Who bluntly bites a baite, and swallows up a hooke.")
blyn: see blin board ('boord'), s., table, 120 (16)
Boas, F. S., 227
Boccaccio, 180, 239, 259
bode, v., suffered, 183 (24)
Bodleian library, Oxford, its copies of the miscellany, 8, 27 f., 31 f., 35 f., 38
boe (bow), s., 253 (17)
Boethius, 76, 220, 296; Wyatt's borrowings from, 81 (27 f.) n., 212 (11) n.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Bohn, H. G., 13, 38 n.2, 58, 152
 Boiardo, M. M., 136
 boile, pp. adj., boiled, 217 (10)
 boisteous ('boysteous', 'boystous'), adj.
boisterous, 14 (20), 68 (14), 194 (9)
 bolded, pp., emboldened, 34 (16)
 Boleyn, Anne, Queen, 83; and Surrey, 69;
 and Wyatt, 75 f., 183, 314. See Brunet Boleyn, George, Viscount Rochford, supposed contributor to the miscellany,
 82 f., 85, 87, 91, 93, 189
 bolstering ('bolstrynge'), verb. n., upholding, 196 (20)
 bolstred (bolstered), pp. adj., puffed up (by flattery), 200 (2) n.
 Bolton, Edmund, 120 f.
 Bond, R. W., 181
 bondes (bounds), s., 175 (3) Bonner, Edmund, Bishop, 154 boon, s., entreaty, 111 (24) boones (bones), s., 32 (29)
 boord: see board, bourd boot ('bote'), s., advantage, remedy, 40 (32), 126 (28), 168 (33)
 boots it, impers. v., 95 (26); booteth, 233 (8)
 bord: see bourd
 Boreas ('Borias'), 16 (14), 206 (11) n.
 bote: see boot
 boule: see bowl
 Boulogne, France, Captain Audley and,
 280; Surrey as governor of, 69, 247.
See Bullayn
 bourd ('bord,' 'boord'), s., jest, 40 (4), 49 (39), 60 (25)
 bout ('bowt'), s., circuit, orbit, 91 (22)
 (the first example in the N.E.D.) bowes, s., boughs, 252 (2)
 Bowes, Anne and Elizabeth, 28 bowl ('boule'), s., ball, bullet, 53 (6) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1623) bowt: see bout
 boxomnesse: see buxomness boysteous, boystous: see boisteous
 Bradburne, Elisabeth, 277
 Bradner, Leicester, 156, 278, 293, 330 brags, s., 19 (29)
 braid, at a, prep. phr., on a sudden, 141 (39)
 brake, s., curb (of a bridle), 178 (24);
thicket, 4 (32)
 brake, v., was broken, 27 (29) brand, s., torch (of love), 193 (39). See bronde
 Brandon, Henry, second Duke of Suffolk, 245
 Brant, Sebastian, 181
 brasten, v., burst, 240 (5) brats, s., 96 (13), 105 (21)
 braught (brought), v., 114 (7) brave, adj., splendid, costly, 115 (36)
 breadeth (breedeth), v., 258 (8) break ('breke') thy mind, v. phr., express your thoughts, 191 (24)
 breers: see briers bren, v., burn, 55 (37), 56 (5)
 brend, pp., burned, 140 (10)
 brent, v., burned, 52 (18), 247 (3)
 Breton, Nicholas, 45, 147, 156, 227, 329.
See Arbor, Brittons
 Brian: see Bryan bride, s., burd, woman, 188 (8) Bridgewater, Earl of: see Egerton briers ('breers'), s., 52 (25), 130 (28) bright, adj., beautiful, 9 (28), 13 (5), 101 (27)
 brine, boiled, s. phr., tears (of envy), 205
 (3) n.
 bring me in, to, inf. phr., deceive, 255 (8)
 bringer-in, s., provider, 88 (6)
 Briseis ('Brises') and Achilles, 181 (12)
 Britain ('Britan'), 9 (25), 28 (10), 30 (36),
 100 (25); adj., Briton, 114 (11)
 Britaynes, Brittons, i. e., Englishmen's, 136 (6), 254 (24)
British Bibliographer, The, 112 n.4
 British Museum, its copies of the miscellany, 10, 21, 31, 33, of reprints of, 38, 40 ff., 44 ff., 47 ff.
 brittle, adj., dangerous, 24 (15); evanescent, 9 (35)
Brittons Bowre of Delights (by Breton [q. v.] and others), 109; borrowings in, from the miscellany, 157 f.
 Britwell library: see Christie-Miller
 brokes (brooks), s., 153 (16)
 Brome, Robert, 12
 bronde, s., brand (q. v.), torch, 186 (21) brood, s., offspring, 105 (33), 109 (16)
 Brooke, Arthur, 5
 Brooke, Christopher, 154
 Brooke, Elizabeth, Lady Wyatt, 75
 Brooke, Thomas, Baron Cobham, 75

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Brown, J., printer, 39
 Browne, Anthony, Sir, 75
 Browns hold (?Leighton-Bromswold, Huntingdonshire), 112 (23), 78
 Bruce, John, 152
 Brunet, 35 (29, 31) n. See Boleyn (Anne) brute, adj., brutish, 151 (36)
 brute, s., fame, reputation, 192 (15), 195 (30), 238 (23, 26 n., 28, 37), 257 (2); uproar, 193 (3) Brutes, i. e., Brutus and his Britons, 123 (15)
 brutish, adj., 238 (26) n.
 Brutus, legendary founder of Britain, 81 (31) n.
 Brutus, Marcus Junius, 119 (16), 236
 Bryan ('Brian'), Francis, Sir, alleged contributions of, to the miscellany, 67, 82, 85, 87, 93, 212, 220, 310; Collier on, 220; manuscript poem by, a, 82 n.; poems addressed to, by Wyatt, 80 (10) n., 88 (2) n.; probable reference to, in a miscellany poem, 270
 Brydges, Egerton, Sir, 36, 50
 Bryskett, Lodowick, 278
 Buchanan, George, 237
 Buckingham, Duke of: see Stafford, Villiers
 Budé, Guillaume, 241 f.
 Bull, the, 112 (2), 244
 Bullayn, base, i. e., Lower (Old Town) Boulogne, France, 31 (21), 159. See Boulogne
 Bullen, A. H., 165, 190, 325
Bulletin of the Board of Celtic Studies, The, 151
 Bullock, W. L., 103 n. 1
 Burke, John B., Sir, 242
Bush, Master, The Travels of, 271
 Bush, J. N. D., 317 busy ('bysye'), adj., 98 (13), 212 (33) n.
 but, conj., unless, 96 (5), 98 (11)
 buxomness ('boxomnesse'), s., submissiveness, 186 (4) buy ('bye'), v., 219 (12), 255 (34)
 bydeath: see biden bylike: see belike
 bypast, adv., bygone, 97 (10)
 Byrne, Muriel St. Clare, 84
 Byrom, H. J., 5 n., 50 ff., 97 n.2
 byside: see beside bysye: see busy
 C., G. E.: see Cokayne
 C., I: see Canand
 C., J., Alcilia, 179, 195, 268
 Caesar ('Cesar,' 'Ceasar'), Augustus, 104 (31) n.; Julius ('Julie'), 27 (26) n., 36 (5), 86 (18 ff.), 104 (29) n., 164 f.; Emperor Charles V, 114 (11 n., 13, 27); Titus, 114 (34) n.
 Caieta, 111 (33) n., 254
 Calais, France, 52 (21), 219
 calcars: see calkers
 Calends, s., the first day of January, 103 (13) calf, as cheese to a, 89 (9) n.
 calkers ('calcars'), s., astrologers, 91 (37)
 calling, s., admonition, 31 (4)
 Calliope, 97 (7)
 Callisto and Jove, 94 (14)
 Cambers, i. e., Cambria's (Wales's), 9 (22)
Cambridge History of English Literature, 49 n., 77 n.1, 79 n.3, 86 n.2, 93 n.
 Cambridge University, connection of the miscellany poets with, 85; its lost copy of G, 31 n.2
 Camden Society, 152, 305
 Camenae ('Camenes'), 118 (3) n.
 Campbell, Thomas, and Sanford, 53 can, v., know, 6 (26), 189 (24)
 Canand, J. (I. C.), contributor to the miscellany, 80, 85, 262, 264 cant, s., portion, share, 89 (10) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
 Capell, Edward, his copy of C, 12 ff., of D, 23, of H, 33
 Capra, the Goat (zodiacal), 111 (37) car, s., chariot, 115 (27); wagon, 108 (27) carcass, s., corpse, 210 (36)
 Carducci, Giosuè, 315
 carefull, adj., sorrowful, 4 (17), 71 (3), 131 (33), 249 (6, 8), 251 (33)
 Caribdis: see Charybdis Carie, 93 (34), 94 (33), 224. See Day cark, s., trouble, 105 (16), 178 (17)
 carlish, adj., churlish, mean, 244 (14)
 carp, v., speak, 101 (8), 192 (39)
 Carrer, Luigi, 129
 carrion ('caryon'), s., corpse, 246 (13)
 Carthage, 81 (18), 173 (14), 191 (6). See Dido caryon: see carrion case, s., skin, 73 (12) n. (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1569)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- case, in, prep. phr., if, 94 (10), 95 (3), 98 (16, 20), 99 (4, 7), 103 (22), 119 (17), etc.
- Cassandra of Troy, referred to, 228 (11 ff.)
- Cassell's Library Edition of Wyatt and Surrey, 56
- Cassius Longinus, Gaius, 119 (16), 236
- cast, s., a throw (of dice), 150 (13)
- cast, v., attempt, 150 (19); create, 166 (34); destine, 153 (33); ponder, 219 (17), 234 (11)
- Castor and Pollux, referred to, 111 (29) n.
- casual, adj., uncertain, 106 (12)
- catachresis, the figure of abuse, example of, 272
- catch a cause, v. phr., find a reason, 4 (6)
- cater, s., caterer, 83 (16)
- caterpillar, s., 167 (33, 38)
- Catherine (Howard), queen of England, 69, 71, 73 f., 138
- Catherine (Parr), queen of England ("Lady Katherine Seymour"), 233, 302
- Catholicism, Roman, slurs against, deleted from the miscellany, 97
- Cato, Dionysius, 105, 324
- Cato, Marcus Porcius, the Censor, 105 (4), 123 (18), 229, 239; poem on, 98 (8) n.
- Cato, Marcus Porcius, Uticensis, 86 (18 ff.), 218
- Catullus, 232
- caul, s., hair-net, 192 (24)
- cause, prep., because, 56 (6)
- causels, adv., causeless, 170 (30)
- Caxton, William, 93
- Cesar: see Caesar
- cease, v., seize, 180 (7)
- ceast, pp., previously interrupted, 244 (28) n.
- censorship, traces of, in the miscellany, 65, 97, 219, 221, 308
- Censura Literaria*, 123 n.6, 152, 156
- Century Readings . . . in English Literature*, 124
- Cephalus and Procris, poem on, 203 (2) n.
- Ceres' imp, i. e., the daughter of Ceres (Proserpine), 95 (14) n.
- certes ('certesse'), adv., certainly, 12 (23), 93 (27), 96 (34), 114 (24)
- Cesar: see Caesar
- cest, v., ceased, 250 (2)
- cestos (or cestus), s., the girdle of Venus, 100 (31)
- Ch., N., W.: see Chambers
- Chalmers, Alexander, 36, 53, 211; edition of the miscellany poets by, 47; on Geraldine, 73
- Chaloner, Thomas, Sir, the elder, 247
- Chambers, Nicholas (N. Ch.), elegy on, 110 (38) n.
- Chambers, W. (W. Ch.), elegy on, 109 (22) n.
- chameleon, s., 168 (35) n.
- chance, s., bad fortune in love, 3 (38), 79 (3)
- chanson à personnage*, 144
- Chapin, Elsa, 82, 270
- Chapman, George, 45
- Chappell, William, 285, 305
- chaps, s., jaws, 30 (6)
- chare, s., chariot, 10 (19)
- charge, s., burden, 189 (33); duty, 17 (12) n., 106 (4); those over whom one has oversight, 112 (39); weight, 11 (6), 29 (12); take no charge, pay no heed to, 127 (34)
- charged, v., loaded, 111 (30) n., 186 (24)
- Charis, 100 (3) n.
- Charles V, Emperor, 114 (11) n., 76, 212, 241
- charret (chariot), s., 119 (12)
- Charybdis ('Caribdis'), 230 (35)
- chase, v., drive away (Italian scacciare), 67 (34)
- chaste, s., chastity, 190 (32) n. (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1719)
- chastisement, s., 31 (3) n.
- Chaucer, 71, 135, 191, 195, 212, 214, 218, 220, 316; named in the miscellany, 28 (16), 86 (30 f.); poem by, in the miscellany, 185 (26) n., 80; quoted, 129, 131, 133, 142, 145 ff., 154, 163, 191, 214, 220, 298, 314, 317; supposed influence of the printed works of, on Wyatt's language, 62; terza rima by, 102 n.5
- chaw, v., 88 (23)
- cheap ('chepe'), s., bargain, 80 (23), 255 (34)
- cheare: see cheer
- check, s., checkmate, rebuff, 20 (21), 21 (8), 135 (39)
- check, v., stoop falsely as a hawk, 229 (30)
- check, v., give check to (in chess), 21 (10)
- checkmate, s., 233 (21)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- cheer ('cheare,' 'chere'), s., countenance, expression of the face, 3 (38), 6 (20), 13 (15), 95 (11), 120 (4), 243 (11), etc.; food and drink, 87 (34), 105 (4); jollity, 107 (38)
- cheered ('chered'), pp., 110 (37)
- cheezil: see chisel
- Cheke, John, Sir, contributor to the miscellany, 80, 85, 323 f.; on Denny, 292
- chepe: see cheap
- chere: see cheer
- chess, poem on, 147
- Chester, Robert, 287 f.
- Chew, Beverly, his copy of G, 31 n.1, of H, 33 n.
- chews, s., jaws, 30 (5) (not in the N. E. D., but cf. chavel)
- chiasmus, examples, of, 78 (13-14) n.
- Child, H. H., 77 n. 1, 79 n.3, 86 n.2, 93 n.
- chisel ('cheezil'), s., 99 (13)
- choose ('chuse'), s., choosing, selection, 233 (20)
- chop and change, v., change, 29 (35); chopt a change, made an exchange with, 241 (11)
- chorlish: see churlish
- chose (choose), v., 7 (36), 188 (30), 207 (14), 213 (9), 224 (22)
- Chreseid: see Cressida
- Christ, 28 (36), 147 (29), 207 (8), 220 (5)
- Christendom, 87 (40)
- Christie-Miller, S. R. (Britwell library), his copy of E, 27, of G, 31
- Churchyard, Thomas, alleged share of, in the miscellany, 83 f., 86, 278, 283, 301; curious spelling of, the, 84; editorship of the miscellany by, theory of the, 89; praise by, of Surrey, 111; quoted, 146, 201, 283, 318; Wilford and, 241
- churlish ('chorlish'), adj., 24 (23)
- chuse: see choose
- Cicero, Marcus Tullius, Grimald's translation from, 86; mentioned or quoted, 107 (4) n., 187, 236 f., 239; poem indebted to, 327; poems on, 118 (9) n., 120 (17) n.
- Ciminelli (or Cimino), Serafino dei, Aquilano, 76, 101, 105, 185; poems indebted to, 143 f., 171 ff., 184 f., 191, 193, 200, 315
- Ciprus: see Cypria
- Circe's cup, drunkenness, 193 (39)
- civil swoord, reskued from, v. phr., rescued from civil war, 118 (14)
- clack, s., a mill-hopper alarm-bell, 187 (25, 32)
- Clarke, C. C., edition by, of Wyatt and Surrey, 56
- clattering, adj., chattering, 46 (41)
- claw by the back, v. phr., flatter, fawn upon, 41 (16)
- Clawson, J. L., his copy of G, 31
- clean ('clene'), adv., completely, 17 (29)
- clearly ('clerely'), adv., completely, 159 (31)
- Cleobis and Biton, 111 (30) n.
- Cleobulus's riddle, poem on, 98 (30) n.
- cleped, v., called, 93 (32) n.
- Clere, Thomas, Sir, 143; Surrey's epitaph on, 40
- clergions, s., young song-birds, 221 (5) (the only example in the N. E. D.)
- clerk, s., scholar, 116 (2)
- Clerk, John, and Surrey, 68
- Clifford, Arthur, Tixall Poetry, 181
- climbing figure, the, example of, 127 (2) n.
- Clinton, Edward, first Earl of Lincoln, 75
- Clio, 97 (9)
- clives, s., cliffs, 26 (32), 230 (35)
- close, v., enclose, express, 193 (27)
- Clotho, the Fate, 112 (35)
- cloudy, adj., frowning, 34 (14)
- clout (cloth), pale as a, adj. phr., 222 (36) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- coal, canal, strange properties of, 235 (29) n.
- coardes: see cords
- coarse: see corse
- coast ('cost'), s., 157 (14)
- Cobham, Baron: see Brooke (Thomas)
- cock and pie, by, exclam., 200 (29) n., 239 (23)
- cockatrice, s., 132 (6)
- cockboat, s., 169 (16)
- Cokayne, G. E. (G. E. C.), 302
- Coleridge, E. H., 210
- Coleridge, S. T., 210
- Collatine ('Collatiue') and Lucrece, 191 (4) n.
- Collection of Seventy-nine Black-letter Ballads, A* (printed by Joseph Lilly), 127, 143, 237, 262, 264
- Collier, J. P., 35 n.5, 44 n.2, 83 n.1, 110 n.3, 111 n., 146, 152, 201, 241, 257,

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- 283, 318, 324; alleged discovery by, of A, 58; on Bryan, 220; on Churchyard as editor of the miscellany, 89; reprint by, of Seven English Poetical Miscellanies, discussed, 57 ff.
- Collmann, H. L., 283
- colours, s., falsehood, 86 (39)
- columbine, s., 133 (14)
- comen ('commen'), pp., come, 184 (21), 185 (16). See cumne
- commodious, adj., advantageous, 168 (21)
- common weal, s., the state or nation, 115 (5)
- common wealth, s., general good, 86 (22); nation, 227 (20)
- compass, s., moderation, correct course of life, 26 (22)
- compass, v., encompass, 146 (34), 189 (17)
- compted, pp., accounted, 228 (12) n.
- conceit, s., opinion, 128 (15); pretty or witty expression, 100 (32), 109 (38)
- conceits in the miscellany poets, 101
- concupiscence, 27 (17)
- conduit of the eyes, s. phr., the tear-ducts, 205 (4)
- connyng: see cunning
- Constable and Company, re-issue by, of Arber's reprint of the miscellany, 60 f.
- constance, s., constancy, 24 (41)
- conster, v., construe, explain, 211 (31)
- Consul Marcus, i. e., Cicero (q. v.), 118 (17)
- consume, v., dry up, 23 (12); v. i., burn away, 131 (17), 235 (34); expire, end, 124 (38)
- consumingly, adv., rapidly destroyed by fire, 58 (3) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- Conti, Giusto de', 181
- continuance, s., 26 (11) n.
- contrairs, s., contraries, 248 (32)
- contrarious, adj., 37 (32-33)
- contributors, the, to the miscellany, discussed, 65 ff.; their avoidance of publication, 88, 93
- convert, v. i., 76 (34)
- cony, s., 84 (36), 163 (17)
- Cooke, Robert, Sir, and Lady Theophila, 231
- coom (come), v., 94 (26, 28), 95 (8, 36), 116 (33, 40), 119 (22, 27)
- cooning: see cunning
- Cooper, Elizabeth, on Geraldine, 72 f.; reprints from the miscellany by, 122
- Copernicus and Wyatt, 222
- Copinger, W. A., 242
- cords ('coardes'), s., rigging of a ship, 38 (26)
- Corin and Phyllida, poem on, 132 (33)
- Coriolanus, Gaius Marcius, 111 (23) n.
- cornet, s., head-dress, 11 (34) (the first example in the N. E. D.), 12 (10)
- corps, corpse, s., dead body; 108 (31), 113 (10), 115 (19), 136 (3), 160 (18), 178 (18), 249 (14), etc.; living body, 28 (31), 95 (2), 99 (35), 108 (7), 146 (34), 162 (24), 210 (34), 237 (35), 249 (8), etc.
- corse ('coarse'), s., body, 219 (15); corpse, 18 (10), 27 (34), 191 (6)
- Coryate, Thomas, 154
- cost: see coast
- cosyn: see cousin
- Cotgrave, Randle, 133
- Cotton, Charles, 152
- coucht, pp., couched, concealed, 126 (9)
- cough, v., 89 (19) n.
- could, v., knew, 121 (35)
- countenance ('countinaunce'), s., 94 (23)
- counterfeit action, the: see pragmatographia
- countervail, v., equal, 106 (11)
- countinaunce: see countenance
- county, s., 194 (15) n.
- couple-clause, the: see polysyndeton
- coursing, pres. p. adj., swiftly moving, 114 (12)
- Court of Venus, The*, 186
- Court of Vertue, The*: see Hall (John)
- courteous ('curteis,' 'curties'), adj., 73 (22), 87 (6)
- Courthope, W. J., 74, 79 n.1, 141, 210
- courtier, the life of a, poems on, 81 (8), 85 (19), 88 (2)
- cousin ('cosyn'), s., 89 (33)
- couth ('kouth'), pp., known, 101 (19)
- covered, adj., cloudy, 99 (32)
- coverts, s., 107 (31)
- covet, v., wish, 28 (36)
- covitise, s., covetousness, 212 (32) n.
- cowche, s., 165 (27) n.
- Cowley, Abraham, 316; Grimald compared to, 79 n.1
- cowslips, s., 133 (14)
- coyed, pp. adj., coy, 208 (28)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- crab, s., crab-apple, 93 (7), 157 (12)
 cracks, s., (roaring) sounds, 122 (14) craft, s., skill, 193 (31, 35) craft, v., act craftily, 182 (18)
 craftily, adv., skilfully, 150 (19)
 Craig, Alexander, 286
 Cranmer, Thomas, Archbishop, 78, 87
 Crates, 105 (13), 237
 Crawford, Charles, on Nugae Antiquae, 92 n.1. See England's Parnassus
 Create: see Crete
 Cressida ('Chreseid') and Troilus, 18 (12), 230 (30); poem on, 183 (18) n.
 Cresus: see Croesus
 Crete ('Create'), 206 (32), 311
 crisped, pp. adj., curled, 66 (22), 73 (17), 90 (20) n.
 crock, s., earthen vessel, 185 (39) n.
 crooked (shore), adj., dangerous (Latin litus iniquom), 150 (23)
 crocodile, s., 205 (7)
 Croesus ('Cresus'), Lydian king, 157 (36)
 Cromwell, Thomas, Earl of Essex, 76, 193, 202, 208 crooked ('croked'), adj., crooked, 166 (29) crooked ('croked'), s., crooked thing, 185 (35) crop, s., head or top of a tree, 40 (34)
 Crowe, E. E., 241
 cruelty, s., 3 (9)
 Crynes, Nathaniel, his copy of E, 28
 cumne (come), v., 18 (40). See comen cunning ('connyng,' 'cooning'), adj., learned, 116 (2); s., art, craft, 125 (30, 34)
 Cupid, 5 (5, 33), 8 (17), 9 (13), 23 (20), 51 (16), 121 (21), 128 (18, 21), 163 (37) n., 170 (35), 186 (21), 193 (39), 218 (14), 231 (21), 241 (4), 248 (4), 253 (17 ff.), 255 (3), 256 (8); referred to, 8 (8), 51 (3), 62 (34 ff.), 77 (29 ff.), 95 (19), 139 (16), 155 (35) n., 240 (30); Cupid's arrows, 6 (6-7) n., 253 (22) n.; Cupid's brand, 193 (39); Cupid's hue, 5 (31); Cupid's kind, lovers, 180 (12); Cupid's thralls, 192 (25) cure, s., care, heed, 51 (21), 78 (14), 98 (13), 133 (18), 157 (12)
 cureless, adj., 30 (32)
 curiousness, s., Fastidiousness, 192 (39)
 Curll, Edmund, printer, 36, 40; partial reprint of F by, 37 ff.
 Curll, Henry, partial reprint of F by, 39, 72, described, 42 f.
 currant, adj., ecourant, running, 208 (31) n.
 curteis, curties: see courteous
 Curtius Rufus, Quintus, 252
 Cydippe, priestess, referred to, 111 (30) n.
 Cyllene, Mercury (q. v.), 101 (23)
 Cynthie, Apollo (q. v.), 120 (19) n.
 Cypria, Cyprus ('Ciprus'), the birth-place of Venus, 9 (3); the two springs of, 136
 Cyprian, Cypris, Venus, 100 (3) n., 101 (27)
 D. N. B. See Dictionary
 Daedalus, 104 (23) n.
 dam ('dambe'), s., mother, 112 (4), 221 (17)
 Damascene, 103 (12). See Awdley dame, s., lady, 101 (32), 192 (26); mother, 9 (24) n.; sweetheart, 13 (11)
 damn ('dampne'), v., condemn, 240 (25); pronounce guilty, 240 (19)
 Damon and Pythias, 106 (34)
 dan, s., sir, master (Latin dominus), 27 (9) dangerous, adj., disdainful, hard to please, 224 (31)
 Daniel, Samuel, 198, 242
 Dante, 72, 142, 161 f., 214
 Daphne ('Dephne'), 94 (12), 253 (21 ff.), 328
 Darby, John, printer, 41
 Darius ('Darie') III of Persia, 27 (8), 115 (25), 153 f., 165, 252 dark, v., 56 (25)
 darked, pp. adj., darkened (with sorrow), 72 (31) darlings ('derlinges'), s., 231 (38)
 darte, v., dared, 154 (25); pierce with a dart, 223 (21)
 dartthirling, adj., dart-piercing, 113 (4) Dasent, J. R., 280
 askard, s., dastard, 47 (7)
 date, s., end (of life), 124 (23); period of time, 180 (25)
 Davey, Henry, 143
 David, king of Israel, 27 (5, 15)
 Davies, John, of Hereford, borrowings by, from the miscellany, 271
 Davison, Francis: see Poetical
 daweth, v., dawns, 124 (36)
 Day, Mistress, poem on, 94 (34) n.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Day, 'Carie' (q. v.), 224 f.
 Day, John, printer, 79 n.2, 88 n.3
 dayne: see deign days, lucky and unlucky, and the Roman calendar, 101 (15) n.
 deal ('dele'), s., part, portion, 75 (2), 80 (31)
 Deane, William, 245
 dear ('dere'), adj., of great worth, 59 (6) dearworth, adj., beloved, 112 (38) (the last example in the N. E. D.) death, the dance of, 125 (6); the harbinger of, 166 (4) n.; life and, compared, a poem, 124 (20); sleep's sister or brother, 109 (7) n.
 deathday, s., 98 (36)
 debate, s., friendly contest, 11 (4); quarreling, 26 (16), 106 (29), etc.
 Deborah ('Debore'), a prophetess who judged Israel, 102 (33)
 deburs, v., disburse, pay, 89 (25)
 decay, s., death, 109 (18)
 decay, v., make weak, impair, 98 (27); vanish, 244 (32) decayer of all kind, s. phr., destroyer of everything in nature, 61 (13) deceivable: see deceivable deceitless, adj., 204 (31)
 deceivable ('deceauable'), adj., deceitful, 45 (22) deem ('deme,' 'demen'), v., judge, 87 (34) n., 159 (32), 186 (2), 242 (6), etc.
 deep ('depe'), v., busy oneself in, 85 (8) n.
 deepwitted ('depewitted'), adj., 2 (9)
 deface, s., shame, 177 (21)
 deface, v., put to shame, surpass, 170 (18) defame, s., ill fame, 98 (3); slander, 145 (13) defame, v., 160 (10)
 default, s., default, defect, 30 (22), 69 (29), 95 (24) defend, v., fend off, keep at bay, 99 (23), 107 (32) defenst, pp., defended, 220 (16) defied ('defide'), v., renounced, set aside, 188 (7) define, v., state precisely, 18 (27) deign ('dayne'), v., 203 (14)
 dele: see deal
 delf ('delph'), s., pit, 170 (28)
 Deloney, Thomas, 109, 295 deme: see deem demean, v., 8 (4) demen: see deem Democritus, epigram ascribed to, 237 f.
 Demophoön and Phyllis, 301
 Denny, Anthony, Sir, elegy on, 178 (8) n. dented, pp. adj., hollow, sunken, 30 (5) (the only example in the N. E. D.) depaint ('depaynt'), v., adorn, 101 (15); pp., colored, 204 (12) depart, v., divide, 110 (11); send away, 225 (7); separate from the body, 113 (9), 249 (12) depe: see deep Dephne: see Daphne depraveress ('depraueres'), s., a female depraver, 169 (17) n. (the only example in the N. E. D.) dere: see dear
 De Ricci, Seymour, 35
 Dering, Edward, 120
 derlinges: see darlings descried ('discryde'), v., 90 (39) described, pp., described, 99 (18) desert, adj., forsaken, 34 (6) despairing ('dispearyng'), pres. p., 38 (30) despite ('despight'), s., 17 (10) despoiled ('dispoyled'), pp., disrobed, 13 (9); stripped of leaves, 3 (8) Desportes, Philippe, 135 destroy ('distry'), v., 99 (3) determed, pp. adj., determined, 30 (23)
 Devereux, Penelope, daughter of the first Earl of Essex ('Stella'), 256
 Devereux ('Deuerox'), Richard, elegy on, 122 (37) n.
 Devereux, Robert, second Earl of Essex, 256
 Devereux, Walter, first Earl of Essex, 256, 308
 Devereux, Walter, third Baron Ferrers, Viscount Hereford, 256
 devines: see divines devise, s., figure, story, 93 (31) n.; intention, wish, 38 (6), 254 (18); purpose, 36 (20)
 devise, v., contrive, 7 (36), 18 (9); imagine, 91 (2); ponder over, plan, 125 (33, 37)
 De Vocht, H., 6 n., 84 n.5
 dial ('dyall'), s., face of a clock or a sundial, 148 (20) n.
 Diana ('Dyane'), 100 (4), 154 (2), 156 (8), 190 (26, 31), 257 (23). See Dictynnaes, Phoebe

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- dice, what chance comes on the, i. e., whatever event may happen, 18 (23)
Dick of Devonshire, 325
 Dickenson, John, 322
Dictionary of National Biography (D. N. B.), 5 n., 37, 46 n.2, 52 n.1, 68, 75 n.2, 78 n., 84 n. 4, 242, 245 f., 280
 Dictynnaes, Diana's, 94 (18). See Diana did ('dyd'), v., compelled, 71 (29)
 Dido, 90 (17), 173 (11). See Carthage dight, pp., repaired, 82 (32)
 dike, s., ditch, 87 (28)
 diligent, s., Diligence, 146 (23)
 dint, s., noise of thunder, 151 (5); stroke, 29 (9), 219 (5), 241 (8); stroke of lightning, 33 (30)
 Diodorus Siculus, 252
 Diogenes, 237
 disarmed, pp. adj., weaponless (Latin inermis), 119 (7) disarne: see discern disceivably, adv., deceivably, 71 (22)
 disceive, v., deceive, 130 (33), 230 (22) discern ('disarne'), v., 70 (10)
 discryde: see descried disease ('disseyse'), s., lack of ease, 10 (26), 21 (27) diseased, pp. adj., uneasy, 148 (3) disges, v., disgest, endure, 152 (10)
 Disle, Henry, printer, 93
 disparst: see dispersed dispearyng: see despairing dispersed ('disparst'), pp., 145 (18) display, v., undress (by removing a glove: Italian dispogliare), 41 (9) displeasaunt, adj., 30 (30) disport, s., 11 (5)
 dispoyled: see despoiled disprove ('disprooue'), v., disapprove of, 111 (19)
 disseyse: see disease
 distain ('distayn'), v., defile, 167 (9); paint, reveal, 68 (26); stain, 35 (24) distraint ('distrein'), v., oppress, subdue, 14 (13), 205 (6) n. distry: see destroy divers, adj., changing (waxing and waning), 91 (40) diverseness, s., changeableness, 36 (27 f.)
 divines ('deuines'), s., prophets, 228 (13) n.
 do, v., cause, 51 (5), 71 (29)
 doe ('doo'), s., 134 (27)
 doings, s., poetical compositions, 100 l(17), 231 dole, s., dealing, course of life, 102 (20) doling ('dolling'), pres. p., grieving for, 151 (36) dome: see doom, dumb dompes: see dumps
 don, done, v., do, 147 (9) 153 (15, 28) doo: see doe
 doolfull, adj., doleful, 107 (36), 109 (7, 24), 110 (37), 113 (21), 155 (12) doom ('dome'), s., decision, judgment, 18 (16), 85 (11), 100 (20), 102 (19), 153 (35), 201 (22), 254 (18); lively domes, quick-witted people, 12 (20)
 doon, inf., to be done, 147 (9)
 Dormer, E. W., 80, 306, 308 f. doubleness, s., duplicity, 52 (4, 9)
 doubt, s., anxiety, 244 (32) doubt ('dout'), v., fear, 41 (25), 47 (41), 78 (30 f.), 119 (20) doubtful, adj., fearful, 7 (9), 8 (31), 16 (5), 82 (13), 148 (2)
 Douglas, Margaret, Countess of Lenox, 312
 douteous, adj., doubtful, fearful, 38 (31)
Dove and the Serpent, The, 152
 Dover, England, 52 (21)
 do way, v., do away with, 35 (8), 77 (25), 105 (35), 246 (20 ff.), 247 (2, 14); go away, stop, 207 (34), 246 (26, 33) down, bed of, 83 (11), 88 (19) downflowed, pp., 44 (33)
 downsent, inf., 117 (15)
 Doyle, J. E., 245
 drave, v., drove, 61 (20), 206 (11) n., 219 (25)
 Drayton, Michael, on Geraldine and Surrey, 71 f., 136, 138, 141; on Surrey and Lady Stanhope, 312; on the authorship of certain miscellany poems, 67, 82, 212; quoted, 94 n., 231, 270 dread ('drede'), s., (no) doubt, 185 (34), 186 (3, 10) dreadful ('dredfull'), adj., full of fear, 203 (9) drench, v., drown, 15 (39); overwhelm (in sloth), 29 (14), (in sleep), 221 (26) drenching, adj., that which overwhelms or drowns, 122 (13) drent, pp., drowned, 153 (4) drieve: see drive

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- drifts, s., crafty actions, 188 (26)
drive ('drieue'), v., 77 (15), 78 (26); cause, 219 (36); hold one's course to- ward, 206 (17)
drivel, s., foolish talk, 226 (18) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1852) drivel, v., slaver, 88 (24) n.
drops, silver, s. phr., figurative for dew, 13 (17)
dropsy, adj., dropsical, 131 (20) n.
Drummond, William, of Hawthornden,
236 f.; his copy of I, 35
Dryden, John, 268
dryeth (dryth), s., thirst, 131 (20) n. (the first example in the N. E. D.)
Du Bellay, Joachim, 296 Dudley, John, Viscount Lisle (later Duke of Northumberland), 69 Duff, E. G., 90 n.2, 221 dull, v., dead, 99 (28)
dumb ('dome'), adj., 147 (17), 252 (12)
dumps ('dompes'), s., melancholy fits, 97 (24), 99 (28), 107 (36), 222 (34)
Duncan, Edmonstoune, 123 f.
duplicate settings and the miscellany, 13 ff.
durance, s., endurance (of toil), 136 (26)
dure, v., endure, 114 (15), 125 (2)
dyall: see dial
Dyane: see Diana
Dyce, A., 112 n.4, 182, 220, 305
dyd: see did dyde (dyed), v., 153 (14)
- each one ('echone'), pron., 116 (21) eachwhere ('echwhere'), adv., on each side (Latin utrumque), 115 (28) earnest and game (jest), betwixt, 39 (8) earthed, pp., buried, 136 (3) easy sparks of flame, s. phr., sparks easily kindled, 6 (8)
echo-device, the, example of, 127 (2) n.
ecphonesis, or the outcry, example of, 64
(33)-65 (2-17) n.
Edinburgh Review, The, on Geraldine, 74, on Wyatt, 66
Edinburgh University, its copy of I, 35
Edipus: see Oedipus editor, the, of the early editions of the miscellany, methods and aims of, 88 f., 94 ff., theories about, 85 ff.
editorial methods of the present edition,
64 f.
- Edmunds, Andrew and Elizabeth, 305
Edward IV, king of England, 137
Edward VI, prince and king of England,
114 (35 n., 43), 68, 70, 80, 282; Captain
Audley and, 278; Denny and, 292
Edwards, Richard, 93, 108, 131, 156, 329.
See Paradise
Edwards, Thomas, 309
eek: see eke
eft, adv., again, 151 (6), 188 (14)
egal, adj., equal, 90 (26), 105 (3), 106 (33), 121 (13); well-matched (Latin par), 26
(8)
Egerton, F. H., eighth Earl of Bridgewater, his copy of I, 35
Egypt, the traitor of, 36 (5) n.
Egyptian astronomer, an, Zoroas, poem on, 115 (8)
eigh, interj., 94 (16) (the earliest example in the N. E. D. is dated 1750) eight, numeral, eight, 92 (5) eke ('eek'), adv., also, 4 (27), 6 (25), 98
(15), 114 (40), 119 (4), etc.
eld, s., old age, 245 (39) Eleazer: see Mary elect, pp., chosen, 12 (24)
elegies and epitaphs, 12 (29), 27 (21), 28
(2), 108 (2)-115 (7), 120 (17), 122 (37),
135 (20), 146 (31), 159 (33), 162 (26),
166 (36), 178 (8), 194 (15), 199 (4), 200
(30), 206 (29), 218 (22); discussed, 105
Elizabeth, princess and queen of England, 3, 91, 258; the learning of, praised, 231;
treatment by, of Essex, attacked, 256
Elizabeth (Woodville), queen of England, 137
Ellis, George, on Geraldine, 73; reprints by, from the miscellany, 123 else ('els,' 'elles'), adv., 11 (23), 34 (24),
41 (10), 47 (7), 49 (36), 57 (38), etc.
Elyot, Thomas, Sir, 317
embassadors, s., 189 (11)
emong, prep., among, 102 (37), 116 (38), 200 (34)
empressed, pp. adj., oppressed, 8 (16) (the last example in the N. E. D. is dated 1475) Encyclopædia Britannica on holly, 287
endite, v., write, 16 (30)
Ene: see Aeneas Eneids: see Virgil
engins, s., tricks, 188 (37)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- England, 108 (17), 114 (36, 43), 147 (3)
England's Helicon, 67 f., 104, 109; borrowings of, from the miscellany, 266, 278
England's Parnassus, Robert Allot's (ed. Charles Crawford, q. v.), borrowings of, from the miscellany, 66 n.1, 67, 228, 235, 257, 259, 310, 317
 English, 2 (13 f.), 28 (22), 114 (42)
 enow ('inow'), adv., enough, 224 (7), 234 (16) ensample, s., example, 129 (5) entend: see intend entent: see intent entermete, v., put (themselves) between, 72 (29) (the only example in the N. E. D.) enterprise, s., design in an undertaking, 24 (7) enteryeld: see interyield entire ('entiere'), adj., unfeigned, 93 (11) entreat, v., treat, 208 (4); treat of, 111 (31) entroned, pp., enthroned, 101 (31)
 environed, pp., surrounded, 169 (19) n.
 epigrams, partial list of, 40 (14, 25), 41 (4, 14), 50 (34), 51 (7), 52 (16), 53 (2), 61 (10), 63 (20), 64 (20), 66 (6, 15), 77 (29), 79 (29)-82 (20), 211 (4)-212 (10), etc.
 epitaphs: see elegies
 Erasmus, 236 ff.
 Erato, 97 (17)
 erring, pres. p., moving, 91 (8), 116 (15); running, 33 (31)
 eschange, s., exchange, 79 (35) eschew ('eschue'), s., avoidance, 44 (37) n. (the only example in the N. E. D.) eschew, v., 53 (23)
 Essex, Earl of: see Devereux Ethiopian, adj., 101 (36)
 etiologia, the "reason-rend or tell-cause," examples of, 52 (30-33) n., 53 (16-19) n., 121 (15-16) n.
 Etna, Mount, Sicily, 111 (28), 244
 Etrascus, 181 (23) n.
 Europe, Europa, 188 (14), 229 (36), 230 (9)
 Euryalus and Nisus, 106 (36) n.
 Euterpe, 97 (23)
 Evans, R. H., 10 n.2
 Evans, Thomas, 276
 excepted, pp., accepted, 193 (18)
 exclamation, s., 42 (19)
 execrable, adj., accursed, 61 (8) expert, adj., experienced, 152 (36) express, v., manifest, 106 (7) eyen ('eyn,' 'iye,' 'yien'), s., eyes, 5 (10, 20), 9 (27), 37 (13), 70 (6), 93 (24), 95 (22), 109 (33), 118 (20), 162 (3), 163 (31), 186 (28), 205 (4), 240 (37), 248 (13), 255 (2) eyesore, s., 105 (7)
 F., W., 143
 fade, v. t., make lose color or disappear, 180 (23)
 faint, s., faintness, 17 (17) n., 73 (38) fainted ('faynted'), pp., 115 (22), 118 (27) (Latin confectus) falcon ('fawcon'), s., 256 (24) fall, pp., fallen, 143 (20); v., 97 (28) n.; come to port, 52 (32); happen to (one), 66 (9) falls ('fals'), s., 244 (18) n.
 falne (fallen), v., 26 (31) n.
 false, v., prove untrue, 53 (19), 232 (12)
 falsehead ('falsed'), s., lying, 76 (21), 196 (38), 205 (12), 233 (30) faltering ('foltring'), pres. p. adj., 248 (15) Fame, poem describing, 129 (9)
 fancy ('fancie,' 'fansie,' 'fansy'), s., love, 12 (2), 24 (2), 59 (23), 101 (2), 126 (14), 19, 34, 132 (13), 159 (4), 186 (23), 192 (28), 195 (26), 219 (36), 238 (10), etc.
 Fanshawe, Richard, Sir, 145, 152
 fansie, fansy: see fancy fansiefourm, 101 (2) n.
 fantaser, s., lover, 224 (2) (the only example in the N. E. D.) fantasy ('fantasie'), s., love, desire, 57 (2), 140 (38); whim, 235 (15) fantome: see phantom fardest, adv., farthest, 133 (22), 212 (18) fare, s., lot, condition, 15 (3) fare, v., rush to fight, 115 (18)
 farforth, adv., far, 24 (21), 225 (26)
 Farmer, Richard, 156
 farstriking, adj., 115 (33)
 fatal thread, s. phr., thread of life (spun by the Fates), 114 (25), 158 (11)
 Fates, the, 135 (22), 158 (11)
 Faustulus and Acca Laurentia, 111 (35) n.
 faut, s., fault, 130 (10), 240 (17)
 fautless, adj., faultless, 240 (30)
 favell, s., flattery, 87 (7)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- fawcon: see falcon
 fainted: see fainted feared ('ferde'), pp., frightened, 84 (3, 9), 255 (26) feares: see fierce feast, s., delight, 12 (35)
 feastfull, adj., festive, 109 (23), 110 (36) feat, adj., dexterous, 63 (22) feat, s., act (of writing), 99 (10) feater, adj., more skilful, 150 (13) feator, s., feature, 254 (33)
 featured, pp. adj., fashioned, 126 (14) fee, s., reward (in love), 78 (36), 135 (9); fees ('feese'), goods, wealth, 89 (13) feel ('fele') s., sense, 193 (33) feel ('fele'), v., taste, 87 (30) Fehse, Hermann, 86
 feint, v., feign, 179 (6)
 feldishe: see fieldish fele, felen: see feel feller, adv., 244 (18) n.
 Fenton, Elijah, 72
 ferde: see feared
 Ferdinand I, king of Bohemia, 245, 247
 fere, s., companion, mate, 7 (36), 13 (42) n., 96 (6), 97 (6), 100 (4), 107 (9), 110 (6), 207 (14, 35); fear, 210 (5)
 Ferguson, F. S., 25
 Ferrers ('Ferres'), Lord: see Devereux fers: see fierce ferse, s., queen (in chess), 20 (32 f.). (Cf. Chaucer's Book of the Duchess, lines 654 f., 723) fervent, adj., intense (cold), 44 (15), (heat), 107 (32); fervent powers, Latin fervida numina, 95 (17) fet, pp., fetched, brought, 236 (33); v., bring up, 49 (29), 56 (14), 165 (6)
 fethe (faith), s., 180 (32) fetters, s., fetters, 80 (13)
 fieldish ('feldishe'), adj., rural, 82 (24) fierce ('feares', 'fers'), adj., 72 (43); adv., 244 (19)
 fierly: see firely fift, numeral, fifth, 91 (28)
 file, s., woman, 170 (10) filed, pp. adj., false, 227 (36); polished, finished, 125 (32)
 Filosseno, Marcello, 163 fine, s., end, 152 (20); in fine ('fyne'), in short, 95 (24), 197 (26) fineness, s., Finesse, Subtlety, 192 (35) fingerfeat, s., handicraft, 101 (25) (not in the N. E. D.) fired flame, s. phr., 9 (6) firely ('fierly'), adv., ardently, 45 (14) (the last example in the N. E. D. is dated 1435)
 Fitzalan, Henry, twelfth Earl of Arundel, 241, 245, 330
 Fitzalan, Henry, Lord Maltravers ('Mau-trauers'), elegies on, 113 (34) n., 115 (2) n.
 Fitzalan, Mary, Duchess of Norfolk, 330
 Fitzgerald, Elizabeth: see Geraldine
 Fitzgerald, Gerald, ninth Earl of Kildare, 74
 Fitzgerald, Geraldine (Elizabeth): see Geraldine Fitzgerald, Joan, Countess of Ormonde, 220
 Fitzroy, Henry, Duke of Richmond, 68, 141 f.
 Flanders' cheer ('Flaunders chere'), s. phr., 87 (34) n.
 fleering ('flering'), adj., mocking, 200 (22) fleet ('flete'), v., die out, 237 (10); flit, hasten, 67 (18), 72 (6), 124 (35), 150 (11), 189 (38); float, 114 (12), 150 (23), 231 (14) fleeting ('fletyng'), pres. p., adj., floating, 148 (15); inconstant, 148 (5)
 flering: see fleering fleshy, adj., fleshly, 125 (21) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1604)
 Fletcher, Robert (fl. 1603), 121
 Fletcher, Robert (fl. 1656), 152
 flete: see fleet
 fleyng (flying), adj., 129 (29) flight, s., movement (turning of fortune's wheel), 243 (12)
 floorist: see flourished
 Florence, Italy, 9 (20); Surrey's alleged jousting at, 71 flourished ('floorist'), pp., 191 (42) foe, my sweet, etc., 15 (39) n., 67 (26), 140 (21), 144 (34), 158 (8), 186 (20)
 fole: see fool
 Folger, H. C., his copy of H, 33
 foltring: see faltering fond, adj., foolish, 59 (23), 99 (31), 105 (22), 194 (2) fone, s., foes, 117 (37), 118 (38) fool ('fole'), s., 154 (32), 196 (29)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- foolish ('folish'), adj., 198 (3)
 foord: see ford
 foot, step in your, or set your, v. phr., join in the song or chorus, 18 (21, 26) (the first example of foot in this sense given in the N.E.D. is dated 1552) for, prep., instead of, 98 (25); of, 140 (4); since, 17 (31), 77 (35) for because, conj., because, 21 (7), 72 (24), 73 (9), 82 (25), 209 (8) for that, conj., because, 159 (7); what for that, what of that, 140 (4) for to, prep. (before infinitive), 3 (14), 6 (30 f.), 16 (17), 17 (20), 37 (3), 42 (35), 52 (14), 57 (29), 62 (6), 69 (28), 72 (28), 30, 39), 73 (6), 76 (5), 83 (23), 85 (41), 159 (13), 162 (13), etc.
 for why, conj., because, 150 (22)
 Forbes, John, borrowings by, from the miscellany, 259 f., 313 force, s., ability, 126 (30); matter, importance, 70 (13), 87 (27), 122 (30), 129 (20); necessity, 23 (21); source, 70 (7) n.; waterfall, cascade, 44 (33) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1600); of force, necessarily, 43 (29), 75 (18), 162 (32), 178 (29), 209 (23); of force, to hunt in the open with the hounds in full cry, 13 (28) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1575) force ('forse'), v., care for, 128 (6), 211 (29), 220 (9), 221 (31), 233 (2); love, 133 (11, 17), 251 (10); pursue, 221 (29) forced face, with, adv. phr., with faces hiding their grief (tears) in forced calm (Latin invitus), 118 (22) ford ('foord'), s., 112 (29) n.
 fordid, v., maltreated, 16 (36), 191 (6)
 fordon, pp., annihilated, 219 (11) forecast, s., foresight, 108 (12)
 foreman, s., 204 (15)
 forepast ('forpassed'), pp. adj., past, 124 (24) n. (the first example in the N.E.D.), 137 (18)
 forepointed, pp. adj., predestined, 102 (36) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated "c. 1550") forereading, s., foreseeing, 112 (13) (the first example in the N.E.D.) foretime, s., past ages, 111 (31) n. (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1853)
 forewatched: see forwatched forewind, s., favorable wind, 244 (31) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1561) forged, pp. adj., deceptive, lying, 196 (27), 204 (28), 242 (15) forger, s., fabricator of lies, 54 (19), 191 (35), 192 (7) forgone, pp., lost (by death), 110 (4) forlet, v., put an end to, 146 (33) forlore, pp., lost, 141 (16), 144 (29), 207 (33)
 forow: see furrow forpassed: see forepast
 Forrest, William, priest, 84 n. 4; miscellany poems copied by, 274 ff., 284
 forst: see force (v.)
 Fortescue, John, 220
 Fortuna, goddess, poems on, 58 (9), 61 (21), 67 (8), 129 (9); the wheel of, 243 (12) fortunate, adj., fortunate, 103 (25) fortune, referred to, 76 (3), 102 (27), 138 (17 ff.), 155 (17), 157 (28), 185 (36) n.
 forwatched ('forewatched'), pp. adj., wearied with watching, 133 (32)
 Foster, Joseph, 243 foul ('foule,' 'fowl'), adj., disagreeable, 87 (21), 93 (5); ugly, odious, 96 (26), 98 (3, 19), 119 (42), 125 (21), 191 (12, 25)
 fouleth ('fowlth'), v., defaces, 151 (14) fountain, s., source of a river, 66 (33); springs, 68 (9); to make fountains of one's eyes, 184 (13) n.
 fourt, numeral, fourth, 114 (30) fowl, s., bird, 37 (2), 119 (14), 125 (37), etc. See foul fowlth: see fouleth
 Foxe, John, 3
 Foxwell, Agnes Kate, 52, 75 n.2, 90 n.1, 95, 99, 119 n.1, 148, 150, 156, and passim 160-221, 313-317; edition of Wyatt by, described, 61 f., collations with, 128; reprints of poems from A by, list of, 62 n.1
 fraighted: see freighted frame, s., profit, good condition, 47 (4); out of frame, in disorderly fashion, 192 (39) frame, v., deceive, 134 (13); discipline, train, 102 (17), 136 (5); prosper, succeed, 86 (36), 184 (10); frame a form, make a model, 99 (17)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- France, 84 (2), 87 (29) n., 108 (16). See Boulogne, Calais, Landrecies, Mon-treuil
- Francis I, king of France, 68, 183
- fraught, pp., freighted, laden, 28 (26), 73 (8), 151 (8), 159 (26), 242 (27)
- fray, v., frighten, 93 (9)
- freat, freate, v., rage, fume, 47 (8), 79 (25), 85 (18), 96 (35); vex, 207 (9), 218 (9).
See fret
- freight ('freight'), pp., laden, 15 (14), 121 (14)
- freighted ('freighted'), pp., laden, 25 (32)
- frekes, s., men, 108 (16)
- French, Frenchmen, 100 (9), 108 (5)
- frequent, v., busy oneself with, 100 (9)
- fret ('frette'), freat (q. v.), v., consumed, 195 (11); rub, wear, 26 (25), 190 (11)
- freight: see freight
- friend ('frende'), s., lover, sweetheart, 21 (24), 64 (24), 176 (32 ff.), 190 (18); a true, described, 244 (33)
- friendly ('frendful'), adj., 107 (13)
- friendship ('frendship'), s., love, 176 (31);
poem in praise of, 106 (9) n., 244 (33) n.
- fro, prep., 16 (4), 37 (18), 60 (14), 73 (35),
136 (4), 155 (19), etc.
- front, in first, prep. phr., Latin in primo
fronte, 116 (32)
- frot ('frote'), v., chafe, 151 (15)
- fruit ('frute'), s., offspring, 96 (32)
- fruitless ('frutelesse'), adj., childless, 96 (14)
- fry, v., heat, burn, 101 (36)
- frying-pan, flower of the, 96 (7) n. (apparently not in the N. E. D.)
- fulfil, v., fill full, 73 (36), 107 (37)
- Fuller, Thomas, 84
- fullfatted, adj., 115 (15) (apparently not in the N. E. D.)
- Fullwood, William, 143, 259; imitation by, of a miscellany poem, 265 f.
- Fulman, William, manuscript notes in E
by, 28, 67
- fume, s., smoke, anger, 6 (31), 235 (36), 236 (32, 40), 239 (34), 246 (14)
- further, adv., further, 112 (30)
- further, v., 15 (19), 58 (22)
- Furnivall, F. J., 306, 308
- furor, furour, s., fury, 73 (34), 78 (2)
- furrow ('forow'), s., 107 (23); v., plow the waves with a ship, 219 (14)
- furth, adv., forth, 3 (6), 4 (26), 6 (27), 7 (28), 52 (22), 152 (15), 153 (25), 221 (3),
etc.
- furtherance, s., 194 (32)
- furththrow, v., throw forth, 186 (32) (not
in the N. E. D.)
- G., poem attacking, 194 (7) n.
- G., F., 267
- G., I., 237
- G., W.: see Gray
- gadding as a stray, wandering like a loose woman, 156 (23)
- gadling, s., wayfarer, 40 (29) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- Gaeta, 244, 254
- gain ('gayn'), prep., against, 116 (16)
- gain, s., advantage, benefit, 60 (26); misprint for game, 47 (2) n.
- gainstrive ('gaynstrive'), v., oppose, harm
(Latin nocere), 119 (17)
- gainward, prep., towards, facing, 81 (30)
(the only example in the N. E. D.)
- game, s., entertainment, 209 (8); jesting, jest, 5 (13), 39 (8), 62 (39), 134 (9), 180 (14), 187 (29); win the game, achieve success, 135 (26)
- gan, v., began, did, 7 (18, 38), 8 (4), 16
(14, 26), 17 (14), 74 (30), 95 (6), 101
(16), 112 (16, 24), 114 (27), 115 (13),
etc.
- gander's foe, 24 (27) n.
- gape, v., await eagerly but unsuccessfully, 246 (28); long for, 59 (19, 34), 85 (7)
- garden, poem on a, 107 (14) n.
- garlands and the miscellany, 109
- Garret, 141
- Gascoigne, George, 45, 83, 98 n.3, 308;
imitation by, of the miscellany, 111,
315 f.; on Lord Vaux, 285; quoted, 156, 180, 280, 324
- gate, v., got, 253 (38)
- gear, s., things, articles, 104 (5)
- geason, adj., rare, 10 (7), 200 (18) n.
- geason, s., rarity, 239 (3) n. (the last of two examples in the N. E. D.)
- geat (get), v., 75 (6)
- gend(e)reth, v., engenders, 116 (9)
- generate, pp., conceived and born, 82 (18)
- Gentleman's Magazine, The*, 52 n.1, 122, 150, 313
- Gentlemen's Journal, The*, 316

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- George III, king of England, his copy of K, 41
- George IV, king of England (as Prince Regent), Nott's edition dedicated to, 52 n.3
- Geraldi family, the, of Italy, 72, 137
- Geraldine, Fair (Fitzgerald, Geraldine or Elizabeth), 48, 54, 136 ff., 141, 159, 212, 312; romance of, 71 ff.; Surrey's poem to, 9 (17)
- Geraldine, The Praise of, 42 f.
- Gerbier, Charles, 231
- Gesippus: see Gisippus
- gesse: see guess
- gest: see guest
- gests, s., exploits (histories), 27 (10)
- ghost ('gost,' 'goste'), s., soul (of a dead person), 17 (41), 28 (40), 108 (30), 120 (3), 210 (37), etc.; (of a living person), 22 (31), 36 (31), 137 (15), 147 (21)
- Gibbs, Vicary, 245
- Gifford, Humphrey, imitation by, of the miscellany, 112, 158, 230
- Giles, J. A., 245
- Gilfillan, George, edition by, of Wyatt and Surrey, 56
- gillot ('gyllot'), s., wanton woman, 200 (28) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- gillyflower ('ielifloure'), s., 156 (34)
- gins, v., begins, 47 (35), 164 (39), 181 (19), 220 (31)
- gins ('ginnes'), s., traps, 205 (22)
- girded, pp., pierced, 115 (32)
- Gisippus ('Gesippus') and Titus Quintus Fulvius, 106 (34) n.
- gittens, s., guitar-like instruments, 162 (29)
- glad, s., joy, 39 (9)
- gladdest, adv., 251 (25)
- gladsome, adj., 136 (4)
- Glasgow University, Hunterian Museum, library, its copy of F, 30
- glead (gleed), s., fire, 37 (15)
- gleaves ('gleaus'), s., glaives, swords (Latin enses), 115 (23), 118 (33)
- glims, s., gleams (of the eyes), 257 (7)
- glimsing, pres. p., glancing, 22 (8)
- glode, pp., glided, 112 (28)
- glome, v., gloom, frown, 26 (29)
- glose: see gloze
- gloss, s., deceptive appearance, 54 (21)
- gloze ('glose'), v., falsify, 54 (20)
- gnash, v., grind the teeth in anger, 117 (22)
- gnawing, s., torment, 19 (14)
- go, v., walk, 87 (23), 89 (18), 136 (2), 177 (6), 218 (25)
- go to, interj., 78 (12)
- godhead, s., divine personality, 188 (4); God, 217 (22)
- Goethe, borrowings by, from the miscellany, 121, 285 f.
- gogen gift, s., gudgeon-gift, a gift for gudgeons or credulous persons, 149 (11)
- Gollancz, Israel, Sir, 317
- gonne: see gun
- good, s., dear one, 60 (23), 77 (21); property, 41 (8), 197 (21)
- Goodal, Will, 278
- Googe, Barnabe, 19 n.2, 77 n. 2, 247, 260 f.; on Grimald, 78, 87; borrowings by, from the miscellany, 108, 110
- goom, s., gome, man, 105 (2)
- goonne: see gun
- Gorboduc, 81
- Gordon-Duff, Edward, his copy of G, 31 n.2
- Gorgeous Gallery of Gallant Inventions, A* (ed. Rollins, q. v.), 102, 105 f., 112, 127, 159, 185, 200, 218, 265, 268, 301, 321; borrowings in, from the miscellany, 109, 137, 281 ff., 285 f., 293, 329
- ghost, goste: see ghost
- Gough, R., 46
- govern, v., influence, direct, 12 (10)
- governance, s., control, 15 (16), 26 (9)
- Gower, John, 153
- Graces, the, 93 (18), 97 (27), 100 (21)
- graff, s., plant, shoot, 123 (20), 156 (36), 169 (18), 171 (9), 177 (36)
- grafted, graft, pp., adj., grafted, 30 (23), 181 (16)
- Grafton, Richard, 5
- grange ('graunge'), s., storehouse (fig.), 171 (10)
- grant ('graunt'), v., confess (Latin fateor), 95 (6)
- Granta, the River Cam, here used for Cambridge University, 112 (25)
- Granville, George, Baron Lansdowne, reprints of the miscellany poems dedicated to, 38 f., 42
- grate, v., greet, cry out (pray) for, 136 (31), 240 (36), 242 (35). See greeted
- graunge: see grange

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- graunt: see grant
grave, v., carve, 125 (30, 35, 37), 193 (10), 210 (9); engrave, 62 (24) n.; impress, 55 (14) gravel(ed) ground, s. phr., 13 (13)
Gravener, Thomas, Sir, 53
graveness, s., gravity, 114 (6) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1577) graving ('grauyng'), s., sculpturing, 99 (10)
Gray, Agnes (Mrs. William), 308
Gray, William (W. G.), contributor to the miscellany, 80, 194 (7) n., 200 (30) n.; censorship in the poem of, 97; poems wrongly attributed to, 308 f.
Graves, Greeks, 120 (6) n.
greave, s., leg-armor, 117 (19); ('greves') thickets, 203 (15, 28)
Greece ('Grece'), 125 (29), 126 (5), 202 (10)
Greek Anthology, 237 f.
Greekish ('grekish'), adj., Grecian, 168 (24), 228 (23)
Greeks ('Grekes'), 14 (19, 29), 227 (26), 228 (17, 19, 23), 246 (10) green ('grene'), adj., newly made, 4 (20); youthful and vigorous, 3 (17), 21 (18)
green, s., green trees, shrubs, etc., 4 (27), 7 (16), 11 (15), 61 (14)
Greene, Belle da Costa, 30
greenness ('grenes'), s., immaturity, 159 (21)
grees, s., degrees (astronomical) 116 (17) greeted, v., wept, 108 (26). See grate Greg, W. W., 10 n.1, 12 ff., 20, 30 n., 86 n.2
grene, grenes: see green(ness)
Grenville, Thomas, his copies of B, 10, 13 f., of D, 21, of G, 31 f., of H, 33, of K, 40 f., of N, 44 ff.
greves: see greave
Grey, Arthur, fourteenth Baron Grey de Wilton, the wife of (Elizabeth Zouche), praised by Gascoigne, 180
Grey, Elizabeth, Countess of Kildare, 137
Grey, Jane, Lady, 305, 322
Grey, William, thirteenth Baron Grey de Wilton, 69, 241
griesly: see grisly
grieues (griefs), s., 149 (30)
Griffiths, A. F., 50
Grimald, Annes (Agnes), elegy on, 111 (12) n., 78
Grimald, Nicholas, 3, 65 f., 92 ff., 277; "editor" of the miscellany, theories of his being the, 86 ff., 95; life and works of, 77 ff., 85; manuscript of a poem by, 96; meters of, 103 f.; orthographical peculiarities of, 79; poems by, in the first edition, 93 (2)–120 (21), order of, and omissions, in later editions, 8, 10 f.; reputation of, subordinated to Surrey's, 66; rhymes, poor, in the work of, 236; style of, the, 79; subject-matter of, the, 105; text of, the, how treated in the old editions, 88, 96 gripe, s., grip, 160 (17); torment, 81 (5); vulture, 93 (32) n.
grisly ('griesly,' 'gryzely'), adj., frightful, 120 (15), 153 (13) groins, v., grunts, 88 (22) n.
grones (groans), s., 115 (28)
Grosart, A.B., 81, 112 n.2, 120 n.6, 144 f., 156, 158, 179, 188, 190, 219, 227, 230, 265, 268, 271, 277, 280, 286 f., 289, 298, 309, 322, 324 f.
gross, adj., solidly built (Latin crassus), 105 (6)
Grove, George, Sir, 282
Grove, Mathew, 145, 188; imitations by, of the miscellany, 112 grunts, s., cries of pain (Latin dolor), 115 (28)
gryzely: see grisly
Gualterus de Castellione, Philippus (Philippe Gualtier de Lille or de Châtillon), the Alexandreis of, translation from, by Grimald, 115 (8), reprinted, 248 ff.
Guarini, Baptista, 145
Guatier de Châtillon: see Gualterus guerdon, s., 248 (14)
guess ('gesse'), v., suppose, think, 34 (13), 100 (33) guest ('gest'), s., fellow, 252 (42); visitor (love), 121 (10)
guie: see guy
guise ('guyse,' 'gyse'), s., apparel, 95 (23); manner, 33 (29) gun ('gonne,' 'goonne'), s., 53 (5); description of a, 79 (38) n.
gushen, v., gush, 240 (9)
guy ('guie'), inf., guide, steer, 244 (9) guyse, gyse: see guise gyllot: see gillot

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- H., Susan, Mistress, poem on, 103 (24) n.
H., T., 286. See Howell
H., W.: see Hunnis
ha, interj., 110 (10), 200 (22), 239 (10)
Hackett, Francis, 74 n.1
Haddington, Scotland, battle of, 108 (15) n.
Haddon, Walter, 227; poem translated from, 113 (34), 245 f.
Hagen, Winston, his copy of G, 31 n. 2 hair ('heare,' 'heeres,' 'heyres'), s., 11 (22), 25 (38), 30 (8), 119 (35), 133 (29), 152 (2), 157 (34), 165 (25), 192 (24), 257 (16)
hale, v., haul, pull, 155 (6), 240 (11)
Hall, Anthony, 120 n.7
Hall, John, The Court of Vertue, moralizations of the miscellany poems in, 189, 260; quoted, 263, 328
Halliwell-Phillipps, J. O., 151
halseth, v., esteems, is content with (Latin diligat), 26 (26) halt, v., limp, 188 (23)
Hammond, Eleanor P., 323
Hampton Court palace, 9 (29) n., 137
Handful of Pleasant Delights, A (ed. Rolins, q. v.), 4 n., 127, 252, 268; borrowings in, from the miscellany, 108 f., 142, 149, 161 handiwork ('handy warke'), s., 165 (14)
Hannah, John, 156 f.
Hannibal, 36 (9), 47 (9); referred to, 81 (18 f.), 164 f.
Hanscom, Elizabeth D., 103 n.1 hap, s., chance, fortune, 7 (35), 43 (8 ff.), 70 (36), 75 (38), 79 (24), 118 (29), 149 (17), 175 (37), etc.; lucky chance, 66 (27), 142 (4, 19), 230 (37), 232 (17)
hap ('happe'), v., happen, 43 (8 ff.), 79 (24) harbinger of death, the, 166 (4) n.
hard: see heard
hard by, adv., 248 (26)
hardiness, s., audacity, 32 (12)
hargabush, s., harquebus, 164 (36)
Harington, Henry, editor of Nugae Anti-quae, q. v.
Harington, John, contributor to the miscellany, 80 f., 256, 329; editor of the miscellany poets, Nott's theory, 89 ff.; poem by, in manuscript, reprinted, 194; poems attributed to, in Nugae Anti-quae, 90 ff., 143, 258 f., 262, 294; translation (The Book of Friendship) of Cicero by, quoted, 239
Harington, John, Sir, 80 f., 90 f.; on his father's poem in the miscellany, 256; on Wyatt and Surrey, 121; poem by, quoted, 150
Harington MSS.: see MSS. Additional 28635, 28636, 36529, MS. Egerton 2711
harm, s., grief, 8 (20)
Harpalus ('Harpelus') and Phyllida, a pastoral poem, 132 (33) n.
harps, v., plays on the harp, 151 (23)
Harrington, John, printer, 90
Harrison, G. B., 121 n.3, 313, 325 harty: see hearty
Harvard College library, its copies of J and K, 38, 40
Harvey, Gabriel, 45, 120, 219, 280, 323 ff.
hase (has), v., 72 (41); used for have, 41 (33)
Haslewood, Joseph, 39, 181, 314; his copy of the miscellany, 10 n.2; manuscript notes by, in K, 41 f.
hatch, s., gate, door, 59 (20) hatched, v., cut in parallel lines, (fig.) tornmented, 133 (34) hateless, adj., 11 (4) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1580) haunted, pp., frequented, 3 (37)
haw, s., 248 (36), 328
hawbart, s., halberd, 84 (26)
Hawes, Stephen, 5
hawthorn, the testament of a, a poem, 248 (34) n.
hay, s., net for trapping rabbits, 84 (36)
haynous: see heinous Hazlitt, W. C., 13, 39 n., 58, 73 n.2, 81 n. 4, 156, 262, 265, 271, 283, 285, 316 head ('hed'), s., antlers, 4 (31) n.; on head, ahead, headlong, 255 (36) Headley, Henry, 122 f.
heale, s., welfare, 225 (24)
health, s., good luck, welfare, 40 (34), 211 (21); safety, 7 (9), 18 (29) heaped, pp., added to, 111 (36)
heapy, adj., full of heaps, 231 (29) heard ('hard'), v., 48 (27), 51 (8), 124 (8) heare: see hair hearse ('hersse'), s., bier, 250 (6) heart-gripping ('hertgripyng'), adj., 114 (17)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- heart-piercing ('hertpersyng'), adj., Latin flexanimus, 120 (8) hearty ('harty'), adj., drawn from the heart, 6 (38) heavensman, s., a spirit in Elysium (Latin caelo novum coniungere civem), 119 (15) (not in the N. E. D.) heavy, adj., melancholy (Latin maestus), 118 (26)
 Hebel, J. W., 231
 Heber, Richard, a ballad once owned by, quoted, 151; his copy of E, 27, of G, 31
 Hector, 113 (24), 160 (9) hed: see head
 hedge, v., hem in, 166 (2)
 heeres: see hair
 heinous ('haynous'), adj., 111 (7), 247 (27)
 Helen of Troy, 14 (29), 202 (6, 26), 231 (26), 254 (26); referred to, 101 (27), 202 (10), 246 (8 ff.)
 Heliconian nymphs, 103 (20)
 Henry VIII, king of England, 178 (10), 68, 70, 83, 137, 142, 183, 220, 233, 280, 282, 292, 302, 312. See Letters and Papers
 Henryson, Robert, 214, 265
 Hense, O., 229
 hent, pp., laid hold of, 7 (32)
 hept (heaped), pp., 152 (10) her, pron., their, 9 (20) n.
 Heraclitus, epigram ascribed to, 237
 Herbert, George, 133
 Herbert, William, first Earl of Pembroke, 302
 Hercules, 113 (23)
 herd, v., drive (game) to the hunter, 188 (30) Herder, J. G. von, 237
 herdman, s., 124 (8) n.
 here, pron., her, 122 (22)
 here, v., hear, 7 (24), 77 (4), 121 (6), 131 (5), 147 (16), 149 (39), 186 (38), 193 (2), 209 (27)
 Hereford, Viscount: see Devereux
 Herennius, 119 (4 n., 38)
 Herford, John, printer, 154
 Hero and Leander, Petowe's poem on, quoted, 112 ff.
 Herodotus, 244
 hersse: see hearse
 hert: see heart-
 Hertford, Earl of: see Seymour
 Hesperian land, the western land, Spain, 111 (25)
 hest, s., command, 103 (15), 112 (23)
 het (heat), s., 163 (14)
 hewe: see hue
 Heynes, Simon, dean of Exeter, 154
 heyres: see hair
 Heywood, Jasper, 5 f., 81, 84 f.
 Heywood, John, contributor to the miscellany, 3, 81, 85 f., 274 ff.; Harington on, 150; imitation of, by Surrey, 146
 Heywood, Thomas, 231
 hie ('hye'), adj., high, 11 (19), 26 (23, 32), 44 (30), 46 (9), etc.
 hie ('hye'), v., hasten, 17 (15, 32), 237 (24)
 Higgins, John, 45
 hight ('hyght'), v., be called, 9 (28), 90 (40), 99 (19), 100 (31); promise, 200 (3) n., 237 (30)
 Hill, Richard, 168
 Hippolytus ('Hypolitus'), 154 (2) hire ('hyre'), s., reward, 5 (10), 62 (15), 65 (41), 160 (33); servant, 152 (8) his, pron., its, 3 (6), 4 (15), 24 (39), 29 (19), 53 (5), 63 (36), 66 (33), etc.
 hoar ('hore'), adj., 119 (35)
 hoard ('horde', 'hoord'), s., riches, 185 (30); on hoard, in piles (of coal), 237 (12)
 hoard ('hoord'), v., 93 (19)
 hoarish, adj., somewhat hoary, 30 (8) (the last of two examples in the N. E. D.)
 Hoby, Thomas, Sir, 305
 Hoe, Robert, his copy of I, 35 n. 5
 Hoelper, Franz, 106 n.
 holbarders, s., halberdiers, 164 (35)
 Holbein, Hans, 214 hold, s., stronghold, 81 (22), 189 (22), 256 (8); in hold, folded in safety, 16 (16), in possession of, 55 (34), 171 (34), in prison (Italian I' son pregon), 51 (28)
 holden, pp., held, 135 (27), 180 (24) holds it hap, v. phr., considers it lucky, 149 (17) hole: see whole
 Holford, George, Sir, his copy of *D, 24 ff.
 Holinshed, Raphael, 71, 136 holl, holle, holly: see whole, wholly hollow ('holow'), adj., emptied (of unrequited love), 131 (11)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- holly tree, the, and its properties, 168 (5 ff.), 287
- holt, s., wooded hill, 13 (25), 188 (9)
- home-hasting, adj., 199 (26)
- homely guest, adj., unpretentious fellow, 252 (42)
- Homer, 27 (9) n., 47 (10) n., 99 (8): Iliad, the, cited, 172, 239
- honest, adj., virtuous, 193 (22)
- honestly, adv., honorably, 56 (36)
- honesty ('honeste,' 'honestie'), s., chastity, 238 (17); honor, 23 (36), 43 (12)
- hongersterven: see hungerstarven
- Honsdon: see Hunsdon
- hood, s., head-covering, 239 (5)
- Hookes, Nicholas, 72
- hoont (hunt), v., 93 (19)
- hoopt, pp., encircled (with a crown), 84 (25)
- hoord: see hoard
- Horace, 77, 80, 105, 130, 139 f., 232, 268; poems translated or imitated from, 152 f., 157 f., 174, 190, 207, 213 f., 218, 220 f., 272 ff., 327
- horde: see hoard
- hore: see hoar
- hote (hot), adj., 8 (31), 9 (4), 56 (5), 68 (15), 121 (30), etc.
- Hotten, J. C., printer, 271
- hourd: see hoard
- house, s., one of the twelve parts (or "houses") of the sky, 116 (21)
- hove, v., linger, 13 (2)
- Howard, Catherine: see Catherine
- Howard, Edward, ninth Duke of Norfolk, 39
- Howard, Henry, Earl of Surrey, Aeneid of, the: see Virgil; allusions to, enumerated, 110 ff., 119 ff.; blank verse of, the, date of its publication, 70, 79 n.2; Churchyard's relations with, 83; editions of: see Tottel's; Geraldine and, 71 ff.; Harington and, 90 f.; imitations by, of Heywood, 146, 276, of Wyatt, 3 (23) n., 13 (41) n., 23 (23-26) n., 25 (38) n., 28 (8) n., 172, 313; imitations of, in the miscellany, 147 (12) n., 163 (2) n., 313; life and works of, 67 ff., 85; mentioned, 212, 241, 255, 272, 285; meters and stanzaic forms of, 70, 103; named alone on the title-page, reasons why he is, 65, and the effect on his reputation, 66 f., 299; named elsewhere in the miscellany, 2 (8), 31 (24), 206 (2), 207 (11 f); poems by, the, in the miscellany, 3 (2)-31 (23), 206 (2)-210 (37), last of, written, 159, order of, in the second and later editions, 8, 10 f.; manuscript copies of, omitted by Tottel, 92 n.2, manuscript sources of, 96 f., and how "edited," 88 f., 96 f., published in his lifetime, 150, unique copies of, 96 n. 1, wrongly attributed to, 67 f., 259, 261, 266, 278, 292, 299, 316 f., 321, Wyatt the subject of certain of, 66; Shelley, a "servant" of, 247; sonnets of, 103, 188; style of, 102 ff.; value of the work of, 70. See S. (H.)
- Howard, Henry, first Earl of Northampton, 159
- Howard, Mary, Duchess of Richmond, 62, 68, 142, 164, 208
- Howard, Thomas, second Duke of Norfolk, 312
- Howard, Thomas, third Duke of Norfolk, 68 f., 241, 310
- Howard, Thomas, fourth Duke of Norfolk, 69, 146, 330
- Howard, Thomas, Lord, son of the second Duke of Norfolk, half-uncle of the poet Surrey, 312
- Howell, Thomas (T. H.), 77 n.2, 102, 144, 190, 265, 277, 309, 324; imitation by, of the miscellany, 111, 289
- Hudson, H. H., 152, 234, 271, 292
- hue ('hewe'), s., face, 9 (28), 13 (5), 257 (13)
- Hughes, John, 122 n.2
- hugy, adj., 42 (27), 147 (21)
- hungerstarven ('hongersteruen'), pp. adj., starved, 131 (22)
- Hunnis, William (W. H.), 90, 207
- Hunsdon ('Honsdon'), Hertfordshire, 9 (27) n.
- Hunterian Club, 153, 286, 298, 323, 325
- Hunterian Museum: see Glasgow
- Huntington, Henry E., library of, its copy of B, 9 n.1-5, 10, 37 n.3, of E, 27, of G, 31, of H, 33, of an epitaph on Wyatt, 154 f.
- hurtful, adj., baileful, 116 (18) n.
- Huth, Henry, 82 n.; his copy of I, 35
- Hutton, James, 237
- Hyacinth, 95 (11)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

Hyads ('Hyades'), 111 (37), 244

hye: see hie

hyght: see hight

Hyginus, 222, 228, 287

Hypolitus: see Hippolytus

hyre: see hire

I, repetition of, 87 (16) n.

Jaggard, John, printer, 7

James I, king of Scotland, 142

James IV, king of Scotland, 208 (5) n.

Jamieson, T. H., 181

Jane (Seymour), queen of England, 68, 180

jangling, pres. p., quarreling, 169 (17)

Jannet, Pierre, 152

Janus, the god, 101 (38), 103 (3)

jape, make a, of, v. phr., make a joke of, make light of, 83 (21)

Icarian beck, Icarian Sea, 104 (24)

Icarus ('Icar'), 104 (23) n.

idol, s., image (of death), 109 (26); sculptured image, 126 (15)

ieewell (jewel), s., 111 (18)

ielifloure: see gillyflower

jeopardy ('ieopardie'), s., 10 (8)

Jerusalem, Mary of, eats her child, a poem, 82 (10) n.

jestress ('iestres'), s., a female jester, 169 (17) n. (the only example in the N. E. D.)

Jesus, son of Sirach, 159

Jewry, 27 (18)

Ilium, 228 (6). See Troy ill-suading ('ylswading'), adj., tempting to evil, 98 (6)

imp ('ymp'), s., child, 93 (16), 95 (14) n., 97 (5) n., 100 (21), 111 (29); evil spirit in hell, 131 (19); young man, 109 (27), 114 (28)

inborne, adj., 96 (36)

inconstance, s., 238 (6)

incontinent, adv., immediately, 58 (2)

indexing, the manner of, in the early editions of the miscellany, 15 f.

Indian, 103 (11), 212 (17, 30)

indifferent, adj., impartial, 189 (30); ordinary (Latin mediocris) in looks, 96 (8, 9, 27)

infekt, pp., given up entirely (to you), 171 (12) (earlier figurative use than any cited in the N. E. D.)

injust, adj., unjust, 16 (11)

inow: see enow

inpresseth ('inpreaseth'), v., mingles with, 145 (15)

intend ('entend'), v., express in words, 88 (35); understand, 193 (37)

intent ('entent'), s., 85 (32) n.; use, 33 (6)

intermitted, adj., interrupted, 194 (18) (the first example in the N. E. D.) interyield ('enteryeld'), v., 237 (16)

Johnson, Richard, 109

Johnson, Samuel, 248

Jolley, Thomas, his copy of H, 33, of Curll's reprint, 38

Jones, Evan J., 151

Jones, Richard, printer, 4 n., 109, 157, 259

Jonson, Ben, 85, 121, 152

Iopas, the song of, a poem, 90 (15) n.

Josephus, 213

Jove, 81 (34), 91 (26), 93 (17), 94 (14), 95 (35), 97 (5) n., 102 (37), 104 (33), 107 (15), 110 (20), 111 (37), 114 (25), 119 (15), 188 (11 ff.), 206 (32), 230 (5, 9), 244 (23); Jove's imp, or daughter, Venus, 100 (21, 30). See Jupiter.

Joye, Jacob, 25

Iphigenia, allusion to, 14 (22)

Irish, 9 (23)

irksome ('yrkesome'), adj., loathsome, 191 (15) n.

irmus, or the long-loose, examples of, 164, 175

Israel, 229 (19)

issue, s., outlet, 56 (3)

Italians, 2 (5)

Itrascus, 181 (23) n.

Judith, the apocryphal heroine, slayer of Holofernes, 102 (33)

juggling ('iuglyng'), s., deception, 150 (14)

Iulie: see Caesar, July

July ('Iulie'), 114 (31)

Juno, 90 (18)

Jupiter, 151 (4), 229 (35). See Jove ivory ('yuery', 'yuorie'), adj., 126 (6), 204 (8)

iwis ('ywys', 'ywis'), adv., certainly, indeed, 25 (21), 41 (8), 225 (23)

iye: see eyen

K., G. L.: see Kittredge

kaies, s., keys, 165 (11)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Kastner, L. E., 197, 236
 keen, adj., savage, 115 (16) keep, v., reside in, 94 (26). See kept Kendall, Timothy, Flowers (ed. Spenser Society), 190, 209, 223, 242, 255, 277, 286; borrowings by, from the miscellany, 111, 150 f., 235 f., 238, 309
 Kent, 87 (40)
 kept, pp., remained in, 13 (12). See keep Kett ('Ket'), Robert, and Audley, 280 kick, v., show anger, 159 (28)
 Kildare, Countess of: see Grey; Earl of: see Fitzgerald Killigrew, Henry, 152 kind ('kynde'), s., class, race, 156 (5), 191 (41), 192 (2); natural obligations, 106 (19); nature, 9 (31), 20 (8), 24 (39), 77 (32), 91 (4), 102 (25), 103 (31), 107 (12), 132 (10), 151 (39), 160 (2), 163 (9), etc.; Nature, 139 (34), 192 (14), 193 (31, 35); those of a like sort, 192 (5)
 kindly ('kyndly'), adj., natural, 99 (27); pleasing, 107 (12) Kinwelmarsh, Francis, 308
 kite, s., vulture, 24 (5)
 Kitson, Anthony, printer, 221
 Kitson, Thomas, Sir, 221
 Kittredge, G. L. (G. L. K.), notes contributed by, 147, 186 f., 233, 293, 326 f., 329
 Knevet, Henry, 277
 Knight, Master, 324
 knit, v., tie up, entangle, 4 (4); tying oneself in marriage, 150 (15) knolls, v., tolls, 166 (13) knot, s., group of men (Penelope's suitors), 202 (9) knowledge, v., acknowledge, 137 (29)
 Koepfel, Emil, 127, 129 f., 142 f., 172, 175, 186, 188, 191, 268, 319 f.
 Kolbe, Heinrich, 87, 108 n.1
 kouth: see couth

 laborous, adj., laborious, 46 (12) lace, s., tie or net of love, 4 (3), 101 (13 f.)
 laced, pp., tied (in), 149 (29)
 Lacedaemon ('Lacedemon'), Sparta, 219 (14)
 Lacy, Alexander, printer, 264 lad, v., led, 159 (36)
 Laelius ('Lelius'), Gaius, 106 (32) n.
 lamp of joy, s. phr., 155 (37)
 Landrecies ('Landersey,' 'Landresye,' 'Landryssy,' 'Laundersey'), Nord, France, 108 (14) n.
 Lansdowne: see Granville Laocoön, referred to, 228 (11 ff.)
 large, at, prep. phr., at length, 192 (18); at liberty, 11 (25), 127 (32), 159 (19)
 largesse, s., munificence, 105 (3), 108 (12)
 larme, s., alarm, 189 (15)
 last, pp., lasted, 121 (20)
 Lathrop, H. B., 103 n.1
 Latimer, Hugh, Bishop, 78, 87
 Latin strands, 111 (34)
 Latins, 2 (5)
 laud, s., 238 (19) n.
Laude Horti, De, a poem translating, 240
 Laundersey: see Landrecies
 Laura and Petrarch, 72, 75; poems on, 169 (21), 170 (5) laws, a poem on, 106 (2)
 lay her along, v. phr., run alongside in order to board and conquer, 189 (20)
 Layman, Johem, 32 n.1
 Lea: see Leah leach: see leech leaden, v., lead (to), 135 (29)
 leads, s., ?lead-covered balustrade or roof, 13 (12)
 Leah ('Lea'), wife of Jacob, 66 (3) leam, s., ray, gleam, 99 (33)
 leare: see lere learn, v., teach, 5 (28), 32 (9), 124 (14)
 leche: see leech lecher ('letcher'), s., lecherer, 87 (14), 247 (22), (i. e., Paris) 219 (13)
 Leda, 188 (14)
 Lee, Anthony, Sir, 242
 Lee, Margaret, Lady, epitaph on, 108 (32) n.
 Lee, Sidney, Sir, 5 n., 37, 46 n.2, 84 n.4
 leech ('leach,' 'leche'), s., physician, 107 (17), 146 (11), 210 (7)
 leef, leefe: see lief leek ('leke'), s., 134 (8)
 leese ('lese,' 'leze'), v., lose, 16 (43), 24 (40), 43 (36), 50 (9), 72 (26), 89 (11), 145 (32), 208 (15)
 leeve: see lieve
 Lefferts, M. C., his copy of F, 30
 Leigh, John a, and Surrey, 69, 310
 Leighton-Bromswold: see Browns hold leke: see leek

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Leland, John, 119
 Lelius: see Laelius
 lenger, adj., longer, 17 (33), 22 (11), 48 (28), 59 (21, 35), 69 (16), 127 (4), 132 (13), 135 (36), 139 (9), etc.
 lengest, adj., longest, 180 (29)
 length, v., prolong, 171 (36), 213 (27)
 lent, v., leaned, 70 (32)
 lere ('leare'), v., teach, 180 (11) n.
 lese: see leese
 lesse, s., loss, 243 (33)
 lesse, v., lessen, 35 (26)
 lest (least), adv., 71 (12), 79 (18), 92 (4), 136 (35), 150 (24) n., 176 (12), 188 (21), 193 (18) let, v., cease, 149 (6), 212 (33); deprived, 193 (35); hinder, 72 (36), 87 (34) n.; prevent, 6 (14), 116 (18) n.; let thee weet, give you to understand, 207 (34)
 letcher: see lecher
Letters and Papers . . . Henry VIII, 180, 241, 247, 280 lever: see liefer
 leves, v., lives, 244 (15) lewd ('leude'), adj., base, 239 (10); evil, vicious, 125 (17), 238 (31); ignorant, 232 (32)
 leze: see leese
Library, The, 5 n., 12 n.3, 14 n.1, 20 n.1, 30 n., 84 n.1, 86 n.2. See Bibliographical Society
 Libyk, adj., Lybian, 90 (18)
 licour: see liquor Lide: see Lydia
 lief ('leef', 'leefe'), adj., agreeable, 106 (23); dear, 14 (2); glad, 128 (10), 179 (20)
 lief, liefde, s., life, 129 (36), 149 (6), 175 (20) liefer ('leefer', 'leuer'), adj., more pleasing, dearer, 69 (10), 105 (23), 139 (42); adv., more gladly, 93 (30) liefsome ('leefsom'), adj., delightful, 19 (3) lieve ('leue'), v., believe, 195 (31) lift, v., lifted, 178 (18) light, adv., easy, 238 (11) light, v., disembark, 90 (18); fall, 256 (13); fall to the lot of, 192 (4); happen, 208 (42), 239 (31); lighten, 7 (29); sit down, 205 (19); strike, 244 (19) lightly, adv., quickly, 148 (33); readily, easily, 195 (31) lightning, adj., murderous (Latin fulmin-eus), 115 (23) like, s., 151 (38)
 like ('lyke'), v., love, 158 (21); please (impersonal), 94 (2), 114 (22), 119 (30), 145 (7)
 liked ('liekt'), v., 136 (34)
 Lilly, Joseph: see Collection limbs ('lims', 'limes'), s., 107 (37), 158 (4)
 Lincoln, Earl of: see Clinton Linton, W. J., 123, 186 liquor ('licour'), s., juice, 83 (19); water, 107 (24) Lisle, Lord: see Dudley list, s., pleasure, 139 (17) list ('lyst'), impers. v., it pleases, 61 (25), 69 (16), 85 (35), etc.
 live, on, prep. phr., in life, 250 (34) livelihead ('liuelyhed'), s., living presence, life, 27 (24) (the first example in the N. E. D.) livelihood ('liuelod'), s., 82 (25) lively, adj., animated, 66 (19), 72 (21), 73 (18), 97 (17), 155 (30) n., 156 (19); life-like, 19 (7), 99 (18); living, 27 (13), 207 (9), 218 (27); vigorous, 28 (8), 99 (25), 171 (37); warm and vigorous, 3 (7), 9 (22), 147 (31); vivid, 257 (33, 39) lively, adv., in lifelike fashion, 29 (26), 120 (2), 126 (9) livelyhed: see livelihead liver, s., one who is living, 145 (7) lives, adj., living, 147 (20), 151 (33)
 Livy, Titus, 86 (20) n.
 Lloyd, Lodowick, 165
 loathful ('lothfull'), adj., hideous (Latin informis), 244 (23)
 loathly ('lothly'), adj., unwilling (Latin invitus), 120 (4) Locker-Lampson, Frederick (Rowfant library), his copy of B, 10 n.3, 14, 37 n.3, of G, 31 n.1, of H, 33 n.
 lodesman, s., pilot, 175 (17)
 Lodge, Edmund, 42
 Lodge, Thomas, 153 f., 298, 323, 325 loft, adj., raised aloft, elevated, 28 (29), 224 (27) (the first of two examples in the N. E. D.) londe (land), s., 186 (22)
 lone (loan), s., 137 (20)
 long, of, adv. phr., a long time, 130 (15)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- long, v., belong, 11 (5), 218 (13), 226 (39);
desire to be, 123 (6)
long-gathered, pp., 117 (10) long-loose, the: see irmus lookers-on, s., 252 (20)
loose, pp., lost, 105 (33)
loose ('lose'), adv., 128 (24), 155 (21) loose ('lose,' 'lowse'), v., 38 (4), 153 (38)
lore, s., doctrine, 69 (5); learning, 101 (5); lesson, 235 (18), 237 (23), 244 (16)
lothfull: see loathful
lothly: see loathly loud-liar, the, example of, 173 (23-28) n.
louring, adj., frowning, 240 (32), 245 (30)
lovde ('loude'), v., loved, 173 (7)
love, v., error for leue (leave), 66 (29) n.
lovers'-dilemma poem, a, 317 lower ('lowre'), v., frown, 26 (36)
lowly cheer, s. phr., modest appearance, 238 (18)
Lowndes, W. T., 13, 37 n.3, 38 n.2
lowse: see loose
Lucan, 165
Lucrece, 191 (4-5), 193 (17), 180
Lucretius, borrowings from, 80, 272 f., 321 lukewarm, adj., 113 (10)
Lupa, 111 (35) n.
lure, a falcon's, 159 (8), 256 (25)
lure, v., recall (a hawk) by the lure, 133 (16), 256 (30)
lurk, v., be concealed (Latin teguntur), 94 (16), (Latin latet), 96 (21)
lurker, s., one who lies in ambush, 190
(38) n.
lurking, pres. p., hiding, 159 (12), 163 (22)
lust, s., base desire, 29 (6), 106 (14); plea- sure, caprice, 12 (33), 32 (10), 35 (7), 59 (28), 84 (30), 86 (35), etc.; wish, desire,
6 (18), 7 (26), 84 (29), 106 (6), 132 (13),
174 (25), 246 (15), etc.
lust, v., wish, 70 (10), 208 (30)
lustiness, s., beauty, 3 (7)
lusty, adj., beautiful, 81 (32); delightful, 87 (24), 93 (5), 171 (35); vigorous, 11 (22), 93 (5), 153 (14)
lute, Wyatt's song to the, 62 (16)
Lux, a falcon, 66 (7)
luyster, s., luster, 101 (30)
Lyaeus ('Lyai'), 111 (39) n. See Bacchus
Lydgate, John, 5, 145, 220, 317
Lydia ('Lide'), Lydian, 98 (30), 157 (36)
lyke: see like
Lyly, John, 181
Lysippus, Greek artist, 99 (8)
lyst: see list
M., Mistress, poem on, 254 (14) n.
M., D.: see Murray
McClure, N. E., 121 n.1
Macdonald, Hugh, 128, 266, 278 mace, s., club (really, according to Horace, a stroke of lightning), 151 (5)
Macedoins: see Macedonians
Macedon, the, Alexander the Great (q. v.),
27 (7), 115 (23), 117 (22)
Macedonians ('Macedoins'), 115 (18),
116 (28)
Mackail, J. W., 237 f.
McKerrow, R. B., 6 n., 19 n.2., 71 n.2 mad, worse than, 175 (29), 197 (38)
Madan, F., 28 n.1
Magdalene ('Maudlē'), St. Mary, 102
(33)
Magoun, Jr., F. P., 287, 298
maierome: see marjoram
maim ('maym'), s., calamity, 105 (21)
maistres, maistresse: see mistress
Maitland, J. A. F., 282 make, s., mate, 4 (29), 194 (38), 207 (20), 219 (9)
make, v., do, 252 (30)
makeless, adj., matchless, 254 (31) malice, v., seek to injure, 8 (9) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
Malone, Edmond, 41
Maltravers ('Mautrauers'): see Fitzalan man, s., servant, lover, 40 (12), 54 (6), 121 (26), 185 (18)
manifold, adv., in many degrees, very much, 86 (29), 142 (35)
manner ('maner'), adj., kind of, 36 (25), 47 (38), 100 (31), 120 (20)
Manningham, John, 152 manuscript notes in C, 150, 271, in E, 28, 67, in *D and I, 26, 36, 100 f., 149, 153,
185, 187, 287, 294, 296 f., 313, 315, 327
manuscripts, the, of the miscellany poets, how treated, 94 ff.
manuscripts, list of the, cited: Additional 4900, 278, 285; Additional 15225, 274, 302 ff.; Additional 17492 ("Duke of Devonshire MS."), 96 n.1, 97 n.1, 143,
174, 185, 190 f., 209, 212, 281, 290; Ad-

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- ditional 23971, 278; Additional 26737, 261, 281, 284; Additional 28635 (a copy of "Harington MS. No. 2"), 62 n.1, 81, 91 f., 137, 145, 157, 176, 201, 211, 258 f., 261, 263, 266, 269, 277, 281, 289 ff., 299 ff., 311, 315, 318, 320 f., 325, reprints from, 133 f., 137, 178 f., 194, 263 f., 288 f., 294 f.; Additional 28636 (a copy of "Harington MS. No. 1"), 91; Additional 30513, 143, 294; Additional 36529 ("Harington MS."), 91, 97 n.1, 129, 131 f., 135 f., 138 ff., 141, 147, 150, 153 f., 157, 193 f., 310, reprints from, 165 ff., 199, 201 f., 212, 320; Additional 38539, 305; Additional 38599, 284; Additional 38813, 324; Additional 38823, 79; Ashmole 48, 79, 257, 284, 290, 302 ff.; Ashmole 176, 313; Burney, 313; Corpus Christi College (Cambridge), 317; Cotton Titus A. xxiv, 150, 157, 255, 266, 273, 309, 325; Duke of Devonshire, i. e., Additional 17492 (q. v.); Egerton 2711 ("Harington MS. No. 1"), 62 n.1, 91, 95 n.3, 96 n.1, 160-164, 166-176, 180-184, 187-190, 194-200, 202 f., 208-215, 219, 221, 314 f.; Farmer (Chetham library), 156; French, a, of the thirteenth century, 133; Harleian 78, 97 n.1, 148, 210, 269, 292, 318, 322; Harleian 1703, 274, 284; Harleian 6910, 283; Huntington 183, 82 n.; Lansdowne 98, 292, 306, 308; Rawlinson Poet. 82, 323; Rawlinson Poet. 85, 79, 261; Rawlinson Poet. 108, 200, 239; Rawlinson Poet. 172, 315; Sloane 159, 261; Sloane 1206, 306; Sloane 1207, 306 ff.; Sloane 1896, 238 f., 266, 302 ff., 327; Tanner 103, 278
- marching figure, the, example of, 127 (2) n.
- Marcus, i. e., Cicero (q. v.), 118 (17) n. See Cato
- Margaret of Valois, 233
- Marius, Caius, 237
- marjoram ('maierome'), s., 2 (25)
- Markham, C. R., 81 n.1, 256
- Markham, Isabella (Mrs. John Harington), poems alleged to be addressed to, 254 (14) n., 294
- marlian: see merlin
- Marlowe, Christopher, 45, 85, 112
- Marot, Clément, 152
- marriage, poems for and against, 96 (2, 22), 150 (8), 195 (20)
- Mars, 91 (28), 93 (14), 186 (15)
- Martial, epigram translated from, 26 (2) n.
- Martius, 111 (23) n.
- Marty-Laveaux, C. J., 135, 296, 298
- Martyn, John, 278
- martyr ('martir'), s., 222 (8, 16); a constant sufferer (in love), 184 (7), 223 (12)
- martyrs, the Marian, and the miscellany, 3; Grimald's alleged betrayal of, 78, 87
- Mary, the Blessed Virgin, 102 (34)
- Mary, daughter of Eleazar, of Jerusalem, 213
- Mary I, princess and queen of England, Arundel (Mrs.) and, 329 f.; Audley's treatise dedicated to, 278 f.; Geraldine and, 74, 137; Grimald and, 78; Howard family, the, and, 70; Heywood's poem on, 155 (24) n.; name of, in the miscellany, 100 (6) n., 114 (10, 30), removed, 97, 302; poems contemporary with, 93; reputation of, and the miscellany, 3 f.; Surrey and, 68; Williams and, 305; Wyatt's rebellion and, 65, 322
- Mary, queen of Scots, the acquaintance of, with the miscellany, 262
- masheth, v., mesheth, catches in a net, 148 (35) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- masked, v., was enmeshed, 128 (16) (the first example of "absolute" use in the N. E. D.)
- massy, adj., 93 (19)
- mate, s., checkmate, 20 (22), 21 (14)
- matter ('mater'), s., (Latin materies) 95 (24)
- Maudlê: see Magdalene
- maugre, prep., in spite of, 237 (39)
- Mausolean, adj., like the tomb of Mausolus, king of Caria, 113 (19) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- Mautravers: see Maltravers
- Mavorses, Mars's, 116 (20)
- Mavortian, adj., martial, 111 (6)
- May, the unluckiness of, to Wyatt, a poem, 35 (2), 163
- maym: see maim
- maze, s., amazement, admiration, 97 (28) n.
- mean, adj., medium, 26 (20); moderate, 26 (12); ordinary, 96 (30); the golden

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- mean, poems in praise of, 26 (2, 20), 104 (17), 150 (17), 244 (8) n.; the mean (poor) estate, poems praising, 80 (27) n., 82 (21), 123 (28), 147 (37), 157 (2) n., 197 (18 ff.)
- mean, s., center, 86 (40); golden mean, 104 (20 f., 28); means, 114 (38); lament, complaint, 79 (11), 236 (32); tenor, 233 (33); of mean, 238 (7) n.
- meaning, vbl. n., intention, 59 (16)
- meant ('ment'), v., aimed, directed, 92 (6); intended, 85 (30), 203 (16)
- Meares, W., printer, 39
- meash (mesh), v., entangle, 7 (3), 52 (25)
- measure-keeping, s. phr., observing the golden mean, 104 (17 f.)
- mede (meed), s., 22 (27)
- medeth (meedeth), v., rewards, 211 (10)
- Medwall, Henry, 227
- Melbancke, Brian, borrowings of, from the miscellany, 112, 128, 138, 143, 146, 157 f., 165, 168 f., 185 ff., 190, 202, 210, 214, 259, 261, 265, 267, 270 f., 274, 276, 287, 293 f., 297, 306, 309, 314, 326, 329; quoted also at 324 f.
- Meleager, the son of Neoptolemus, an officer of Alexander the Great, 117 (28)
- mell, v., mingle, 102 (8)
- Melpomene, 97 (13)
- Melvill Book of Roundels*, The, copies of miscellany poems in, 260, 313
- Memoirs of Queen Mary's Days*, 3
- Memphite, adj., of Memphis (Egypt), 116 (2)
- Menoetius's ('Menetus') son, Patroclus, 106 (35) n.
- ment: see meant
- Mercurius Elencticus*, 145, 270
- Mercury, the planet, 91 (36). See Cyllene
- mercy, v., be merciful to, 12 (27)
- merely (merrily), adv., 221 (8)
- Meres, Francis, 82, 325
- merlin ('marlian'), s., 126 (26) n.
- Merrill, L. R., 64, 78 n., 128, 223-255 passim; on Grimald as the "editor" of the miscellany, 87
- Merritt, Percivall, 26 n.4
- meseems ('me semes'), impers. v., 73 (6), 105 (10)
- mesh: see masheth, meash
- messengers of age, 30 (8)
- mete, v., measure, 5(6), 72 (28)
- metrical and verse-forms in the miscellany, 102 ff.
- Metrodorus, 105 (24) n.
- meve, v., move, 51 (28), 152 (17), 212 (21)
- Michiels, Alfred, 135
- middle stream, s. phr., the main ocean (Latin altum), 244 (10)
- mids, middes, s., midst, 97 (25), 133 (35)
- million, many a, s. phr., a very large number, 47 (16) n. (Cf. Chaucer, The Sumner's Prologue, line 21, "many a millioun.")
- Milman, H. H., 156
- Milton, John, 154, 302; blank-verse earlier than, 45
- mind ('mynde'), v., remember, 125 (8); think of (Latin cogitare), 95 (16), 100 (25)
- mindful, adj., 109 (36)
- Minerva ('Minerue'), goddess, 80 (2), 101 (25), 103 (19), 112 (21), 116 (43) n.; wisdom, 193 (38). See Pallas
- ming, v., call to mind, mention (Latin narrare), 96 (34); meng, produce (honey) by mixing, 4 (36)
- Minos, 153 (36)
- Mirror for Magistrates*, The, 181, 314; Sackville's "Induction" to, 242
- mirth, a poem in praise of, 99 (21)
- mischanced, pp., made unfortunate, 35 (15) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- misease, s., lack of ease, 31 (13), 88 (40)
- misfall me, it, impers. v., (if) misfortune happen to me, 203 (24)
- misseek ('misseke'), v., seek wrongly, 84 (39)
- mistress ('maistres,' 'maistresse'), s., 47 (22), 52 (14), 192 (11), 193 (23), 253 (12)
- Mnemosyne's daughters, the Muses, 100 (26). See Remembrance
- mo, moe, adv., more, 2 (18), 19 (38), 25 (36), 48 (39), 89 (22), 102 (5), 105 (10), 108 (28), 124 (9, 10, 37), etc.
- moan ('mone'), v., 176 (18, 21), 177 (37)
- Modern Language Association of America, Publications, 78 n., 87 n.2, 103 n.1
- Modern Language Notes*, 103 n.1, 109 n.3, 152, 223, 230 f., 234, 240, 323
- Modern Language Quarterly*, The, 150, 197
- Modern Language Review*, The, 79 n.2, 88 n.3, 197, 237

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Modern Philology*, 87 n.5, 103 n.1, 239
 moist and washeth, 38 (33) n.
 mold, s., the earth, 107 (26), 111 (9)
 Momus, son of Night, critic of the gods, 170 (20)
 mone: see moan, moon Moneta, goddess, 228
 moneth, s., month, 114 (31)
 Montreuil ('Monstreuell,' 'Mustrell,' 'Moultrill,' 'Mounstrel,' 'Muttrel'), France, 108 (14) n.
 Monzon ('Mountzon'), Spain, Wyatt's reference to, 81 (25), 212 mood, s., mind, 113 (3) moon ('mone'), s., 63 (7), 81 (32), 175 (14), 197 (17)
 moorn: see mourn
 "moralizations" of the miscellany poems, 109 f., 142, 189, 260, 283, 313. See ballads
 More, Thomas, Sir, 5; a miscellany poem attributed to, 150 (8) n.
 more readier, adv., 156 (18) n.
 more sharper, adv., 74 (16)
 Morgan, Pierpont, library, its copy of F, 30, of H, 33
 Morley, Baron: see Parker (Henry) mother-place, s., ?birthplace, 90 (25) (not in the N. E. D.) Motteux, Peter, 316
 mought, v., might, 12 (5), 45 (8), 47 (7), 66 (9), 72 (27), 94 (25), 149 (37), 230 (7). See mught
 Moultrill, Mounstrel: see Montreuil
 Mountzon: see Monzon mourn ('moorn'), v., 49 (4, 9), 70 (39), 108 (23)
 mouse, the town and the country, fable of, 213 f.
 mouths, s., 243 (29) n.
 move, v., mention, 34 (3)
 moving ('mouyng'), adj., fickle, 243 (15) muck, s., 26 (28), 172 (3), 196 (35)
 mught, v., might, 171 (15). See mought mule, s., old wife, 89 (30) n.
 Mullach, F. W. A., 229 f.
 Munday, Anthony, 101, 266, 277
 Muret, Marc-Antoine, poem by, translated by Grimald, 104 (2) n.
 Murray, David (D. M.), Sir, imitation by, of a miscellany poem, 266 Muses, the nine, 87 (41), 93 (17), 97 (6), 100 (21, 26), 101 (6), 107 (15), 112 (17, 25), 117 (7), 120 (6) n., 162 (32); poem on, 97 (4) n.
 music for the miscellany poems, 106 f., 259, 278, 285, 305, 313
 Musonius Rufus, his sayings, poem on, 97 (29) n.
 Musselburgh, Scotland, the battle of, 108 (15) n., 241
 Mustard, W. P., 223, 230 f., 240
 Mustrell: see Montreuil
 mutability, s., 78 (29)
 Muttrel: see Montreuil
 Mychel, J., printer, 220, 317
 N., A., 271
 N., N., manuscript poem in praise of, 137
N. E. D.: see New English Dictionary
 naamd: see named naamkouth: see namecouth Nagel, Heinrich, 37 n.1
 nall, a, s., an awl, 185 (38) namecouth ('naamkouth'), adj., famous, 99 (20) (the last example in the N. E. D.) named ('naamd'), v., called by name, 113 (7)
 Nandernoodt, J., 45
 Narcissus, 95 (10)
 narre, adv., never, 56 (16)
 Nashe, Thomas, on Geraldine, 71 f.
 natrelesse, adv., misprint in the original for nathelesse, 249 (17)
 Nauplius ('Naulus'), 168 (23) n.
 Navagero, Andrea, poem imitating, 93 (2) n.
 nay, adv., never, 224 (41)
 ne, adv. (negative), 22 (9), 26 (19, 24), 81 (22), 94 (6), 96 (11), etc.
 neare, adv., nearer, 147 (15); never, 180 (8). See nere neck, s., a move to cover check, 20 (23) (the first example in the N. E. D.) Nectanebus' ('Nectanabs') bastard, 116 (36) n. negligence, s., 32 (10)
 Neptune, 180 (9), 210 (23)
 nere, ner, adv., never, 56 (16), 96 (29), 160 (28); near, 141 (16), 189 (28). See neare Nero, 104 (30) n.
 Nestor, 109 (32), 201 (35) n., 202 (17), 254 (40) n.

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Neville, Alexander, 77 n.2, 144 f.
New English Dictionary, A (N. E. D.), 106, 259, 328 newelty, s., novelty, 171 (5)
 newfangledness, s., inconstancy, 39 (33), 171 (5)
 New-year's gifts, poems as, 101 (33), 103 (2, 9, 24)
 next, adv., nearest, 89 (43) n., 91 (38), 118 (13) Niccols, Richard, 93 n.
 nice, adj., scrupulous, 89 (41); misprint in the original for vice, 85 (41) n.
 Nichols, John, printer, and Percy's edition of the miscellany, 44 ff.
 Nichols, John Bowyer, 28 n.2, 38 n.3, 44 n.2, 46 n.1, 189
 Nicolas, N. H., Sir, 58, 66, 159, 247; edition by, of Wyatt and Surrey, 54; on Nott and Geraldine, 74
 niggard, s., 172 (6)
 nigher ('nier'), adv., 23 (9)
 nightingale, s., 4 (28)
 night-tide ('nightyde'), s., night-time, 95 (26)
 nill, neg. v., will not, 100 (37), 103 (12), 222 (38)
 Nilus, River Nile, 254 (40) n.
 Nisus: see Euryalus noise ('noyce,' 'noyes'), s., 115 (13), 187 (9); music (song), 191 (12)
 noisome ('noysom'), adj., 119 (21)
 none, adj., no, 33 (24), 36 (17), 49 (32), 69 (25), 90 (38), 220 (9); none other, nothing else, 18 (25) nones (nonce), for the, 88 (20), 161 (36), 175 (7) noombers: see numbers noorsse: see nurse
 noppo (nappy), adj., foaming, heady, 88 (20)
 Norfolk, Duke of: see Howard norsse: see nurse
 North, Thomas, Sir, 5, 244, 273
 Northampton, Marquis of: see Parr Norton, Thomas, contributor to the miscellany, 81, 84 f., 120, 255, 309, 315, 325 not, neg. v., know not, 33 (32), 34 (18)
Notes and Queries, 58, 78 n., 86 n.2, 92 n.1, 133, 224, 233, 306, 308 nother, pron., neither, 46 (15), 98 (27); other, 69 (25) nothing, adv., not at all, 3 (33), 78 (8), 150 (22), 174 (26), etc.
 Nott, G. F., 26, 32, 36, 41, 55, 58, 63 n.1, 66, 89, 112 n.4, 119 n.1, 131 f., 136 f., 141, 144 ff., 148, 152 ff., 159, 171 f., 174, 176, 181, 185, 187, 189 ff., 193 f., 196 ff., 201, 206 f., 210, 212, 214, 218 f., 221, 228, 237, 241, 247, 259, 262, 268, 312 ff., 316, 321 f., 329; edition by, of the miscellany, 47-52, 89, of Surrey and Wyatt, 52 f., Edinburgh Review on, 66; Harington, on, as editor of the miscellany, 89 ff.; Nicolas on the editing of, 54; obsession of, for Fair Geraldine, 48, 73 f.
 Nott, John, an edition of the miscellany wrongly attributed to, 49 f., 51 n.5, 63 n.1
 noy, v., annoy, 46 (34)
 noyce, noyes: see noise Nugae Antiquae (ed. Henry Harington), 81, 89, 143, 189, 258 f., 262, 277, 294; discussion of, 90 ff.
 numbers ('noombers'), s., verses, 103 (17) nurse ('noorsse,' 'norsse'), s., 109 (16), 111 (32) n.
 nurture, s., 47 (12) n.
 nymph, s., maiden, 100 (22); the nymphs, 95 (16), 100 (5), 101 (18) object, pp., situated opposite to, 90 (35) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
 observance, do, to May, 35 (9) n.
 Ockham, Agnes, 308
 Oedipus ('Edipus'), 99 (5) n.
 of, prep., because of, 50 (18); by, 32 (22), 116 (29), 241 (8); concerning, 86 (4); for, 6 (13), 186 (8); from, 58 (6), 97 (23); in, 221 (26); off, 3 (23), 6 (43), 16 (6), 56 (27), 68 (33), 119 (40, 43), 140 (41), 165 (37), 189 (17), 210 (21), 231 (23); with, 13 (22)
 often, adj., frequent, 132 (15)
 Oldham, John, 201
 olds, s., wolds, woods (Latin silvae), 94 (4) Olympias, mother of Alexander, 252 on, pron., one, 23 (28), 33 (30), 164 (32), 188 (26) on live, prep. phr., in life, alive, 250 (34)
 one, indef. art., an, 259 (2)
 one self, pron., the same (Latin idem), 244 (23)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- ones, adv., once, 3 (8), 17 (15, 19), 18 (26), 34 (24), 198 (31), 226 (27), 248 (19, 31)
onlesse (unless), conj., 119 (24) or, adv., conj., ere, 93 (11), 128 (37), 144 (25), 162 (7), 167 (32), 186 (31), 246 (34), 249 (12); or . . . or, 94 (9), 165 (15) orators, s., petitioners, 189 (4) orderly, adv., in regular succession, 220 (35) order's comely rate, by, 102 (23) n.
Oreads, the, mountain nymphs, 100 (5)
Orestes, 106 (37)
orient, adj., glowing, ruddy, 145 (16) Ormonde, Countess of: see Fitzgerald (Joan) oste, s., host, 229 (27)
other, pron., others, 79 (4, 10, 16, 20, 22, 28), 159 (16), 206 (32); other some, some others, 208 (21) otherwise, adv., elsewhere, 192 (20) ought, s., auht, any part, 75 (3), 123 (2), 248 (15), etc.
ought, v., owed, 256 (34); owned, 124 (11)
out, interj., 107 (11)
outcry, the: see ecphonesis outgate, s., egress, 93 (35) outshit ('outshyt'), v., shut out, 36 (9). See shit overblown, v., blown away, 30 (20) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1596) overfervent, adj., 114 (9) overfierce ('ouerferse'), adj., 104 (32)
overgo, v., overtake, 187 (32); surpass, 100 (18) n.
overmeek, adj., 104 (32)
overpass, v., pass, 112 (6) overreacher, the, example of, 173 (23-28) n.
overrun, pp., killed, 14 (28) overthwart, adj., contrarious, adverse, 44 (19), 49 (8), 244 (30) overthwarts, s., rebuffs, adversity, 26 (33) (the first example in the N. E. D.) overweighed ('ouerwayd'), pp., weighed down with, 242 (33)
Ovid, 80, 132, 143, 195, 301, 325, 328; his Art of Love, 188 (32); poems imitated or translated from, 158 (32) n., 203 (2) n., 219 (6) n.
Oxathres ('Oxate'), 115 (26) n.
Oxford, 112 (29) n.; Earl of: see Vere Oxford Book of English Verse, The, 123 patient: see patient
pack, truss up thy, v. phr., pack up your wares (like a pedler), 30 (15)
Padelford, F. M., 37 n.2, 52, 68 n.1, 88 n.3, 92 n.2, 129-159 passim, 277, 299, 310-313, 322; edition by, of Surrey, 62 ff., collations with, 128; Geraldine, on, 75; manuscripts of Surrey, on the, 96 f.; John and G. F. Nott, on, 49 f., 51 n.5; reprints by, of the miscellany poems, 123; Wyatt's sonnets, on, 103 n.1
Page, Samuel, 195
pageant, s., part played by one in the drama of life, 197 (37) page-proofs, the miscellany set directly into, 19 paint ('paynt'), v., create, 20 (3); describe, 27 (13), 97 (8), 101 (29), 120 (2), etc.; flatter, 86 (13); paint colors, deceive, 5 (29); paint the mold, adorn the earth, 107 (26)
painted, pp., revealed, 141 (9); painted thoughts, ?thoughts revealed by blushes, 6 (21)
Painter, William, 5
Palamades and Nauplius, 287
pale, s., rail-fence, 4 (31)
palindrome, a, examples of, 314 f.
Pallas, 93 (14), 101 (5), 257 (35). See Minerva palm, reaped the, v. phr., gained the victory, 180 (7)
Palmer, G. H., his copy of E, 27 f.
Palmer, Mary, 277
palm-play, s., a game resembling tennis, played with palms of the hands instead of racquets, 13 (9) (the first example in the N. E. D.) pamphlets, s., 224 (4) n.
Pan, 86 (28)
Pandar, 89 (40) n.
Pandulpho (Pandolfo Collinutio or Col-lenuccio), epigram translated from, 79 (38) n.
Papini, Pietro, 136, 172, 175 paradise, 38 (35)
Paradise of Dainty Devices, The, by Richard Edwards (q. v.) and others (ed. Rollins, q. v.), 4 n., 81, 92 f., 105 f., 120, 128, 132, 135, 144, 165, 168, 187, 207, 218, 221, 270 f., 286, 293, 296 f.,

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- 305, 308, 324, 328; borrowings by, from the miscellany, 108 f., 257 ff., 267, 289 paragon ('parragon,' 'peragon'), s., 160 (15), 170 (4), 172 (21), 200 (7) paramour, s., sweetheart, 133 (3) paraventure, adv., peradventure, 46 (34) parceive, v., perceive, 207 (22) parcel, s., a small piece, a bit, 2 (4), 4 (18)
 pardie, pardy, interj., 30 (29), 132 (27), 172 (39). See perdie parentheses used for quotation-marks, 324 parfit, parfite: see perfit
 Paris of Troy, 179 (24), 202 (4, 22, 27), 219 (13), 231 (26), 254 (26), 257 (10) n.
 Park, Thomas, 36, 46, 58, 73 n.1, 82 n., 122 n.7, 283; manuscript notes by, in copies of K, 41 f., in Percy's edition, 44 f.; Nugae Antiquae, changes in his edition of, 91
 Parker, Henry, eighth Baron Morley, 245
 Parker, Martin, 190
 Parnassus ('pernassee'), s., fig. for Cambridge, 112 (27)
 Parr, Anne, Countess of Pembroke, elegy on, 194 (15) n.
 Parr, Catherine: see Catherine Parr, William, first Marquis of Northampton, 90
 parragon: see paragon
 Parry, J. J., 152
 Parry, Robert, 259
 parsever: see persevere
 Parsons (alias Dolman), Robert, Jesuit, 256 part, s., melody, 233 (33)
 Parturier, Eugène, 181, 209 pass, v., put to shame, surpass, 86 (29), 93 (6), 115 (13), 170 (5), 218 (6); bring to pass, 230 (15) past not, neg. v., didn't care or mind, 23 (35), 128 (23) pastoral, a, in the miscellany, 104, 265
pastourelle, a, 144 patient ('pacient'), adj., persistent, 149 (18) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1590) Patroclus, 106 (35) n.
 Paul, St., 125 (20)
 pay, s., reward, 194 (19); satisfaction, liking, 95 (21)
 payzed: see peised pear, v., appear, 94 (28)
 peares: see peers
 peas, pease, s., peace, 110 (31), 124 (7), 130 (2)
 peason, s., peas, 10 (5). See pese Peele, George, 45, 278
 peep ('pepe'), v., make a sound, 233 (33) peers ('peares,' 'peres'), s., 100 (11), 114 (35) peevish ('peuishe'), adj., foolish, 192 (38)
 peised ('payzd,' 'payzed'), pp., weighed, deliberated, 102 (19), 105 (3) Peitho ('Pitho'), goddess of persuasion, 120 (8) n.
 pellets, s., bullets, 164 (16)
 pelow: see pillow
 Pembroke, Earl of: see Herbert (William), Parr (Anne)
 Penbroke (Pembroke): see Parr (Anne)
 Penelope, 19 (35), 156 (9), 230 (26); epistle of, to Ulysses (q. v.), a poem, 219 (6) n.
 people-pestered, adj., 94 (2)
 pepe: see peep
 peragon: see paragon
 Percy, Thomas, Bishop, 28 n.2, 38 n.3, 92, 94, 189; reprints by, from the miscellany, 122, 265, 283, 286; unpublished edition by, of the miscellany, 44 ff., 57 f., 90 n.1, 318
 Percy, Thomas, the younger, 46
 Percy Society, 181, 283
 perdie ('perdy,' 'perdee'), interj., 49 (10), 58 (27), 64 (33), 118 (14), etc. See pardie
 peres: see peers
 perfit ('pfit,' 'parfit,' 'parfite'), adj., perfect, 20 (2), 27 (15), 37 (2), 52 (10), 69 (6), 102 (26), 126 (4), 132 (28), 169 (31), 170 (17), 172 (5), 174 (34)
 perfitly, adv., 49 (12)
 perfitness ('parfitness'), s., perfection, 121 (17), 126 (7) Periothous: see Pirithous pernassee: see Parnassus persaunt, adj., perceant, piercing, 5 (15) Perses, Persians, 115 (20, 30) persevere ('parseuer'), v., 69 (7), 198 (28)
 Persia, 27 (7)
 Persians, Alexander's fight with the, 115 (11, 18), 117 (36)
 Persius, 214

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- pervart, v., pervert, 160 (12)
 pese, s., pease, one pea, 24 (8). See peason Petowe, Henry, borrowings of, from the miscellany, 112 ff.
 Petrarch, poems in praise of, 169 (21), 170 (5); edition of, used, 128; mentioned, 70, 72, 76, 83, 101, 103, 105, 108, 245; imitations or translations from, 129 ff., 132, 135, 137 ff., 140 f., 143, 145, 149, 154, 160 ff., 164-170, 175, 178 ff., 182, 185, 188, 191 ff., 195 ff., 198 f., 201 f., 204-207, 211 f., 268 f., 295 f., 297 f., 309 f., 313 f., 319 f., 328
 Pettie, George, borrowing by, from the miscellany, 317
 pevishe: see peevish
 Pforzheimer, C. H., his copy of C, 12, of I, 35
 Phaeton, son of Apollo, 104 (25) phantom ('fantome'), s., dream, 48 (3)
 Pharaoh, 229 (19)
 Phebe, Phebus: see Phoebe, Phoebus
 phenix: see phoenix
 Philip II, king of Macedonia, 252
 Philip II, king of Spain and England, 302, 305, 322
 Phillida: see Phyllida
 Phillips, a musician, elegy on, 162 (26) n.
 Phillis, Wyatt's poem to, 35 (20), 164. See Phyllis Phillis and Flora, 4 n.
Philological Quarterly, The, 317
 phisike: see physic
 Phoebe ('Phebe'), 93 (23), 191 (10). See Diana Phoebus ('Phebus'), 26 (36), 72 (31), 97 (25), 101 (35), 112 (22), 119 (14), 120 (4), 151 (22) n., 168 (36), 191 (10), 204 (17), 244 (27), 253 (16 n., 26 ff.), 257 (17); Phoebus' fowl, the raven, 119 (14); Phoebus' spear, sunbeams, 72 (31). See Apollo phoenix ('phenix'), the, 148 (32), 156 (5), 203 (31) n., 250 (31)
Phoenix Nest, The, 105 f., 109, 128, 135, 139 f., 147, 157, 298, 305, 324 phrenzy (frenzy), s., 117 (14)
 Phrygian, 111 (33)
 Phyllida ('Phillida') and Harpalus, a pastoral poem, 132 (33) n.
 Phyllis: see Demophoön, Phillis physic ('phisike'), s., medicine, 246 (20, 32)
 pick ('pike,' 'pyke'), v., 89 (21), 196 (24)
 Pick, Samuel, 271
 pickax ('pikeax'), s., 166 (8)
 pie ('pye'), s., 200 (29) n., 239 (23)
 Pieris, one of the nine Pierides, who being defeated in a contest with the Muses were transformed into birds, 100 (3) n.
 pight, pp., pitched, placed, 111 (37), 204 (3), 242 (37)
 Pygmalion: see Pygmalion pike: see pick pikeax: see pickax Pilgrimage of Grace, the, 69 pillow ('pelow'), tells her tale to her, i. e., talks (of her lover) to herself when in bed, 225 (40)
 pine, s., torment, 162 (2) pine, v. t., inflict torment on, 75 (26)
 pineapple tree, translating Horace's pinus, a pine-tree, 244 (17)
 Pinkie, battle of, Wilford and, 241
 Pirithous ('Periothous'), and Theseus, 107 (2), 154 (3) pitfall ('pitfoll'), s., 149 (33)
 Pitho: see Peitho Pits, John, 119 n.1
 plage, s., net, snare, 22 (26) (the only example in the N. E. D. is dated 1608) plain ('playn'), v., lament, complain, 3 (36), 4 (16), 8 (35), 16 (5), 33 (17), 42 (15), 48 (5), 50 (38), 63 (7), 67 (16), 93 (29), etc.
 plainness ('playnesse'), s., honesty, 189 (29)
 Plato, 69 (5), 209
 Plautus, 109 (37)
 play, make you, v. phr., make sport for you, be jested at, 255 (13)
 playnesse: see plainness pleasans, s., pleasance, pleasure, 107 (21) pleasurable, adj., 100 (32) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1579) plight, s., healthy condition, 102 (26), 165 (32); situation, 185 (9)
 Pliny the elder, 288, 313, 325
 Pliny the younger, 232
 Plomer, H. R., 5 n.
 plump, on a, prep. phr., in a band or troop (Latin agmen), 115 (26)
 plunge, be put unto his, v. phr., fall into danger or distress, 130 (29)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Plutarch, 153, 165, 244, 273, 324 f.
 Pluto, 95 (15), 131 (18)
Poetical Rhapsody, A, edited by Francis Davison, 50, 57 n., 109, 165, 190
 Poins: see Poyntz
 pointel ('poyntel'), s., pencil, 99 (13)
 polisindeton: see polysyndeton
 Poliziano, Angelo, 315
 Pollard, A. F., 277
 Pollux: see Castor
Polychronicon, by Ranulf Higden (the reference is to book III, chapter xli), 165
 Polyhymnia ('Polymnie'), 97 (19)
 polysyndeton ('polisindeton'), or the couple-clause, examples of, 321 Pompey, 36 (6), 165, 218, 236 f.; Pompeius, Pompey's, 27 (26) n.
 ponder, v., weigh (on scales), 6 (9)
 poore (pour), v., 226 (19)
 Pope, the (Clement VII), 75
 Pope, Alexander, his praise of Surrey, 38 f., 121 f.; on Geraldine, 72
 Popilius ('Popilius') Laenas, Gaius, 118 (39) n., 120 (14)
 Posidippus, epigram by, 237
 Posidonius, poem said to be translated from, 105 (12) n.
 post, s., post-rider, 209 (21)
 poudred: see powdered pound, s., enclosure for strayed cattle, 255 (21) powdered ('poudred'), pp., sprinkled, 25 (38), 162 (21)
 Powell, Edgar, 305
 power, adj., poor, 84 (16) n.
 powr, s., power, 101 (3), 102 (4), 104 (27), 106 (13)
 powr, v., pour, 88 (5)
 poyntel: see pointel
 Poyntz, Anthony, Sir, and Sir Francis, 214
 Poyntz ('Poins'), John, poems addressed to, 82 (21) n., 85 (19) pragmatographia, or the counterfeit action, example of, 163 (37) n.
Praise of Geraldine, The, 42 f.
 pray (prey), s., 5 (11), 41 (7), 159 (11), 188 (35), 203 (13) n., 208 (25 n., 37), 209 (4), 220 (12); in pray, as a prey, 87 (37)
 pray (prey), v., 208 (6)
 prease, prese: see press
 preface, Tottel's, to the miscellany, imitated, 4 n.
 present, adv., instantly, 119 (5)
 press ('prease,' 'prese'), s., crowd, 81 (12), 85 (23), 185 (28), 192 (27), 193 (13) press ('prease'), v., hasten, 31 (14), 32 (7), 116 (27), 188 (35)
 prest, adj., adv., at hand, 11 (18), 131 (36), 148 (8), 149 (3); quickly, 100 (36); ready, 45 (23), 125 (23), 134 (43), 135 (38), 164 (16)
 prest, pp., oppressed, 248 (19, 23)
 Preston, a miscellany poem signed, 146 presumptuous, adj., 119 (40) pretence, s., claim to authority, 8 (9) pretend, v., indicate, 254 (37); intend, 37 (7) prey-seeker, s., robber, 94 (17)
 Priam ('Pryam'), 12 (35), 17 (28) n., 18 (12), 184 (20), 219 (12), 254 (20), 257 (10) n.; allusion to, 228 (4 f.)
 price, s., 48 (21) n.; in price, in esteem, 104 (10), 219 (35), 246 (5); at price for, ready to bargain, 255 (33)
 Price, John, 28 n.2, 38 n.3
 pricely, adj., choice, 101 (16)
 prick, s., dart, 255 (3) prick and prune, v. phr., dress the feathers with the beak, 154 (31) prime, adj., early, youthful, 114 (34) primetide, s., the spring, 112 (2), 116 (10) process, by, prep. phr., in the course of time, slowly, 58 (3)
 Procris ('Procryon'), 203 (2) n.
 Proctor, Thomas, 321 procure, v., cause, bring about, 118 (4), 195 (35), 210 (3) profet, s., profit, 212 (34) n.
 proffering, vbl. n., making a (lover's) proposal, 212 (2)
 prolling, s., prowling, 196 (24)
 Prometheus, 93 (29) n., 131 (24) pronouncing proves (proofs), i. e., giving evidence of, 242 (28) proper, adj., own, 63 (36) n.
 Propertius, Sextus, 140, 287 property ('propartie'), s., 69 (13) Proserpine, 95 (14) n.
 prospect, s., sight, 155 (12)
 prosper, v., cause to be prosperous, 102 (4) proufe, s., proof, 66 (12)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

prove, v., find to be true through trial, 55 (21), 79 (12), 123 (38), 197 (26); make trial of, 138 (3), 217 (27); prosper, 170 (25)

proverbs, proverbial phrases, common-places: absence works wonders, 224 (26); amantium irae amoris, etc., 181 (18) n.; ant, the, works in summer to prepare for winter, 132 (23 f.) n.; bag and baggage, with, 165 (2); bark and rind, 70 (37), 154 (21) n.; bavin blaze, a, soon dies, 237 (10) n.; bit, to strive against the, 48 (5) n.; bite upon the bridle, let the old mule, 89 (30) n.; blind, the, the dial doesn't help, 148 (20); blind, the, fears what footing he'll find, 130 (26); blind, the, where leads, comes a fall, 233 (28); bonum est mihi quod humiliasti me, 30 (18) n.; boughs, to climb rotten, 69 (16), 131 (8), 205 (18); burn away from the fire, to freeze near it, to, 68 (33) n.; Caesar's tears over Pompey's head, 165; candle, to compare a, with the sun, 20 (17); change a falcon for a kite, to, 24 (4 f.) n.; chastisement, let others', be thy scourge, 31 (3) n.; chip of chance (fortune), to weigh, more than a pound of wit, 87 (19); clog, a, hangs at my heel, 87 (26) n., 139 (4); cock and pie, by, 200 (29) n.; cold as a stone, 222 (40); constant dripping wears away a stone, 55 (9 ff.), 218 (33 ff.); crocodile tears, 205 (7 f.); crop and root, 40 (34); deaf, who speaks to the, wastes his words, 146 (29); death's door, to bring one to, 99 (30); deer, the stricken, withdraws himself alone, 209 (35-36) n.; defense, none needed, against chained prisoners, 60 (32); dog, beat the, before the lion, 6 (41) n.; dog unto the bow, as a, 188 (24) n.; dolphin, to teach the, to swim, 124 (13); drink, to, one's own disease, 140 (30) n.; eel's tail, slippery as an, 10 (6); eyes, to make one's, fountains, 184 (13) n.; falcon, to teach the, to fly, 124 (14); flood, the highest, has the lowest ebb, 197 (36) n.; flower of the frying-pan, 96 (7) n.; foelix quem faciunt aliena pericula cautum, 159; fool, a, has two tongues and one ear, 235 (7), 324 f.; fool to bed, bring a, 255 (38) n.; gape

while others eat the fruit, 162 (13); gods, the, love drives, to take many shapes, 229 (31) n., 298; gold, every glistering doesn't give (show), 204 (36); grapes on brambles or briers, seek for, 84 (34); great rest stands in little business, 185 (37) n.; had I wist, 232 (39) n.; hammers beat in one's brains, 28 (8) n.; happy end, a, exceedeth all, 169 (12); harp, like an ass to the sound of a, 88 (25) n.; haste is waste, 27 (3); hawk, the, that now comes to the fist may check, 229 (30); he who winks isn't blind, 56 (6 f.); head, the, of Cupid's dart remains behind when the dart is plucked from one's breast, 139 (22) n.; highest tree (hall, house, etc.) have the quickest falls, are soonest struck by lightning, etc., 150 (35 ff.); honey, they eat the, I hold the hive, 59 (21, 31) n.; lamb, a, in town, a lion in the field, 160 (8) n.; like will to like, quoth the devil to the collier, 50 (13) n.; lion, a, attacks no yielding prey, 60 (33) n., 208 (25 n., 32 f.); lion, a, is chastised by beating the whelp, 6 (41) n.; longer, the, I watch, the worse I speed, 59 (21); look before you light or leap, 205 (19), 255 (28, 32); madman, a, isn't fit to guide a naked sword, 256 (22); match a candle with the sun, to, 20 (17); mould, Nature loses her, despairing of equaling one of her men or women, 19 (41 ff.), 28 (34) n., 126 (23), 155 (38); of two evils choose the least, 213 (28) n.; pale as a clout, 222 (36); pleasure, every, has some pain, 211 (13); plow in the water, sow in the sand, 69 (32) n.; plow, to, a barren field is madness, 131 (3); plows for gain, the poor man, 149 (14) n.; poison is put into medicine, 211 (17) n.; reap, to, and others take the sheaves, 134 (17); remember the end, 234 (11); rolling stone, a, gathers no moss, 88 (7 f.); row, to, beyond one's reach, 124 (15); salve the sore, to, 128 (41) n.; say-well and do-well are two things, 235 (24); scar remains, the, 70 (15) n.; seed, from good, comes ill fruit, 47 (32) n.; serpent, a, lurks under the green, 6 (24), 190 (38) n.; short horns to hurtful heads, 256 (19); sow seed and others

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- reap, 59 (30), or reap no corn, 251 (22); sparks, the smallest, make the greatest flames, 187 (26 f.) n.; speak and speed, 212 (5); spending hand, a, needs a bringer-in, 88 (5 f.); spiders get poison, bees honey, from the same flower, 63 (22-25) n.; spurn (kick) against an awl, 185 (38); stars, a sign to the mariners of calm, 175 (16 f.) n.; still man, the, oft hath wrong, 186 (38); stir, to, an oar in every man's boat, 198 (3); stream, to try to turn the, 8 (5); strive against the stream, 129 (32), 233 (9); that that shall be must be, 141 (19) n.; tiger, nursed by a, bred among rocks, 78 (16) n.; time, there's a, for each thing, 160 (23); time tries truth, 159 (32), 160 (22) n.; totus mundus in maligno positus, 232 (18) n.; truss up thy pack, 30 (15); water in a sieve, like, 90 (14); wealth brings friends, 245 (30); weeds grow where good herbs can't, 233 (5); well to wish and well to have, 124 (17); whale's bone, white as, 207 (22); wit bought (by experience) is dear, 234 (12) n.; wolf, to hold a, by the ears, 148 (25) n.; words, few, show wisdom, 234 (24) n. See also 130 (22) n., 256 (2) n.
- proyne, v., prune, preen, 154 (31)
- Pryam: see Priam
- Psalms, the, 158; Wyatt's metrical version of, 76, 90, 95
- psaltery ('sawtre'), s., 188 (7)
- Ptolemaic system of astronomy, Wyatt and the, 222
- Ptolemy XII and Pompey, 165
- purchase, v., try to bring about or secure, 27 (12)
- purpose, as to, i. e., in conversation, 83 (38)
- purpurde, pp., empurpled (with blood), 115 (19)
- pursuit ('pursute'), s., course of life, 106 (15)
- Puttenham (?), Richard, alleged author of The Art (q. v.) of English Poesie
- pye: see pie
- Pygmalion ('Pigmalion') and Galatea, a poem on, 125 (26) n.
- pyke: see pick
- Pylades and Orestes, 106 (37)
- Pynson, Richard, printer, 296
- Pyramus and Thisbe, 27 (36)
- Pyrenees mountains, Spain, 44 (30) n.
- Pythias, 106 (34)
- Python, the serpent, 253 (16) n.
- quadrate, adj., 116 (12) n.
- quail, v., die, 93 (30); quell, 7 (15)
- Quaritch, Ltd., Bernard, 25, 28 n.1, 31
- Quarles, Francis, 323
- queint, inf., be quenched, 250 (7)
- quent, pp., qucnched, 52 (20)
- quest, s., inquest, trial, 204 (15)
- question, s., 48 (27) n.
- quick, adj., animated, 99 (27); alive, 28 (3), 218 (25)
- quick, s., the living, 130 (9), 207 (6)
- quickness ('quicnesse'), s., life, 99 (24)
- quishes, s., cuisse, thigh-armor, 117 (20)
- quit, v., get rid of, 36 (12), 56 (11)
- quite, adv., completely, 177 (28)
- quite, v., quit, rid of, 60 (15); took away, 178 (17)
- quod, v., quoth, 7 (20), 8 (8), 16 (22), 17 (9), 48 (19, 21, 27), 83 (8, 32 f., 35), etc.
- R., a slanderer, 190 (25) n.
- R. so depe can auoyde, 191 (7) n., 20
- raarnesse: see rareness
- race, s., course of life, 28 (33), 31 (18), 105 (26), 106 (6), 147 (8), etc.; family, 9 (19), 207 (17), 208 (4, 11); outrun the race, finished one's life, 102 (36)
- race, v., erase, 70 (15), 257 (38); raze, 202 (28)
- Rachel, wife of Jacob, 66 (2)
- rack, s., storm, 151 (21) n. (the last example in the N. E. D. is dated 1513)
- Radcliffe, Thomas, third Earl of Sussex, 159
- ragged, adj., jagged (hills), 73 (35)
- raign: see reign
- railed ('reyled'), v., gushed, 117 (21)
- rain ('rayne'), croak against the, 191 (9)
- raine: see reign, reins
- raised ('raysde'), v., sighted, 155 (10)
- Rajna, Pio, 136
- akehell, adj., akehell, dissolute, 11 (5) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- Raleigh, Walter, Sir, 85, 156 f., 305
- ramp, s., vulgar woman, 201 (28)
- rampire, s., 164 (19) n.
- Randolph, Thomas, 152

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- ranged in array, v. phr., drawn up in military formation, 152 (32)
- rare ('rere'), adj., fine, excellent (ironical), 247 (14)
- rareness ('raarnesse'), s., rarity, 103 (22)
- rased ('rasde'), v., razed, cut, 154 (21) n.
- rash, adv., 135 (24)
- rashly, adv., rapidly, 17 (3) (The first example in the N. E. D., where the second is dated 1691. Cf. Richard Robinson, A Golden Mirrour, 1589 [ed. Thomas Corser, p. 37, Chetham Society, 1851]: "Thus rashly rushing vp for feare, from thence my way did take," "Thus runningg [sic] rashly in this race.")
- Ratclif, Surrey's poem to, 31 (2) n.
- Ratcliffe, Humphrey, Sir, 159
- rate, s., manner of action, 102 (23)
- rate, v., conceive of, 111 (3)
- rathe, all to, adv. phr., too quickly, 58 (31) (the last example in the N. E. D.)
- raught, v., clutched, 17 (38); snatched away, 154 (18)
- Rawlinson, Richard, his copy of E, 28 n. 1
- ray, s., glance of the eye, 206 (20)
- rayd, pp., arrayed, dressed, 104 (11)
- rayghne: see reign
- Raynald, Thomas, printer, 90
- rayne: see rain
- rayns: see reins
- readier ('redier'), adv., more readily, 156 (18) n.
- rear ('rere'), v., raise, cause, 240 (10)
- reason, s., speech, statement, 226 (24)
- Reason and Love, a poem, 45 (2), 179
- reason-rend, the: see etiologia
- rebated, v., abated, 119 (34)
- rebel, s., rebellion, 8 (19)
- rechless: see retchless
- recount, v., draw, get (Latin traho), 114 (2)
- recourse, s., recurrence, 103 (8); return, 240 (2)
- rect, adj., straight, erect, 149 (24) (the only example in the N. E. D.)
- recure, s., healing, 163 (11), 186 (14); help, 147 (4); remedy, 78 (16)
- recure, v., be cured, 31 (6); cure, 43 (32), 131 (10), 159 (14), 174 (29)
- rede, v., advise, 20 (29), 185 (33)
- redier: see readier
- redress, s., aid, remedy, 17 (3), 42 (26), 52 (13), 134 (16), 246 (38), etc.
- redress, v., relieve, 44 (14); set right, 65 (37), 185 (35)
- reduceth, v., leads back, 3 (19)
- Reed, A. W., 86 n.2, 227
- referred ('refarde'), pp., conveyed back, 210 (36) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- reflexion, s., echo of the voice, 42 (16)
- refrain ('refrayne'), v., hold back, 44 (25), 248 (7)
- refrains omitted by the "editor," 95
- reft, v., deprived of, 28 (16), 239 (18, 21); snatched away, 41 (12)
- refuse, s., refusal, objection to, 208 (39)
- rehearse ('reherse'), v., utter, 118 (19), 193 (29)
- reign ('raine,' 'raign,' 'rayghne'), s., v., 84 (17), 87 (15), 97 (16), 251 (12), 258 (12); kingdom, empire (Italian imperio), 36 (10)
- reined, v., guided, governed, 32 (11)
- reins ('raines,' 'rayns'), s., 119 (12), 186 (24)
- reject, pp., rejected, 8 (3)
- release ('relesse'), s., 243 (27, 31, 35), 244 (3, 7)
- relent, v., grow less, 58 (4); grow soft (yield), 75 (11); lessen, 70 (39)
- Remembrance, Queen, Mnemosyne (q. v.), 97 (5) n.
- remorce, v., show pity, 185 (11)
- remove, v., flee, 95 (6); make inconstant in love, 208 (14); move aside, 8 (38), 170 (27)
- Remus: see Romulus
- rendering, pres. p. adj., submissive, 126 (29)
- renk, s., rink, man, 97 (20), 117 (29)
- renowned, adj., renowned, 99 (9), 114 (4), 169 (7)
- rent, v., rend, 74 (8, 11), 164 (24); torn, 70 (36)
- repair ('repayre'), s., concourse of men to (Troy), 14 (30)
- repeat, v., rehearse (Latin meditari), 94 (5)
- repent, s., 235 (3)
- repose, v., place, 103 (18)
- reposed, pp., firmly fixed, 28 (26)
- represt, adj., downcast, 28 (29)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- repugnantly, repugnant, adj., opposite, 9 (12), 90 (24), 91 (9)
- require, v., ask (vengeance) for (Latin re-poscere), 119 (29); demand, 18 (25), 58 (20); entreat, 57 (23); make love-suit to, 96 (29)
- rere: see rare, rear
- resident, s., 146 (25) n.
- resolve, v., consider, 7 (38)
- resound, v., make sound out, 109 (24)
- rest, v., 244 (6) n.
- retchless ('rechlesse'), adj., heedless, 16 (26), 31 (2), 40 (30), 87 (12), 254 (18)
- retreat, v., carry away (Latin ferre), 94 (5)
- return, v., go away (disappear), 78 (11)
- returnable, adj., capable of being returned, 33 (14) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- revert, v., revert, change, 174 (5)
- reve, v., reave, deprive, 239 (28), 245 (3)
- reven, pp., ripen, torn asunder, 194 (23)
- revenger, adj., 117 (26)
- reverse, v., send back, 54 (30)
- revert, v., turn away (be revoked), 50 (4)
- revested, pp., re clothed, 10 (35)
- Review of English Studies, The*, 50 n.1, 51 n.4, 86 n.2, 278, 293
- Revue d' Histoire Littéraire, La*, 198
- reyled: see railed
- Reynolds, Henry, 82, 94 n.
- Riccoboni, Antonio, 229
- Rice ('Rise,' 'Ryce'), Mistress, poem in praise of, 192 (11) n.
- Rich, Barnabe, 4, 6, 45, 84 n.2, 181, 280
- Rich, Hugh, Sir, 245
- richesse, s., wealth, 26 (6), 171 (31)
- Richmond, Duchess of: see Howard (Mary); Duke of: see Fitzroy
- rid, v., free oneself, 74 (19), 147 (35); get rid of, 93 (28), 258 (11); kill, 16 (37); ride, 114 (12); take away, 10 (29), 16 (22), 136 (2)
- riddles, poems in the form of, 79 (38), 98 (30), 211 (23) n., 269
- Ridley, Nicholas, Bishop, 78, 87
- Riese, Alexander, 240
- rife ('ryfe'), adv., common, 108 (8), 191 (18), 206 (31); easily, or speedily, 102 (12); easy, 194 (28) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- rifest, adv., most frequently (the Latin has saepius), 150 (36), 244 (17)
- rift ('ryft'), take in a, v. phr., furl a rift (reef) or sail, 27 (3)
- right, adv., directly, 17 (43); exactly, 184 (7)
- right over, adv. phr., Latin oppositus, 115 (36)
- right so, adv., 103 (6)
- rightway, the gates of my, s. phr., the jaws (which are the "gates" of the passage that leads straight up from within the body), 30 (6) (not in the N. E. D.)
- rightwisely, adv., righteously, 67 (3)
- rigor, s., harsh dealing, cruelty, 104 (30)
- rind ('rynde'), s., 70 (37), 154 (21) n.
- riot ('ryot'), range at, v. phr., act without restraint, 171 (17)
- rise, v., raise, 241 (25)
- Rise: see Rice
- rive, v., split asunder, 26 (30)
- riveled ('riuel'd'), pp. adj., wrinkled, 89 (26)
- riveth, v., destroys, 210 (14)
- road ('rode'), s., harbor, 118 (25)
- roar ('rore'), s., confusion, 35 (29)
- roate, by, prep. phr., by rote or heart, 6 (26)
- Robarts, Henry, 156, 306
- Robinson, F. N., 151
- Robinson, Mrs. N. L., 31 n.2
- Robinson, Richard, 157, 301
- Robinson, Robert, printer, 6 f.
- Rochford, Viscount: see Boleyn
- rode: see road, rood
- Rogers, Samuel, 74 n.1
- roll, v., ponder over, think of, 210 (10)
- Rollins, H. E., 108 n.3, 110 n.1, 112 n.1, n. 3, 132, 142, 144, 259, 264 f., 276, 283, 285, 305, 313, 324; reprint of the miscellany by, editorial methods of the, 64 f. See also Gorgeous, Handful, Paradise
- Roman calendars, 111 (36)
- Roman Catholicism, the effect of, on the miscellany, 97, 308
- Rome ('Room'), 47 (9), 111 (23), 118 (19), 119 (2 n., 11, 19, 25, 29)
- Romulus and Remus, 244
- rondeaux, Wyatt's, edited into sonnets, 95, 103, 182 f., 202
- rones (runs), v., 248 (27). See roon
- Ronsard, Pierre de, 135, 298
- rood ('rode'), s., 83 (35)
- Room: see Rome

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- rooms ('roumes'), s., offices, appointments, 196 (18)
 roon (run), v., 119 (13), 152 (17), 228 (9).
See rones
 Rose, J., 44 n.2
 roseal ('rosiall'), adj., 156 (16)
 rosemary, s., 179 (2)
 Rosenbach, A. S. W., 10 n.3, 11 n.1-3, 25;
 his copy of C, 12, 271, of D, 21 ff., 31 n.2, of *D, 24 ff.
 rosiall: see roseal
 rote (root), s., 202 (7), 254 (36)
 rouses: see rooms rounds ('rowndes'), s., orbits, 92 (3) rout, s., band, crowd, 97 (20), 98 (36), 117
 (31), 118 (21, 34), 131 (18), etc.
 row, s., company, 25 (35); on row, in order, 125 (6)
 Rowfant library: see Locker-Lampson
 rowndes: see rounds
Roxburghe Ballads, The, 266
 Roxburghe Club, 79 n.4, 81 n.1, 256 f., 260, 283 f., 290, 302, 309, 313, 328
 rue on or upon, v., pity, 3 (4), 4 (21), 31 (12) rueful ('ruffull'), adj., 16 (27), 114 (18)
 ruff (rough), adj., 152 (2) ruing, pres. p., 244 (18) n.
 rule, s., disorder, 192 (31) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1567) Rump Despairing, The, 219 ruse, 208 (38) n.
 Russell, John, Sir, 75
 ruth, s., 13 (17), 34 (14), 208 (13), 240
 (12), 241 (34), 251 (12), etc.
 Rutton, W. L., 242, 245, 286
 Ryce: see Rice
 ryfe, ryft: see rife, rift
 Rylands, John, library, its copy of F, 30
 ryot: see riot

 S., D.: see Sand
 S., E., Lady, poem to, 103 (2) n.
 S., H. ("Henry Surrey"), poems signed, 322
 S., H., Mistress, poem to, 103 (24) n.
 S., I., Lady, poem to, 100 (2) n.
 S., K., Lady, poem to, 102 (31) n.
 S., M., Lady, poems to, 101 (33) n., 102
 (10) n.
 S., R., Phillis and Flora, 4 n.

 Sabie, Francis, 278
 Sackville, Thomas, Earl of Dorset, Baron
 Buckhurst, 81, 84 f., 110, 242, 314 sad, adj., sober, serious, 210 (19), 228
 (13) n.
 sadly, adj., soberly, 193 (15)
 safeguard, s., safety, 119 (9)
 Saint-Gelais, Mellin de, 171, 188, 197
 St. Leger (Sentleger), Anthony, Sir, 53, 66; contributor to the miscellany, 81, 85, 318
 St. Valentine's day and birds, 7 (33) n.
 salamander ('salamandra'), s., 168 (37) n.
 sallet (salad) herbs, 107 (19)
 Salomon (Solomon), King, 31 (6) n., 99
 (29) n., 160 (9)
 salveth, v., salutes, 19 (7)
 sample, s., example in action, 205 (21) sampler ('sampler'), s., 51 (2)
 sance, prep., sans, without, 99 (9)
 Sand, D. (D.S.), contributor to the miscellany, 81, 92, 258; imitation by, of the miscellany, 289
 Sanford, Ezekiel, edition by, of the miscellany poems, 53
 Sannazaro, Jacopo, translations from,
 197 f., 231
 sapience, s., 117 (36)
 Sardanapalus, poem on, 29 (2) n.
 Sargent, Epes, 74 n.1
 sat me on, it, impers. v., it was fitting for me, 16 (17). See sits satires, examples of, 82 (21)-90 (14), 104
 Saturn, the planet, 91 (22, 27)
 Saturnian, adj., baleful (like Saturn), 111
 (6) (the first example in the N. E. D.) savor, s., 252 (3)
 savry, adj., savory, 87 (30)
 saws, s., lines, sayings, 100 (13); stories, 111 (22); wise comments, 152 (36);
words, 117 (17)
 sawtre: see psaltery
 'sayed ('said'), pp., assayed, 143 (40)
 sayen, inf., say, 19 (31)
 scace, adv., scarcely, 29 (13)
 scape, v., escape, 22 (21), 29 (29), 38 (5), 69 (10), 131 (2), 140 (3), 149 (20), etc.
 Scève: see Sève
 Schelling, F. E., 86 n.2
 Schmidt, Erich, 285 science, s., knowledge, 117 (10)
 scilla: see Scylla

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Scipio Africanus the younger, 47 (11), 106 (32) n.
 sclaunder, v., slander, 238 (25), 239 (9)
 Scot, Scots, 108 (5, 16)
 Scott, Walter, Sir, on Geraldine, 73
 scours ('skoures'), v., sails over rapidly, 150 (20) Scylla ('scilla'), 157 (14), 230 (35) season: see seisin secretayr, s., secretar, secretary, 189 (10) seed ('sede'), s., descendant, 160 (9), 192 (6) seek to, v., 208 (24), 229 (36), 254 (5) seemly ('semely'), adv., in a pleasing manner, 126 (11) seen ('sene'), inf., see, 7 (17), 203 (11)
 seg, s., segge, man, 117 (32)
 seisin ('season'), v., seize upon (Italian abbracciare, to embrace), 38 (3) Selden, John, annotations in I wrongly attributed to, 26, 36, 38, 49 seldom, adj., rare, 7 (4), 39 (9) self, adj., same, 244 (23) selleth words, v. phr., palms off false words as true, 46 (41)
 selly, sely: see silly semble, s., semblance, figure of speech, 237 (9)
 sene: see seemly
 sene: see seen
 Seneca, Lucius Annaeus, 5 f., 76, 80, 195, 242, 322, 327; poems translated from, 137, 208, 211, 297; translations of, quoted, 81, 84 f., 139, 144 f., 214, 297 f., 301 sensible, adj., perceptible, 91 (10) sentence, s., judgment, 48 (25)
 Sentleger: see St. Leger Sephanes, an astrologer, 163 sepulture, s., 27 (11), 82 (20) sequel, s., posterity, 207 (4) Serafino: see Ciminelli sere, adj., various, 240 (3) serpent, s., 253 (16) n.
 Sertini, Thommaso, poems addressed to, 216 ff.
 Sertorius, Quintus, 111 (25) n.
 service-tree, s., 249 (30)
 Sève (Scève), Maurice, 181, 209 sew, sewe: see sue Sewell, George, 58; edition by, of the miscellany, 39 ff.; on Geraldine, 72
 Seymour, Anne, Lady, 233
 Seymour, Edward, Earl of Hertford, Duke of Somerset, Lord Protector, 69, 220, 230, 240 f., 312; daughters of, the, poems addressed to, 233; miscellany poem, a, wrongly attributed to, 80 n.1, 277
 Seymour, Elizabeth, Lady, poem perhaps addressed to, 103 (2) n.
 Seymour, Jane, Lady, poem perhaps addressed to, 100 (2-18) n., 233. See Jane Seymour, Katherine, Lady, poem perhaps addressed to, 102 (31) n.
 Seymour, Katherine, Lady: see Catherine Seymour, Margaret, Lady, poems perhaps addressed to, 101 (33) n., 102 (10) n., 233
 Seymour, Thomas, Sir, Baron Seymour of Sudeley, 233 shade, s., ghost, 95 (28) shadow, v., conceal, 8 (32)
 Shakespeare, 133, 154, 244, 268, 314, 326; references by, to the miscellany, 107, 121, 285 f.
 Shakespearean sonnets in the miscellany, 103 f.; forms resembling, 188, 201
 Shakspere Society, 287
 shameful: see shamefall shamefast, adj., ashamed, 79 (30); modest, 8 (32), 193 (8) shamefastness, s., bashfulness, 32 (2); modesty, 156 (25) shameful ('shamefall'), adj., 192 (4) shape, s., beauty, 103 (31), 155 (39), 194 (4), 254 (33), 257 (28); figure, 126 (14), 150 (3), 152 (5); personality, 99 (18) shape, v., bring about, 134 (42); manage, plan, 83 (23); shape course, steer your course, 118 (12)
 Shaw, W. A., 245, 305
 Sheffield, Edmund, Baron Sheffield, possible contributor to the miscellany, 84 shell, from the, prep. phr., from one's birth, 136 (29) n.
 Shelley, 114 (39) n.
 Shelley, Edward, Chaloner on, 247
 Shelley, P. B., 210
 Shelley, Richard, servant of the deputy of Calais, 247
 Shelley, Richard, Sir, 247
 Shelley, T., captain of Boulogne, 247
 Shelton, Mary, 143

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- shend, v., be destroyed (Latin intereat), 118 (17)
- shene, adj., sheen, shining, 72 (30)
- shent, pp., destroyed, harmed, 232 (33), 235 (2)
- shield ('shild,' 'shilde'), v., prevent, forbid, 256 (18); protect, 137 (21)
- shift, s., expedient, 84 (8)
- shinand, pres. p., shining, 115 (34) n.
- shit, v., shut, 232 (6). See outshit
- shone (shun), v., 160 (6)
- shower, s., fig. for pangs, trouble, 137 (21)
- shrew, s., rascal, 189 (14)
- shright, inf., to shriek, 37 (29) (the only example in the N. E. D.); v., shrieked, 227 (33)
- shroud, s., rigging of a ship, 52 (33)
- shroud ('shrowd'), v., protect, hide, 158 (4), 163 (24), 164 (31), 252 (4); shelter oneself in, 203 (7); shrouded with shafts, (the sky) hidden by spears and darts, 115 (14)
- Sibyl ('Sibill'), the, 102 (34)
- sich, adj., such, 177 (23)
- Sicil(ian) brethren, 111 (27) n.
- sickness, s., security, 150 (28)
- sickless, adj., free from sickness, 6 (30) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- Sidney, Philip, Sir, 256; epitaphs of, 154, 156 f., 278; on Surrey, 66, 120
- sier: see sire
- sight, s., appearance, 203 (31); glances, 55 (30); seeing, eyesight, 24 (10)
- sign, s., constellation, 91 (27)
- sildam, adv., seldom, 67 (16)
- silly ('selly,' 'sely,' 'sily'), adj., hapless, unfortunate, 84 (12), 86 (7), 117 (32), 130 (30), 131 (28), 157 (20), 162 (15), 165 (2), 181 (2), 189 (18), 248 (36), 256 (16); innocent, 158 (20), 205 (8), 247 (30); insignificant, 195 (13), 232 (14)
- Simonds, W. E., 86 n.2
- simple, adj., s., guileless, 6 (5); innocent persons, 205 (22)
- sink, s., pool, 247 (32)
- Sinon, the traitorous Greek, 227 (35)
- sinonimia: see synonyma
- sire ('sier'), s., 116 (18) n.; father, 93 (35)
- Sirens ('Syrens'), the, 205 (11)
- Sisyphus, 131 (26)
- sith, sithe, sythe, conj., since, 11 (35), 14 (30), 20 (12), 53 (17), 59 (8), 60 (35), 95 (26, 31), etc.
- sits, impers. v., is fitting for, 73 (6). See sat
- Skeat, W. W., 102 n.5, 133, 296, 298
- Skelton, John, 182, 220, 305
- skilful ('skylfull'), adj., clever, 117 (9), 160 (3)
- skills not, v., doesn't concern, 18 (23)
- skoures: see scours
- slake, v., loosen, 65 (6), 106 (5)
- slay ('slea'), v., 119 (22), 130 (9), 221 (27)
- sleeps ('slepes'), s., sleep, 13 (31); sleep's sister or brother, 109 (7) n.
- sleeves ('sleues'), hang on one's, v. phr., rely for support on, 87 (18)
- slip ('slyppe'), s., cutting of a tree, 168 (30)
- slip thy truth, v. phr., violate (falsify) thy promise, 147 (33)
- slipper, adj., slippery, variable, 7 (8), 10 (6), 80 (29), 123 (7), 153 (30), 171 (4, 26)
- slough, s., skin (of a serpent), 4 (34)
- sluggard sloth, 98 (22)
- sluggardy, s., 35 (8)
- sluggish, adj., dull, 7 (26)
- sluttish, adj., 150 (29)
- sly, adj., stealthy, secret, 91 (17, 19)
- slyppe: see slip
- Sm., Th., 152
- small ('smale'), adj., 4 (35); not much, 35 (25), 189 (34)
- smart, s., 14 (15), 71 (4, 13), 94 (33), 131 (12) n., 219 (23), etc.
- Smith, G. C. Moore, 78 n., 84
- Smith, Richard, printer, 83
- smoke, s., vapor of sighs, 5 (14)
- smoky, adj., steaming (sighs), 11 (8), 167 (16) n.
- snow, v., shower down, 257 (18)
- snowwhite gem, 101 (15) n.
- soberly, adv., quietly, 182 (36)
- soberness, s., seriousness, 57 (19)
- sole, adj., solitary, celibate, 96 (19)
- solein ('solleyn'), adj., solitary, 171 (2)
- soll: see soul
- solleyn: see solein
- Solomon: see Salomon
- some ('sum,' 'summe'), pron., any, 19 (14). See all and some
- somer, sommer: see summer
- Somerset, Duchess of: see Stanhope: Duke of: see Seymour

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Somerset, Edward, wrongly supposed author of No. 200, 80 n.1, 277
- something, adv., to some degree, 70 (9), 72 (18)
- somewhat, s., something, 159 (7)
- song, soong, v., 27 (10), 62 (21, second use), 63 (18, second use), 113 (13), 243 (33)
- songen, pp., sung, 144 (4)
- sonne (sun), s., 3 (6, 32), 17 (24), 19 (32), 52 (29), 121 (16), 148 (33), 158 (37), etc.
- sonnets, discussed, 103 f.; meaning, the, of the term in the miscellany, 108; conceit, a favorite of, 242; first, the, in France, 198; neglect of, after the miscellany, 108 f.; other forms resembling, 95, 131, 159, 182 f., 188, 202, 290, 319 f.; Shakespearean, and Surrey, 70, and Wyatt, 201
- sonny (sunny), adj., 114 (23)
- soom, adj., some, 103 (21), 118 (31)
- soon, s., son, 98 (32), 99 (3), 112 (22); sun, 101 (37)
- soote ('sote'), adj., fragrant, sweet, 4 (26), 120 (10), 168 (35)
- sooth, s., 97 (2)
- sophy ('sophie'), s., wisdom, 116 (43) n.
- sore, adv., 53 (6), 89 (19) n., 98 (18), 108 (5), etc.
- sored, pp. adj., troubled, 71 (31)
- sort, s., class or kind, 85 (31) n., 98 (34), 121 (8), 128 (16), 163 (5); manner, 158 (24), 174 (36), 191 (24); nature, 73 (39), 123 (7); on such a sort, in such a manner, 130 (20); sort of brats, numerous children (Latin mille natos), 96 (13)
- sote: see soote
- Sotheby and Company, 24 f., 37 n.3, 41 n.3, 44 n.2, 50 n.2
- sothfastness, s., soothfastness, truthfulness, 185 (28)
- Souche, Souche (Zouche, Zowche), Mistress, 48 (31) n.
- soul ('soil'), s., 99 (30), 102 (6), 117 (33)
- source ('sours,' 'sourse'), s., flight, 44 (35); rising of the sun, 90 (31) (the only example in the N. E. D. is dated ca. 1400)
- souse ('sowse'), v., drench, 82 (28) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- Southerne, Thomas, 72 n.2
- sow, v., sew, 50 (37), 51 (11), 189 (26)
- sown, s., sound, 129 (12), 135 (31), 164 (26)
- sown, v., sound, 257 (3)
- sowning, s., sounding, reverberation, 193 (20)
- sowse: see souse
- Spain, 81 (25 f.), 87 (31); Wyatt's stay in, 76
- sparhauke: see sparrowhawk
- sparkling ('sparkelyng'), pres. p. adj., ?brilliant and lively, 68 (27) n.
- sparrowhawk ('sparehauke'), s., 24 (11)
- Sparta, 111 (29)
- Spartan, the, Helen of Troy, 101 (27)
- speed ('spede'), s., v., success, 13 (24); succeed, 45 (36), 82 (5)
- spence, s., expenditure, 164 (20). See thespence
- Spenser, Edmund, 107, 144, 265, 278
- Spenser Society, 315. See Kendall
- Spenserian stanza, the, suggested source for, 278, 293
- spill ('spyll'), v., destroy (Latin perdere), 75 (12), 104 (29), 117 (10)
- spleen ('splene'), s., the heart, 6 (38)
- spoil ('spoyle'), s., dead body, 194 (36) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1695)
- sporting, adj., sportive, 180 (12)
- spot, v., slander, vilify, 57 (5) (the first example in the N. E. D.), 190 (24, 32), 192 (2) n.
- spouselike, adj., conjugal, 109 (15) (apparently not in the N. E. D.)
- spoyle: see spoil
- spray, s., twig, 4 (30)
- sprete, s., sprite, spirit, 4 (10), 175, (11), etc.
- Spring, description of, a poem, 4 (23). See ver
- spring, v., grow, bud, 4 (30, 39), 5 (19), 7 (21)
- spurn against, v., kick, 185 (38)
- spyll: see spill
- stablish, v., establish, 124 (25)
- Stafford, Anne (Mrs. Henry Williams), 305
- Stafford, Edward, third Duke of Buckingham, 68
- Stafford, Elizabeth, Lady, 68
- Stafford, Henry, first Baron Stafford, 305

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- stain ('stayn'), s., personal defect, 95 (25) stain, v., surpass, 145 (12), 155 (29), 192 (26), 199 (29), 257 (17) stake, s., stack, pile of grain, 236 (15) stale, s., decoy-bird, 208 (35) stale, v., decoy, 189 (2) (the only example in the N. E. D.) stalk, v., move, walk, 39 (16), 91 (24), 203 (9), 245 (38); pursue game, 87 (22) stall, s., bench or table (in front of a shop) from which goods are sold, 89 (13) stalworth, adj., strong, 106 (31) stand, v., be fixed (in the heavens), 226 (32) stand, pp., stood, 35 (18)
 Stanhope, Anne, Countess of Hertford, Duchess of Somerset, 74, 82, 233, 312
 Stanyhurst, Richard, on Geraldine, 71, 136 star ('ster,' 'sterre'), s., 3 (31), 4 (8), 102 (3), 111 (37), 116 (18), etc.; stars, the eyes, 73 (18) n.
 start, v., escape, 71 (15), 121 (36); pass away, 180 (17); started, jumped, 207 (30)
 starts, s., movements, undertakings, 227 (37)
 Stationers' Company, the, 12, 37 n.3, 51 n.5; duplicate settings and, 13 f.; Tottel's relations with, 5 ff. See also the references under ballads
 Statilius Flaccus, 209 staunch, s., that which stops or allays, 106 (31) stay, v., cease (from writing), 100 (18); cease (to utter), 110 (37); rely upon, 245 (37); support, 89 (18); sustain, 71 (25, 30), 186 (32); stay'd, pp. adj., supported (by hope), 26 (33)
 stayer, s., supporter, 245 (27)
 stayn: see stain stealing ('stelyng') steps, 165 (26) n. steaming ('stemyng'), adj., flaming, glowing, 83 (43) n. (the first of two examples in the N. E. D.) steep ('stepe'), adj., lofty, 26 (3) steer ('stere'), s., rudder, 159 (20), 188 (29)
 steer, v., conduct oneself, 97 (19)
 Stevens, George, his collaboration with Percy (q. v.) in an edition of the miscellany, 44 ff., 57; his Shakspeare, 248
 Stella: see Devereux stellio, or chameleon, the, 288
 stelyng, stemyng: see stealing, steaming step in your foot: see foot stepe: see steep
 Stephan, an astrologer, 35 (14) n.
 ster, stere, sterre: see star, steer sterve, v., starve, die, 57 (28), 75 (31), 198 (32) stick, v., hesitate, 64 (25); remain fixed (used of the "fixed stars"), 90 (30), 91 (31) n.
 stiff, adj., bold, courageous, 96 (16, 35); stubborn, 171 (2)
 stiff, adv., boldly, courageously, 21 (12), 151 (24) stiffly ('stifely'), adv., steadfastly, 199 (17) stile ('style'), passage over a fence, 43 (17) still, adv., continuously, always, 70 (35), 77 (24), 78 (19), 79 (14), 104 (28), 151 (22), 222 (26), etc.
 stinche, s., stench, 191 (18) stint, pp., stinted, 236 (23) stir ('stirre'), s., tumult, 192 (31) stir ('stur'), v., impel, 7 (18)
 stith, s., anvil, 28 (9) stock, s., human trunk, 120 (15); tree trunk, 46 (29), (fig.) 254 (36) stole: see stool stomach ('stomake'), s., fig. for courage, 108 (6)
 stond, v., stand, 80 (29) stool ('stole'), s., 83 (43) stopped ears, i. e., ears stuffed with wax (referring to Ulysses' men and the Sirens), 205 (11) store, s., abundance, 202 (6), 245 (6); the figure of store: see synonyma storming, adj., stormy, 231 (24) (the first example in the N. E. D.) stound ('stownde'), s., position, 100 (29) (the first example in the N. E. D.); short time, 246 (3); trial, pain, 110 (32) stours ('stowrs'), s., clouds of spray, 118 (24) straight (strait), adj., 97 (2 f.)
 straight ('straight'), v., tighten, 65 (7) strained ('strayned'), pp., constrained, 120 (3), 248 (20) strake, v., struck, 61 (19)
 strawy ('strawie'), adj., consisting largely of straw, 255 (24)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- stray, s., a (loose) woman who wanders abroad, 156 (23) (the first of two examples in the N. E. D.)
- strayned: see strained
- stream ('streme'), s., beam of the sun, 148 (29); (favorable) current, 231 (7); glance of the eye, 23 (15), 73 (18) n.; tear, 209 (38) n.
- stroke, v., struck, 186 (23)
- stronds, s., strands, 95 (16), 111 (34)
- stroy ('stroied'), v., destroy, 68 (34), 83 (4), 228 (19)
- student, a, and marriage, a poem, 150 (8) n.
- studimates: see study-mates
- Studies in Philology*, 103 n.1, 112 n.3
- studious, s., 2 (14)
- Studley, John, 139, 214, 297 f., 301
- study-mates ('studimates'), s., school-fellows, 110 (2) (apparently not in the N. E. D.)
- stur: see stir
- sturdy, adj., violent, 200 (36)
- style: see stile
- subtile ('subtill'), adj., ingeniously contrived, 255 (2)
- succours, s., aid, 71 (27)
- sucred: see sugared
- sue ('sew,' 'sewe'), v., follow, 190 (27); make proposals of love to, 96 (12), 172 (31)
- Suffolk, Duke of: see Brandon
- sugared ('sucred,' 'sugred,' 'surged'), pp. adj., 81 (10), 101 (23), 167 (35), 196 (16), 257 (18)
- suit ('sute'), s., set, series, 100 (34); wooling, 134 (6), 151 (37)
- sulphur, s., gunpowder, 228 (37) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1607)
- sum, summe: see some, all and some
- summer ('somer,' 'sommer'), s., the spring, 4 (30), 7 (14)
- Sumner, Charles, his copy of K, 40
- surety, s., 84 (16) n.
- surgeant, s., surgeon, 243 (19) n.
- surged: see sugared
- surmount, v., excel, 73 (17), 93 (8), 105 (4), 202 (17)
- Surrey, Countess of: see Vere; Earl of: see Howard (Henry)
- Susanna and the Elders, 191 (34), 300
- suspect, s., suspicion, 76 (18)
- Sussex, Earl of: see Radcliffe
- susters (sisters), three, the Fates, 158 (11)
- sute: see suit
- sutteltye, s., subtlety, 188 (18)
- suttle ('suttell'), adj., subtle, crafty, cunning, 25 (5), 200 (14), 205 (15, 23); subtile, tenuous, 44 (31)
- suttly, adv., subtly, deceitfully, 205 (10)
- swage, v., take in sail (Latin contrahere vela), 244 (32)
- swanfeeder, adj., 112 (30)
- swaps, v., cuts, strikes off, 119 (40)
- swarve, v., swerve, be unfaithful in love, 167 (25), 172 (33)
- swat, v., sweated, labored hard for, 136 (25)
- sway ('swey'), s., motion, 26 (31), 90 (31); power, 86 (33); bear sway, to rule, 129 (35)
- swell, v., grow arrogant, 28 (30)
- swelting, adj., sweltering, oppressive, 57 (24) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- swete, n., sweet, sweetheart, 157 (29); v., sweat, 206 (16)
- swey: see sway
- swinelike, adj., 2 (24) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1575)
- swound, v., swoon, 252 (23)
- swowne, v., swoon, 63 (12)
- synonyma ('sinonimia'), the figure of store, example of, 137 (25-26) n.
- Syrens, the: see Sirens
- sythe: see sith
- T., G. (George Turberville, q. v.), 98 n.3
- table, s., picture, 99 (12)
- tables (indexes), the, of B and C, discussed, 15 ff.
- taccord, inf., to harmonize, 41 (32)
- taccoy, inf., to accoy, seduce, 188 (14)
- Tagus River, Spain, 81 (27) n.
- talant, s., talon, 131 (25)
- tale, brake her, v. phr., spoke, 192 (37)
- tall, adj., bold, strong, 29 (29)
- tamend, inf., to amend, 233 (43)
- tane, pp., taken, 44 (35), 60 (14), 90 (5), 110 (17), 190 (4)
- Tanner, Thomas, Bishop, his copy of A, 8, of G, 31
- Tantalus ('Tantale'), 131 (20)
- tappere, inf., to appear, 180 (27)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- taratantars, s., trumpets (the word describes their sound), 115 (13) n.
- tare, v., tore, 242 (20)
- targe, s., shield, 29 (10), 164 (31)
- taspayre, inf., to aspire, 152 (35)
- tassay, inf., to assay, 73 (7)
- tattain, inf., to attain, 72 (16)
- tauntress, s., a taunting woman, 169 (15) (the only example in the N. E. D.)
- tayed, pp., tied, 173 (19)
- Taylor, Bayard, 286
- Taylor, John, the Water-poet, 219, 314 f.
- tediousness, s., weariness, 46 (13)
- teen ('tene'), s., grief, 4 (18), 190 (15)
- tell-cause, the: see etiologia
- Tellus, earth-goddess, 103 (5)
- tembrace, inf., to embrace, 18 (30)
- temerous, adj., rash, 169 (15)
- Temis, Temms: see Thames
- tencrease, inf., to increase, 34 (29)
- tendure, inf., to endure, 198 (18)
- tene: see teen
- Terence, 221, 293, 321
- term, s., period of life, 124 (33)
- Terpsichore, 97 (15), 100 (7)
- testament, s., 248 (34) n., 249 (40)
- testy, adj., impetuous, 201 (19)
- Thalia ('Thaley'), 97 (11), 109 (23), 110 (36)
- thallured, adj., 97 (14)
- Thames ('Temis,' 'Temms'), River, London, 66 (33), 81 (29), 112 (30), 195
- than, adv., then, 12 (25), 17 (4), 49 (14), 58 (38), 67 (15), 89 (26), 126 (6, 21), 131 (5), 138 (26), 139 (17), 142 (13), 149 (4, 12), 183 (27), 185 (19), 191 (34), 192 (31), 225 (26), 227 (19), 228 (3), 252 (24), 256 (17)
- thankful, adj., pleasing, agreeable, 129 (23)
- Thapsus, battle of, 218
- that, conj., so that, 67 (34); Wyatt's over-use of, 196
- that, pron., anyone, 122 (7); he that, 146 (29), 178 (19); those, 122 (19); what, 4 (7), 6 (35), 8 (3), 20 (36), 22 (16), 51 (4), 55 (16), 63 (17), 73 (40, second use), 77 (6), etc.
- the, pron., thee, 17 (15 f., 32), 21 (10, 29, 33, 37), 25 (21), 123 (5, first use), 147 (29), 153 (37), 158 (36), 170 (30), 171 (16), 185 (34), 186 (3, 4, 10, 22), 190 (36), 191 (11), 193 (22), 212 (25), 224 (17 f.), 225 (42), 226 (2, 4, 11 f., 22), 251 (10)
- Thelwall, John, 272
- then, conj., than, 20 (16), 25 (36), 33 (25), 41 (17), 46 (4), 47 (31), 48 (35), 49 (14), 67 (20), 68 (30), etc.
- Theocritus, 223, 278
- Theodotus, 165
- there, pron., their, 224 (10)
- there as, adv., where, 252 (9).
- thereto, adv., in addition to that, 19 (34), 73 (9), 133 (7)
- therewhile, adv., meanwhile, 94 (8), 112 (31), 119 (30), 120 (14)
- Theseus, 107 (2), 123 (19), 154 (3)
- Thessaly, king of, Admetus (and his imaginary daughter), 188 (5)
- Thestylis ('Thestilis'), his complaint, a poem, 157 (18) n., answered, 180 (34)
- thews, s., virtues, 100 (17), 109 (20), 111 (8)
- thexpence, s., the expenditure, 149 (16).
See spence
- thinketh, impers. v., it seems, 25 (15)
- Thirleby, Thomas, Bishop, 86
- this, adv., thus, 172 (33)
- Thisbe, 27 (36)
- tho, adv., then, 16 (38), 79 (35), 84 (9), 141 (36)
- Thomas, poem addressed to, 26 (22) n.
- Thomson, Mrs. K. B., 74 n.1
- thone, pron., the one, 34 (32)
- Thopas ('Topas'), Sir, Chaucer's, 86 (30) n.
- thorough, thorow, prep., through, 46 (8), 63 (37)
- Thorpe, Thomas, bookseller, 10 n.2, 25 n., 28 n.1, 44 n.2
- thother, pron., the other, 90 (37, 40), 91 (2, 25), 102 (17), etc.
- thrall, s., distress, 22 (35), 245 (22); prisoner, 11 (25), 85 (24), 93 (26), etc.
- thrall, v., imprison, 139 (37)
- thrallled, pp. adj., captured, 46 (25)
- threat ('thret'), v., 78 (21), 151 (4)
- thrift, s., prosperity, success, 105 (20)
- thrifty jest, s. phr., a proper or becoming tale, 90 (3)
- throb, v., quiver with emotion, 184 (9)
- throughgirt, pp., 134 (21), 155 (23)
- throws, s., threes, 72 (42)
- thrust, v., made entrance, 136 (36)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- thrusting, pres. p., thirsting, 203 (13)
 Thylee, Ultima Thule, 212 (18)
 Thynne, William, printer, 80, 296
 Tibullus, 159
 tickle, adj., fickle, 10 (3), 170 (26)
 tickleness, s., uncertainty, 185 (30) tickling ('tikelyng'), adj., gratifying, 257 (2)
 Tilley, Arthur, 197
 Tilley, M. P., 325
 Tilney, Edmund, 324 tilt, s., tilting, tournament, 189 (18)
 timbrace, inf., to embrace, 34 (30) timely death, Italian anzi tempo da morte, 46 (17)
 Times (London) Literary Supplement, The, 110 n.2 tire ('tyre'), v., tear flesh in feeding upon it, 131 (25)
 tiring, s., food for a hawk, 256 (32)
 Titan, Apollo, the sun, 99 (33), 112 (28), 148 (29)
 Tite: see Titus
 Tite, William, Sir, his copy of B, 10 n.3, 37 n.3, 50 n.2
 Titus, alleged slayer of Pompey, 165 title-pages, Elizabethan, contemporary criticism of, 4 titles of the miscellany poems, whence derived, 98 f., 208
 Titus Caesar, 114 (34) n.
 Titus ('Tite') Quintus Fulvius: see Gisippus Tixall Poetry: see Clifford to, adv., too, 3 (38), 4 (19), 5 (10, 28), 14 (27), 20 (39), 21 (18), 25 (18), 28 (32), 46 (17), 53 (6), 58 (31, 33), 59 (6), 60 (26), 81 (5), 89 (19), 94 (14), etc. See all to to, prep., for, 27 (12); for (as), 143 (21); like, 124 (2); of, 128 (9) tofore, adv., before, previously, 241 (21) toll, v., allure, 205 (7) tone, tother, pron., 25 (14), 46 (15, 35), 90 (35), 91 (34), 92 (12), 105 (7), 234 (17) tongues, wicked, 130 (7) n., 235 (4 f.) n.
 Tonson, Jacob, printer, 45 f.
 Tony, Shepherd, 266 too, prep., to, 112 (17), 114 (19, 36), 119 (33), 152 (19)
 Tooley, Paul, 277
 Topas: see Thopas
 Topsell, Edward, 133, 313
 tornay: see tourney
 Tottel, Richard, 59, 84 n.4, et passim; life and publications of, 5 ff.; probable editor of the miscellany, 93 f., 128; a Roman Catholic, 97 n.2; title-page, his, discussed, 4, 65 f.
 Tottel's Miscellany, anonymity of the poems in, 19, theories about, 86 ff., 99; anthologies reprint from, 122 ff.; borrowings from: see Brittons, Davies, England's, Forbes, Forrest, Fullwood, Gascoigne, Gifford, Goethe, Googe, Gorgeous, Grove, Handful, Howell, influence (107 ff.), Kendall, Murray, Paradise, Petowe, Pettie, Shakespeare, Turbervile, etc.; contributors to, imitate one another, 108, sketches of, 65 ff.; copy for, the, 93 f.; dates of the poems in, 93; diction of, the, 106; editions of, doubtful Elizabethan, 36 f., eighteenth-century, (E. Curll) 37 ff., (Sewell) 39 ff., (H. Curll) 42 f., (Anderson) 43, modern, (Percy-Steevens) 44 ff., 57, (Chalmers) 47, (Nott) 47 ff., 52 f., (Sanford) 53, (Aldine) 53 f., (American Aldine) 54 f., (Bell) 55 f., (Gilfillan-Clarke) 56, (second Aldine) 57, (Collier) 57 f., (Arber) 59 ff., (Foxwell) 61 f., (Padelford) 62 ff., (Rollins) 64 f., sixteenth-century, (first) 7 f., (second, B) 9 ff., (second, C) 11 f., (third) 20 ff., (fourth) 24 ff., (fifth) 26 ff., (sixth) 29 f., (seventh) 30 ff., (eighth) 32 ff., (ninth) 34 ff.; editor of, the, discussed, 85 ff.; editorial changes in the early editions of, 88 f., 94 ff., not authorized by the MSS., 98, 160, 162, 182 f., 185, 194 f., 221, praised by Bell, 99; garlands imitating, 109; importance of, the, 4; impressions, different, of the second edition, 14; influence of, the, 107 ff.; manuscript notes in various editions of, 26, 36, 38 n.3, 100 f.; metrical and stanzaic-forms in, 102 ff.; miscellanies imitating, 108 f.; page-proof, original editions set directly into, 19; preface of, the, imitated, 4 n.; prices recently paid for copies of, 24, 27, 28 n.1, 31, 35 n.5, 37 n.3; printers of, the, 5 ff.; publication of, events contemporary with, 3; readings, unique, in the second edition

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- (B) of, 19, variant, and misprints of D*, 25 (of all other editions: see 1, 263-326); registered at Stationers' Hall, 12, 37 n.3; revisions, the, made in the second edition (B) of, 10 f., and C, 19 f.; second edition of (BC), relationship of the different impressions of the, 12 ff.; sonnets in, 103 f.; sources of the poems in: see Alamanni, Beza, Ciminelli, Filosseno, Gualterus, Haddon, Horace, Laude, Lucretius, Ovid, Petrarch, Virgil, etc.; style of, the, 101 ff.; subjects treated in, the, 104 ff.; tables of, the, discussed, 15 ff.; titles of poems in, whence derived, 98 f.; types of literature in, 103 ff.; typography of the early editions of, the, 4 ff., 290. See also ballads, censorship, music
- Touchet (Tuchet), John, Baron Audley, 280
- tourney ('tornay,' 'turney'), s., 160 (6) n., 189 (18)
- Tower, the, of London, 208 (12)
- townish, adj., living in a town, 82 (26)
- toy, s., idle fancy, 129 (33), 165 (37), 258 (7); mocking speech, 128 (9), 169 (15); trifling action, 80 (32)
- Toy, Robert, printer, 154
- trace, s., manner of life, 202 (20); path of the sea, 244 (10); practice, action, 159 (19), 189 (12); the common trace, the usual course of life, 81 (4)
- trace, v., follow, 208 (21)
- traced, pp., lured (Italian m'atrasse), 45 (29)
- tract, s., passage (of time), 165 (24)
- trade, s., course of life, 202 (6), 208 (20) n., 234 (8); habit, 159 (19)
- train ('trayn'), s., army (fig.), 54 (23) n.; follower, 170 (26); trap, deception, 5 (17), 7 (6), 52 (11), 196 (24), etc.
- train ('trayn'), v., attended by, 13 (19) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1593); deceive, 72 (5), 152 (18), 168 (24), 186 (30), 192 (35); deceive by death, 146 (36); draw, 73 (26)
- transplendent, adj., resplendent, 72 (40) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
- travail ('trauell'), s., 3 (28, 34), 4 (5), 22 (27), 28 (22), 67 (7), etc.
- travail, v., travel, 197 (7)
- tread, v., copulate, 191 (25); crush under foot, 104 (16)
- Trench, W. F., 150
- tress, s., locks of hair, 66 (22)
- tried, pp. adj., refined (gold), 81 (28)
- triedly, adv., in an experienced manner, 135 (38) (the last example in the N. E. D.)
- trill, v., spin, revolve, 255 (12) n.
- trim ('trym'), v., keep in order, 105 (32)
- Trinity College, Cambridge, its copy of C, 12 f., of H, 33
- Troilus ('Troylus'), 17 (28) n., 18 (12), 230 (29) n.; poems on, 183 (18) n.
- Trojan knight, Aeneas, 90 (17). See Trojan
- troned, pp., enthroned, 152 (35)
- troth, s., 52 (2, 10), 76 (19), 79 (8), 225 (15)
- trots, v., journeys, 88 (15)
- Troy, 12 (35), 14 (19), 17 (28), 47 (8), 65 (21), 168 (25), 179 (26), 183 (22), 202 (11), 219 (11), 227 (23 ff.), 231 (26), 246 (9), 254 (20), 257 (11). See Ilium
- Troy, New, London, 212
- Trojan, adj., s., 183 (27), 202 (22, 28), 227 (25, 38), 228 (19); Trojan boy, Paris, 179 (24). See Trojan
- Troylus: see Troilus
- trudge, v., 30 (15)
- truss, s., quiver of arrows, 77 (33)
- truss, v.: see pack
- trust, pp., trussed, 192 (24)
- try, v., find or prove by experience, 3 (22), 70 (8), 91 (37), 127 (8)
- trym: see trim
- Tudor Facsimile Texts, 221, 227
- Tullius ('Tullie'), 118 (35), 120 (18, 21). See Cicero
- tunes of, v., draws music from, 97 (23) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1701)
- Turberville, George, 45, 68, 77 n.2, 102, 108, 128, 227, 261, 287 f., 298, 313, 319 ff., 325, 330; borrowings by, from the miscellany, 110 f., 145, 149, 163 f., 167, 172, 175, 184, 187, 191, 195, 198, 202, 239, 260, 263, 278, 329. See T. (G.)
- turn the word, v. phr., 86 (10) n.
- Turner, Richard, 6
- Turner, William, 81, 315
- turney: see tourney
- turtle, s., dove, 4 (29)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Tuscany ("Tuskane"), 9 (19)
 Tusser, Thomas, 5, 115 n.
 Tuville, Daniel, 152
 tween ("twene"), prep., 18 (5), 98 (26) twine, s., thread, substance (fig. for love), 157 (33) (the first example of figurative use in the N. E. D.) twist, v., weave, 133 (6)
 Tyndar's imps, children of Tyndareus and Leda, i. e., Castor and Pollux, 111 (29) typographical errors and Tottel, 5 f., 106 tyre: see tire
 Tyrrell, Humphrey and Sir James, 242
 Tyson, Michael, 46
- Vachan: see Vychan
 vade, v., disappear, 97 (36)
 vail ("vayl"), v., be of avail, 33 (23), 44 (36), 52 (2, 10), 117 (16), 186 (20)
 Valerius Maximus, 244
 valiance, s., valor, 180 (7)
 Vallans, William, 45
 vantage, s., 21 (9)
 Van Wilder, Philip, poem perhaps on, 162 (26) n.
 vapored, pp. adj., tearful, 11 (9) n., 27 (35)
 varlet, s., rascal, 239 (22)
 vaunt, s., 208 (9)
 Vaux, Nicholas, first Baron Vaux, 283
 Vaux, Thomas, second Baron Vaux, 68, 85, 86 n.1, 308; contributions of, to the miscellany, 81, 137, 283 ff., 289; style of, 101
 vayleth: see vail
 vehemence, s., intensity, 33 (27)
 Venn, John and J. A., 75 n.3
 vent, v., detect by scent or smell, 188 (25) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1576)
 Venus, 9 (3), 86 (3), 93 (16), 95 (19, 33), 100 (21, 30), 179 (25), 186 (21), 187 (22), 192 (17), 218 (14), 231 (21, 38), 253 (25), 254 (23, 36)
 ver, s., Spring, 7 (32), 93 (5); spring blooms, 10 (36)
 verdite, s., verdict, 204 (16)
 Vere, Edward de, seventeenth Earl of Oxford, 277
 Vere, Frances de, Countess of Surrey, 69, 143, 146, 159
 Vernon, George J. W., fifth Baron Vernon, 25
- ugsome ("vgsoom"), adj., horrible, 109 (26)
 viage, s., voyage, journey through an orbit, 91 (25)
 Vida, M. G., 147
 Villey, Pierre, 198
 Villiers, George, second Duke of Buckingham, 46
 Vincent, N., poem addressed to, 96 (22) n.; supposed author of a miscellany poem, 95 (38) n.
 violenter, adv., 26 (31)
 Virgil, 106 (36) n., 77, 195, 223; Aeneid ("Eneids") of, the, cited, 244, a poem praising, 99 (6), quoted, 130, 222, Surrey's translation of, 156, 322, quoted, 5, 12, 70, 79, 88, 120 f., 172; Eclogues of, the, 223, 278, 327; Georgics of, the, quoted, 158 virtue, description of, a poem, 104 (7) n.
 Ulysses, 201 (36) n., 202 (2, 8, 15, 25), 219 (7, 9), 230 (25, 31). See Penelope
 "uncertain authors," the, editorial changes in the works of, 96; identification of certain of, 80 ff.; meaning of the term, 79 f.; metrical and stanzaic forms of, 104; poems by, 121 (2)-205 (24), 217 (2)-259 (5), order of the, 10 f.
 unclothed, v. i., shed its leaves, 16 (15) (the first example in the N. E. D.) uncorrupt, adj., 91 (6)
 uncouth ("vnkouth"), adj., unfamiliar, strange, 118 (32) undisoomfite, pp. adj., undiscomfited, 102 (21)
 undiscree, adj., 73 (34)
 uneath ("vnethe," "vnnethes"), adv., in difficult circumstances, 224 (34); scarcely, 19 (13), 135 (23), 203 (18), 247 (5) vnegall, adj., unequal, 6 (9) unfold, v., release sheep from the fold, 16 (17) unframe, v. i., be destroyed (die), 250 (16)
 unhap, s., 70 (36), 133 (34), 170 (24)
 unhides, v., reveals, 180 (14) unkempt, pp., uncombed, 133 (29) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1742) unkouth: see uncouth unlade, v., unload, 163 (28), 205 (4) n.
 unmeasurable, adj., immense, vast, 68 (6); immoderate, 105 (11)
 unmeet, adj., unsuitable, 105 (10)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- unmoveable, adj., 68 (17)
 unneath, unneth, unnethes: see uneath unnocht, pp. adj., untrimmed, 152 (2) (the only example in the N. E. D.) unparfited, pp., unperfected, 28 (17) unperfit, adj., imperfect, 37 (25) unpiteous, adj., pitiless, 68 (20) unplaced, pp., displaced, 123 (34) unpossessed ('vnpossest'), v., dispossessed, 81 (23) (the last of two examples in the N. E. D.) impossible, adj., 66 (25)
 unquit, pp., unrequited, 63 (3) (the last example in the N. E. D.) unright, s., injustice, 203 (4, 28) unsaciate, adj., insatiate, 69 (27) unsitting, adj., unbecoming, 240 (27)
 unsparred, pp., unbarred, opened, 213 (7) unspot, v., clean, 191 (30) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1598) unstable, adj., unsteady, infirm, 37 (13) unthank, s., blame (for), 194 (21) (the last example in the N. E. D.) unthirled, pp. adj., unpierced, 102 (21) untied, pp. adv., freed from restraint, 138 (32) unwarely, adv., unexpectedly, 63 (33)
 unweaponed, pp. adj., unarmed, 220 (17) unwilling ('vnwyld'), pp. adj., unwilling, 131 (4) unwist, pp., unknown, 7 (28) void, adj., useless, 139 (3) void, v., disappear, 97 (36) vouchsafe, v., deign to accept, 203 (23) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1589) uprist, v., arose, 203 (13) uproars ('vp rores'), s., 240 (10)
 upsupped, pp., drunk, 13 (40) Urania, 97 (21)
 ure, s., use, practise, 14 (39), 24 (20), 42 (8), 98 (12), 100 (16), 159 (7), 188 (32), 219 (29)
 Uriah, the Hittite captain, 27 (18)
 use, s., custom, 3 (29)
 use, v., be accustomed to, 105 (17), 226 (21); habitually indulge in, make a practise of, 21 (6), 67 (28), 156 (24), 224 (6)
 uttrest, adj., most distant, 101 (36)
 Vulcan, 80 (2)
 Vychan (Vachan), Simwnt, 151
 W.: see Wyatt
 W., A., epitaph on, 109 (14) n.
 W., T.: see Wyatt
 wade, v., move, 136 (15)
 Wagner, B. M., 44 n.2
 wainscot ('weinscot'), s., 195 (12)
 waist ('waste'), s., 100 (33), 204 (9) wake the night, v. phr., remain awake at night, 209 (24)
 waker, adj., watchful, 35 (22)
 waky, adj., wakeful, 46 (23) (the first of two examples in the N. E. D.) Waldron, F. G., 41
 walketh, v., wakes, keeps watch, 203 (10)
 Walley, Robert, printer, 6
 Walpole, Horace, Earl of Orford, 36 n.4, 46; his copy of *D, 25 f., of K, 40; manuscript notes in *D by, 100 f.; on Geraldine, 73; on Wyatt and Surrey, 122; revision by, of a miscellany poem, 189
 Walsh, Robert, 53
 wanhope, s., despair, 57 (21)
 wanton, adj., lustful, 80 (32), 156 (21), 230 (33), 232 (5); playful, sportive, 13 (34), 30 (12), 159 (24), 166 (22)
 wantonness, s., Arrogance, 192 (37) war, Audley's treatise on, 278 f.
 warble, s., manner of warbling, 7 (25) (the first example in the N. E. D.) Ward, B. M., 98 n.3, 180, 280, 324 ware, v., be wary of, 89 (38) wareful, adj., cautious, 244 (22) warely, adv., cautiously, 244 (11)
 warer, adv., more cunningly, 188 (30) wark, s., work, 165 (14), 166 (14) warm, s., warmth, 3 (12), 10 (35); feel warm, feel oneself in love, 195 (37)
 Warner, poem beginning, 150
 Warner, William, borrowing by, from the miscellany, 124 (8 ff.) n.
 Warton, Thomas, 32, 39, 73, 81, 262, 265, 271, 283 waste: see waist
 wastefull will, s. phr., 59 (22) n.
 wat: see wot
 watch, s., wakefulness, 131 (35) watered, pp. adj., tearful, 70 (6)
 Watson, Thomas, 130, 138, 168, 310, 328 f.
 wax, waxen, v., grow, 16 (3), 133 (24), 158 (38), 175 (2), 181 (20), 231 (24), 252 (29), 254 (33), 255 (18)
 waye: see weigh

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- wayfull, adj., woeful, 108 (21), 113 (21)
 Wayland, John, printer, 150
 wayters, s., waters, 108 (21) weal ('weall'), s., prosperity, 185 (31)
 wealeaway: see wellaway wealfully, adv., happily, 102 (28) wealth ('welth'), s., joy, weal, 16 (7), 35 (29), 39 (8), 48 (17), 73 (6), 83 (22), 86 (22), 211 (22), etc.
 wearing weed, s. phr., garment, 191 (13)
 weather ('wether'), s., storms (Latin procellae), 244 (11)
 Webbe, William, 120
 Webster, John, 154
 wed, 112 (19) n.; to wed, as a pledge, 170 (19)
 weed, s., garment, 97 (27), 104 (9), 191 (13); garment of the sky, 93 (6) ween ('wene,' 'wen'), v., think, 32 (34), 37 (7), 43 (19), 101 (28), 206 (34)
 weet ('wete'), v., know, 195 (37), 207 (34)
 Weever, John, 68, 292
 weigh ('waye,' 'weye'), v., ponder, 185 (8), 244 (35); weigh anchor, sail from a port, 251 (24)
 weinscot: see wainscot welkin, s., 120 (3)
 well, adv., very, 66 (8)
 wellaway ('welaway,' 'wealeaway'), interj., 83 (5, 41), 130 (18), 134 (34), 142 (5), 223 (22); well away with, may, may tolerate or endure, 143 (39) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1569)
 Wellesley College library, its copy of E, 28
 Wellesley, Henry, 210, 230
 wells, s., the eyes, 209 (38) n.
 well-worthy ('welworthy'), adj., worthy in a high degree, 35 (34) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1597) Welsh, an epigram of Martial in, 151 welth: see wealth
 wen, wene: see ween
 Wentworth, Anne, Lady (daughter of Humphrey Tyrrell), 242
 Wentworth, Anne, Lady (daughter of Sir James Tyrrell), 109 (14) n.
 Wentworth, Anne, Lady (née Wentworth, of Gosfield), 245
 Wentworth, John, Sir, of Gosfield, 245, 286
 Wentworth, Mary, Lady (daughter of Sir John Wentworth), 166 (36) n., 243
 Wentworth, Richard, Sir, 242
 Wentworth, Robert, Sir, 242
 Wentworth, Roger, Sir, 242
 Wentworth, Thomas, first Baron Wentworth, 242
 Wentworth, Thomas, second Baron Wentworth, 286
 wenyng: see ween were, v., wear, 167 (37), 193 (5)
 wete: see weet
 wether, wethered: see weather, withered whall, s., wall, 149 (13)
 whan, adv., when, 8 (6), 19 (17), 21 (35), 151 (26), 186 (32), etc. what so, pron., 77 (9), 117 (5), 137 (26), 149 (40)
 Wheatley, H. B., 122 n.9, 265, 283, 286 whelm, v., overturn, 149 (13); overwhelm (cut down with swords), 13 (15); whelmed with, smothered by, 99 (34) whelp, s., 6 (41) n.
 where, conj., whether, 18 (37), 129 (20)
 whereas, adv., where, 8 (35), 9 (3), 11 (15), 27 (34), 112 (29), 122 (18), 158 (22), 163 (8), 164 (25), 188 (23), 208 (13) where so, adv., 11 (25), 65 (11), 85 (23), 87 (23), 89 (18) whereto, conj., on which, 70 (32) whet, pp. adj., whetted, 164 (29)
 whether, pron., which of the two, 213 (9) Whetstone, George, 154, 190, 328; imitation by, of the miscellany, 111 which, pron., that which, what, 166 (27), 197 (4) whiles, adv., sometimes, 100 (10) whilom, adv., 52 (23)
 whisking, pres. p. adj., briskly blowing, 151 (13)
 whisted, pp. adj., silent, hushed, 48 (26) (the first example in the N. E. D.)
 Whiston, William, 213
 White, Mistress, poem on, 145 (10) n.
 White, W. A., his copy of B, 10 n.3
 Whitney, Geoffrey, 120, 265 whole ('hole,' 'holl,' 'holle'), adj., 8 (13), 21 (27), 97 (20), 98 (36), 116 (23), 117 (31), 118 (40), 122 (16), 227 (31), 246 (24) wholly ('holly'), adv., 64 (22), 96 (11)
 whote, adj., hot, 6 (8) whusht, pp., hushed, 192 (34) (the first example in the N. E. D.) Wiat: see Wyatt widowish, adj., 219 (18) (the first example in the N. E. D. is dated 1567)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- wiefly: see wifely wife, choosing a, a poem on, 195 (20) wifelihead ('wiuelyhed'), s., wifely quality, 194 (27) (the first example in the N.E.D.) wifely ('wiefly'), adj., womanly, 193 (16)
 wight, s., 7 (28), 97 (34), 114 (28, 43), 116 (31), 117 (4), etc.
 Wilford, James, Sir, epitaphs on, 108 (2, 18, 22) n., 135 (20) n., 146 (31) n.; Churchyard and, 84
 will, v., desire, wish, 96 (26), 152 (21)
 Willcock, Gladys D., 79 n.2, 87 f.
 Williams, Francis, 305
 Williams, Henry, epitaph on, 199 (4) n.
 Williams, John, first Baron Williams of Thame, 199 (28), 305
Willis's Current Notes, 262
 Willmott, R. A., 133
Willobie's Avisa, 313, 325
 willow, to wear a wreath of, i. e., in sign of disappointed love, 133 (39)
 Wilton, Jack, Nashe's hero, Surrey, and, Geraldine, 71 wind, take my, v. phr., walk in the open air, 122 (19)
 Windet, John, printer, 6 f.
 Windsor Castle, 9 (30) n., 10 (33) n., 12 (29, 33) wines, v., winds, steers, 150 (25)
 wink, v., sleep, 203 (19) Wintermantel, Egon, 105 n.1
 wist, v., knew, known, 88 (32), 208 (28), 209 (3), 232 (39) wit, s., judgment, 84 (35); wisdom, 24 (7), 28 (16), etc.
 wite, v., blame, 24 (3)
 with, prep., on behalf of, 96 (23)
 withered ('wethered'), pp. adj., 197 (35)
 withsaue, v., vouchsafe, 249 (24) n. (This is the only example in the Century Dictionary; the N.E.D. has only two examples — both from Wyatt — but see the note on 249 [24].)
Wit's A. B. C., 230
Wit's Recreations, 271
 wivelyhead: see wifelihead wo worth, interj., 16 (28, 30), 48 (20), 154 (8)
 woe, v., woo, 189 (21)
 wold, wolden, v., would, 117 (38), 167 (3) Wolsey, Cardinal, 78
 womanhood, womanhead, s., 47 (18), 194 (25)
 womanish, adj., effeminate, 29 (14) womb, s., stomach, 93 (29) n.
 wombed, pp., hidden as in a womb, 228 (22) (the first example in the N.E.D.) won ('wonne'), v., dwelt, 96 (21), 244 (13).
See woon wonders, wondersly, adv., wondrously, 18 (3), 62 (3), 84 (8), 101 (8), 114 (5)
 Wood, Anthony, 36 n.5, 50, 72, 119 wood, adj., crazy, 178 (25); ferocious, 256 (19)
 woodness, s., violence, fury, 122 (13)
 Woodville, Elizabeth: see Elizabeth Woodward, Richard, 277
 woon, v., dwelt (see won), 94 (27), 223 (5); won, 117 (40), 152 (18), 218 (16)
 worrier: see worrier wordly, adj., worldly, 136 (13) work, v., cause, bring about, 224 (26); toss, roll, 10 (20), 240 (3) working, pp., living, conducting oneself, 97 (31, 35) worms, s., serpents, 191 (15) n.
 worn, adj., experienced in (Latin exercitus), 118 (21) (this meaning is not given in the N.E.D.) worn, pp., past, spent, 4 (37) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1611) worrier ('woorrier'), s., an animal that "worries" or bites his victims, 189 (8) worth, s., ?property, possession, 221 (5) (the first example in the N.E.D. is dated 1592; Nott explains the meaning as family, brood); take in worth, bear patiently, 23 (21) worth, v., befall, 16 (28, 30), 48 (20)
 wot ('wote,' 'wat'), v., know, 6 (25), 43 (2), 49 (36), 64 (16), 65 (2), 77 (8), 105 (8), 129 (38), 146 (10), etc.
 would you (or ye) wist, I, i. e., I wish you knew, 208 (28), 209 (3) wrack ('wrake'), s., 155 (15), 179 (26), 245 (4) wrapped within my cloak, 85 (25) n. wrasteth, v., wresteth, gives a new turn to, 25 (29)
 wraths, s., 73 (32)
 wreak ('wreke'), s., injury, 37 (21)
 wreathed ('wrethed'), pp. adj., intertwined, 38 (27) wreck, v., wreak, revenge, 50 (21)

GLOSSARIAL INDEX

- Wright, Thomas, 79 n.4, 257, 284, 290, 302, 328
 Wright, W. A., 13
 wring, v., torment, 10 (21)
 writhe, v., turn, 76 (6)
 wry, v., turn aside, 161 (22); all to wry, twist aside, misinterpret, 56 (15) n.
 Wyatt, John, 75
 Wyatt, Henry, Sir, 76, 242
 Wyatt, Thomas, Sir, the elder (Wiat, W., T. W.), allusions to, 119 ff.; anagram of, in various poems, 143, 323; autobiography in the poems of, examples of, 35 (11 f.) n., 35 (14) n., 35 (30) n., 44 (30) n., 52 (16) n., 52 (30 ff.) n., 66 (6) n., 69 (11) n., 69 (33) n., 70 (32) n., 76 (15) n., 80 (10) n., 81 (16) n., 81 (26) n., 218 f.; Betham on, 156; editions of: see Tottel's; epitaph on the sister of, 108 (32) n.; the Haringtons and, 90 f., 150; imitated by Surrey, 3 (23) n., 13 (41) n., 23 (23 ff.) n., 25 (38) n., 28 (8) n., 172, 313, by an "uncertain author," 248 (16) n.; life and works of, 75 ff., 85; meters used by, 102 f.; name of, omitted from the title-page, reasons for, 65 f.; named elsewhere in the miscellany, 2 (9), 27 (6, 12, 22), 28 (3) n., 31 (7) n., 45 (2), 80 (10), 92 (13), 206 (29), 207 (5), 211 (3), 218 (22 f., 30); poems by, 32 (2)—92 (12), 211 (4)—213 (33), in the second and other editions, order of, 8, 10 f., manuscript sources of, 96, editorial treatment of, 94 ff., omitted by the "editor," 92 n.2, titles of, whence derived, 99, unique copies of, in the miscellany, 62 n.1, 95; poems in honor of, 66; poems wrongly attributed to, 310; Psalms of, the, 27 (4) n., 76, 90, 95, 156; reputation of, inferior to Surrey's, 66; sonnet-forms of, 103; style of, the, 101 ff.; subjects used by, the, 104 f.
 Wyatt, Thomas, Sir, the younger, 65 f., 69, 75, 97, 219, 238, 322
 Wyndham, George, 244, 273
 Wyse, John, 296
 yclad, pp., 104 (9)
 yclept ('ycleaped'), pp., called, named, 111 (35) n.
 ycoupled, pp., mated, 7 (33) n.
 ycut, pp., 115 (31)
 yea ('ye'), adv., 210 (33)
 year ('yere'), plural s., 91 (13, 25) yede, v., went, 152 (15)
 yeeld: see yield
 yelden, pp., pp. adj., yolden, submissive, 60 (29, 33), 126 (27), 173 (35)
 Yelverton, Christopher, Sir, a possible contributor to the miscellany, 84 f.
 Yeowell, James, edition by, of Wyatt and Surrey, 57
 yere: see year
 Yetsweirt, Charles, printer, 7
 yeven, pp., given, 114 (19) yfere, adv., together, 133 (5) yfiled, pp., 33 (5)
 yfound, pp., 254 (22)
 ygranted, pp., granted, 132 (4) ygrave, pp., engraved, 160 (19)
 yie(n): see eyen yield ('yeeld'), v., bearing, 109 (18); give forth, sing, 107 (33) ylswading: see ill-suading ymp: see imp
 Yonge, Bartholomew, 259
 yore ago, adv., long ago, 41 (15)
 Yorkshire Archaeological and Topographical Journal, The, 68 n.2
 Young, Owen D., his copy of G, 31 younger pace ('yoonger pase'), with, adv. phr., with quicker movement, 91 (24) youth, plural s., young men, 13 (19) youthlike, youthly, adj., youthful, 45 (38), 114 (9), 165 (35), 243 (28)
 yrkesome: see irksome yseen ('ysene'), pp., 84 (4) yspread, pp., 10 (36)
 yspun ('ysponne'), pp., 135 (23)
 ytasted, pp., 45 (27)
 yuery, yuorie: see ivory ywis, ywys: see iwis
 ywrought, pp., 7 (24)
 Zephirus ('Zepharus'), 153 (21)
 Zeuxis, 287
 Zoroas, poem on, 115 (8) n.
 Zouch, Thomas, 156
 Zouche, Zowche: see Souch

PR
1205 T6
vol.2

TOTTEL, RICHARD
TOTTEL'S MISCELLANY (1557-1587).

[illegible]

THE LIBRARY
COLBY JUNIOR COLLEGE
NEWTON, MASS.

COLBY-SAWYER COLLEGE LIBRARY
NEW LONDON, NH

3 3469 00004 1234